INSURGENTS DRIVEN BACK IN FIGHT FOR MADRID ROAD

ATTACK ON ARGANDA BY AIR BEATEN OFF

Fascists Blast Part of Hospital, 3 Killed, 25 Hurt; Defenders Move for Unified Government Command.

By the Associated Press.

NEAR ARGANDA ON THE VALENCIA HIGHWAY FRONT, Feb. 13.—Troops marshalled by the Spanish government drove insurgents back tonight with a fierce assault on entrenchments in heights dominating the vital Madrid-Valencia highway.

An almost ceaseless battle has been under way here for three days, during which the roar of air raiders, the thunder of artillery and the rattle of machine guns have given the hilly, olive-growing countryside little rest. Arganda is 15 miles southeast of Madrid.

Repeated insurgent raids have never provided a position that could be held here on the road proper, but from a bluff about 200 yards away the insurgent forces continued to sweep the pavement with machineguns and rifles. From an observation post a quarter of a mile west of Arganda shells from the government artillery could be seen bursting near the enemy positions. The guns roared constantly.

Attack From the Air.

Suddenly six tri-motored bombing planes, escorted by 14 pursuit ships, appeared from behind a barrier of cliffs and observers took cover under olive trees. As the ships sped overhead, an officer shouted, "They are going to bomb Arganda! Keep a sharp eye out. Ours will soon be here, too!"

After a few moments explosions could be heard from the direction of Arganda. Then the insurgent squadron swung around and headed back toward the bluffs. But before it could get away 15 Government planes started an aerial attack on the invaders. Escorting ships doubled back to give combat. The air battle lasted a half hour. One insurgent plane crashed, and another, chased by two Government ships, made off for the other side of Arganda. While still in view, it fell under machine gun fire from pursuers. Another ship drew a thick line of smoke across the sky and the fleet disappeared back of bluffs.

Three miles from town, in a field, was the twisted and burned wreck of an insurgent plane. Its pilot had been blown to pieces. An old peasant woman, picking up unfired machine gun bullets from the wreckage, held them out, crying, "Take these and use them to kill Fascistas!"

Pounding at Bridge.

Insurgent gun batteries also continued to pound at the Arganda bridge over the Jarama River.

So long as this situation continues, the road in this sector can not be used for traffic although approaches to Madrid over detours still remain.

Arganda, where the Colonel commanding this sector has his headquarters, is clogged with troops going and coming to and from the fields of battle. The Colonel declared he had plenty of troops, tanks and field guns at his disposal. "In the last three days we have pushed the enemy back steadily," he said, indicating the expanse of fields rolling away to the west. "No, they have not taken the Arganda bridge. I do not think they will take it, even though they have 10,000 more men than we."

Government Planes Beat Off Attack on Arganda.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Feb. 13.—Insurgent planes today bombed Arganda, 15 miles southeast of Madrid, blasting the main ward of a hospital, Government commanders reported, and killing three persons. Twenty-five persons were injured.

All patients had been removed from the hospital before two bombs struck it.

Government pursuit ships beat off the attackers, and two Fascist ships were shot down, officers said.

The attack on Arganda, a stra-

COL. AND MRS. LINDBERGH FLY TO ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT

Upset Police by Wiring They Are Bound for Cairo, Then Going to Coast Instead.

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 13.—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh flew to Alexandria today from Mersa Matrouh, a fishing village in the Western Egyptian desert.

They caused some consternation among Cairo police by sending word, "We are coming; don't inform the press," and then flying instead to Alexandria. Two hundred Cairo policemen waited vainly at the Almaza airdrome here until they were informed the American flyers had landed in the coastal city.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has aplied for permission to fly over Iran (Persia) and may extend the tour he and Mrs. Lindbergh are making as far as India, an authoritative source said today. Officials of the Iranian Consulate here said they had forwarded the application to Teheran but did not know the Iranian Government's decision concerning it. The reply will be communicated to Col. Lindbergh at Cairo, Egypt, they said.

SHRILL WHISTLE INVENTED TO ABATE SMOKE NUISANCE

Piercing Sound Precipitates Solid Matter in Flakes; May Be Used in Chimneys.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—H. W. St. Clair, Bureau of Mines engineer, demonstrated today to scientists a shrill whistle which precipitates smoke in snow-like flakes. The recently-perfected invention, if installed in a chimney, would eliminate its belching clouds of dirt and soot.

The device generated sound waves at a frequency of about 7000 cycles per second, which were audible as a piercing whistle. The apparatus was in a large glass cylinder filled with ammonium chloride smoke. Within a half minute the smoke had coagulated into flakes and had begun to drop to the bottom of the cylinder.

An immediate application of the device, according to R. S. Dean of the Bureau of Mines, will be in the chimneys as smelters for precipitation of fine particles of gold and other metals from smoke. He added that it could be used equally well on the elimination of tobacco smoke or smoke from factories or furnaces.

FREIGHTER MISSING, 41 ABOARD

Japanese Ship Thought to Have Foundered in Blizzard.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 14.—(Sunday)—The Japanese freighter Odaru Maru, with a crew of 41, today was feared to have foundered after being caught in a blizzard last night off the Pacific Coast of Aomori Prefecture.

The freighter Heiraku Maru which answered distress calls from the Odaru Maru, failed to find any trace of the vessel or its crew. The Odaru Maru was a 1461-ton freighter.

FIRST VOTE FRAUD TRIALS TOMORROW IN KANSAS CITY

60 WITNESSES ARE SUBPENAED

Federal Grand Jury Indicts 19 More Bringing Total So Far Under Charges to 75.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 13.—United States District Attorney Maurice M. Milligan said tonight the Government was ready to bring to trial Monday the first group among 75 persons thus far indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of fraud in the general election here Nov. 3.

District Judge Merrill E. Otis said "the cases will be called for trial as scheduled" but did not indicate which of three groups would be first to face a jury to be selected from 70 veniremen called from outside Jackson County.

Defense attorneys were defeated in effort at delay by both Federal District and Circuit Courts this week.

All of the 20 defendants to face trial on the charges of "falsely conspiring to injure and oppress voters who were legally qualified to vote by miscounting the votes for presidential electors in violation of civil rights" are from the Twelfth Ward. Trials are scheduled for seven persons from the thirteenth precinct, seven from the seventeenth precinct and six from the fifteenth precinct, but only one of these groups will go to trial at a time.

The names of 60 witnesses subpenaed yesterday have been kept secret.

Also scheduled for Monday are arraignments of 19 more election officials and party workers named in simila rindictments returned by the grand jury today. Judge Albert L. Reeves dismissed the grand jurors until Monday after the indictments were reported.

Indicted today were eight persons from the Twenty-second Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, six from the Twenty-fourth Precinct of the Ninth Ward, and five from the Eighth Precinct of the Eleventh Ward.

GERMAN DEMAND FOR RETURN OF COLONIES MEETS REBUFF

Viscount Halifax Said to Have Offered Economic Aid Under League, However.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—A diplomatic source said tonight Nazi Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop was rebuffed when he presented Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's demand for return of Germany's war-lost colonies to Viscount Halifax, Lord Privy Seal, in London, Thursday.

Viscount Halifax, acting in the absence of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who is on a vacation, told the Ambassador the colonies could not be returned nor could His Majesty's Government recognize Der Fuehrer's dramatic verbal withdrawal of Germany's signature to the Versailles treaty, the source said.

However, the British Government is quite willing to extend economic aid to Germany within the framework of the League of Nations, it was said, and Germany's return to the Geneva body was urged by Viscount Halifax.

300 WOMEN AND CHILDREN DIE IN MANCHOUKUO MOVIE FIRE

Tokio Paper Says Japanese Troops Saved Many Lives at Antung on Yalu River.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 13.—The newspaper Asahi reported today more than 300 women and children died in a moving picture theater fire in Antung, Manchoukuo.

Japanese troops were called out, the paper said, and saved many lives.

Antung is on the Yalu River, about seven miles above its mouth in the Bay of Korea.

The paper reported the theater was filled to its capacity of 1500 with a holiday crowd when fire broke out behind the stage. The audience rushed in panic for the doors, Asahi said. Most of the men, the paper added, forced their way out of the building before it collapsed but women and children were trapped.

SUIT BY DUMMIES HAS TIED UP GRAND JURY TWO WEEKS

Inquisitors Unable to Take Up Memorial Bond Frauds Till Joynt Gives Ruling.

HE AGAIN DEFERS DECISION ON PLEA

Requires Time, He Says, to Study Recently Handed Down Opinion of State Supreme Court.

The grand jury, instructed by Circuit Judge John W. Joynt to investigate the $7,500,000 riverfront bond issue election, will meet Wednesday, two weeks after it asked Judge Joynt for a subpena for production of the ballot boxes indispensable to its inquiry. It has been kept from beginning the investigation by the motion filed, on behalf of five dummy plaintiffs, in the extraordinary and unprecedented attempt to prevent any inquiry into revealed frauds in the bond election.

Judge Joynt yesterday, for the second time, deferred a ruling on the motion, saying he wished to study the Missouri Supreme Court's decision, rendered in December, in a civil injunction suit relating to a bond issue election in Jackson County.

Processes of the Court.

As has been pointed out, Judge Joynt, when he first entertained the motion a week ago Thursday, was in the position of restraining himself. He could have gone ahead with issuance of the subpena for the ballot boxes, as requested by the grand jury, and could have left it to the objectors to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition against him.

He first set last Wednesday as the time for ruling on the motion. Wednesday, he laid the matter over in order to consult with Judges Frank C. O'Malley and J. Wesley McAfee, of the other criminal divisions of Circuit Court. After a conference with them Friday, he said he expected to make his ruling yesterday. But yesterday he said he wished to study the Supreme Court decision in the Jackson County case, and set no new time for a ruling.

But for the preventive motion, and the delay in ruling on it, the grand jury might now be in the second week of its inquiry into the wholesale frauds committed in the riverfront bond election, Sept. 10, 1935. After this week, only six more weeks of its term will remain.

Circuit Attorney's Position.

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller, when he set the grand jury's meeting for 2 p. m. Wednesday, expected a ruling yesterday, and said that, if the ruling favored the State, there would be time for the lawyers backing the motion to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition. In the absence of such a writ, he hoped the grand jury could start the inquiry Wednesday. "We will then have lost two weeks," he remarked.

It has not been learned whether the grand jury will further question George Whitelaw, chief dummy plaintiff in the case, who was before the body for an hour and 20 minutes Friday evening. Whitelaw, as told in Thursday's Post-Dispatch admitted to Post-Dispatch reporters that he had allowed himself to be used as plaintiff in the motion to keep ballot-box evidence from the grand jury; that the suit was not instituted in good faith, and that he had no personal interest in it, but expected to receive about $2000.

The Four Other Dummies.

The four other plaintiffs had not pretended to be anything but dummies, having admitted from the start that they obligingly agreed to sign their name to the motion, paying no fee and hiring no lawyer.

Whitelaw, however, represented at first that the motion was his idea, and that he engaged William J. Hough, chief counsel, and paid him a $250 fee. His motive, he said, at first, was to guard the secrecy of the ballot. He signed as a voter of the first precinct, the others from the second to fifth precincts inclusive, of State Senator Mike Kinney's Fifth Ward, where the bond issue carried by the lop-sided vote of 5015 to 127 and where, in one precinct, fraud has been established. He lives at the St. Francis Hotel, Sixth and Chestnut streets, where Kinney has his voting residence and political headquarters.

BROKERS HELD LIABLE IN FAILURE OF BANK

Should Have Known President Was Speculating With Funds, Court Rules.

By the Associated Press.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Feb. 13.—A State Supreme Court decision today held that a brokerage company was responsible for losses to depositors in a bank failure because the company should have known the bank president was speculating with bank funds.

William R. White, State Superintendent of Banking, said he did not think the decision would establish a precedent.

"This is an unusual case and cannot be regarded as a precedent for action in connection with other bank failures," White explained in New York City.

The J. S. Bache Co., New York brokerage house, was ordered to reimburse depositors in the State Bank of Binghamton for losses totaling $626,281.36.

Judge's Ruling.

Supreme Court Justice Ely W. Personius of Elmira held that the company should have known that Andrew J. Horvatt, convicted president of the bank, had used bank funds to finance stock market speculations through the Bache company.

White said the case was the only one of its kind in New York and that there were few elsewhere. General conditions rather than speculations by bank officials caused the collapse of other banks which failed during the depression, he said.

Horvatt is serving 12 to 18 years in Auburn State Prison on charges that he systematically looted the bank. He was brought back from prison to testify in the action instituted by the bank to recover from the brokerage firm the amount of his speculations.

Disappeared in 1930.

The Banking Department took over the State Bank of Binghamton shortly after Horvatt disappeared Dec. 15, 1930. An investigation disclosed shortages estimated at $2,500,000.

A grand jury returned 65 indictments against Horvatt and three others: His brother, Michael J. Horvatt, assistant cashier; Joseph E. Hidock, another assistant cashier, and Joseph Polosky, clerk.

The two Horvatts and Polosky pleaded guilty of grand larceny and falsification of accounts and were sentenced to prison, as was Hidock after conviction of similar charges by a jury.

The State Bank of Binghamton then sued the partners in the Bache company to recover $1,125,000 in losses alleged to have resulted from Andrew Horvatt's speculations.

RACKETS PROSECUTOR DEWEY TRICKS SPY IN HIS OFFICE

Gives False Information to Policeman Who Passes It On to Suspects.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb 13. — Special Rackets Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey disclosed today a police officer acting as informer to suspects in the alleged $2,000,000-a-year restaurant shakedown ring had been supplied deliberately with false information by the Dewey office.

The existence of such a spy was testified to yesterday by Max Engler, operator of several cafeterias and a hotel, during the trial of eight accused restaurant racketeers. Engler said one of the eight defendants, Attorney Abraham Cohen, had asserted he had "somebody" surreptitiously getting information from Dewey's office.

The prosecutor said today a report on the conduct of the officer was placed in the hands of the police commissioner.

BARGAIN PURCHASE DISCLOSES THEFT OF 100 RARE BOOKS

Buyer Calls Library After Obtaining Five Volumes and Robberies Are Traced.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 13.—When a shopkeeper here told a customer he could have five dusty, frayed, old books for $1.15, the customer quickly bought the books.

One was a first edition of John Drinkwater, another was a first of Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Little Foxes," presented by Mrs. Stowe to Oliver Wendell Holmes and bearing Holmes' bookplate.

But the customer got to wondering and finally telephoned the Newark Public Library.

Today a special investigator disclosed the theft of 100 rare volumes, valued at $1000 or more, from libraries in New Jersey, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and New York. Ninety-four of the books were recovered. The shoopkeeper who bought the volumes at auction has resold six which authorities expect to recover.

KIDNAPING CASE WITNESS HANGS HIMSELF IN CELL

Christopher Miller, Held in Connection With Albany (N. Y.) Abduction in 1933, Ends Life.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Christopher Miller, a material witness in the O'Connell kidnaping case, hanged himself in the Albany county jail late today.

Miller, 41 years old, of Hoboken, N. J., had been in jail for about three weeks. Henry S. Kahn, assistant District Attorney, said he had been linked with the abduction in 1933 of John J. O'Connell Jr., member of the politically prominent Albany family.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 13.—John J. O'Connell Jr. of Albany, N. Y., identified a man held here as Francis L. Oley as one of the men who kidnaped him for $40,000 ransom, District Attorney John A. Carroll announced tonight. The Albany prosecutor, John R. Delaney, and his investigator, James L. Hynes, corroborated the identification. Oley's wife, Genevieve, was identified by Delaney and Hynes as a former Albany nurse. She was then asked if she wouldn't admit her identity. She smiled and refused to speak.

LONDON TO SPEND $500,000 TO MUFFLE SUBWAY NOISE

500 Miles of Track to Be Welded and Imperfections Removed From Rails.

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Feb. 13.—A new item in London's anti-noise campaign is $500,000 to muffle the underground railways this summer. The project includes welding nearly 500 miles of trackage and other work.

Rails 90 feet long—twice as long as those in service—will be used and dents and imperfections will be removed. These operations are expected to reduce the noise by 60 per cent.

Another 20 per cent will be deadened, it is expected, by use of a shield which will jut from the sides of the tunnels almost touching the footplates of the trains.

BALDWIN SLATED TO BE EARL

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—When Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin retires—which he is expected to do shortly after the coronation of King George VI in May—he will be rewarded with a Earldom for his services to the nation, The Sunday Referee said tonight.

The newspaper said it had this information "on the highest authority." It said he probably would take the title Earl of Bewdley, that being his seat in Worcestershire.

ROAD BLOCKADED AFTER UNION FIGHT AT ANDERSON, IND.

National Guardsmen and State Police Turn Back 300 Persons Bent on Seeing 'Square Deal.'

By the Associated Press.

ANDERSON, Ind., Feb. 13.—National Guardsmen maintained order in Anderson tonight, following an early morning skirmish, in which shots were fired and stones hurled, between union and nonunion automotive workers.

Troops patrolled the streets. Other guardsmen and State police established highway blockades to hold back union members and sympathizers, most of them from Michigan, who sought to bolster union forces within this General Motors accessory center.

Late in the day State motorcycle police escorted the Michigan cars back to the State line and gave them a free fill-up of gasoline for the homeward trip.

At least 10 men were wounded in the morning outbreak, which left the south side tavern in which it started in ruins and brought an order from Gov. M. Clifford Townsend placing all of Madison County under military patrol.

General Motors Corporation's two units here, the Delco-Remy and the Guide Lamp factories, observed their usual Saturday holiday. There were no demonstrations around them.

Union Sympathizers.

Nearly 50 automobiles, bearing Michigan license plates and carrying 300 persons described by Lieut. Walter Metzner of the State Police as union sympathizers, were turned back today as they neared Alexandria, 11 miles north of Anderson and scene of a headquarters of the United Automobile Workers of America.

Gov. Townsend said at Indianapolis he had instructed guard officers and State police to intercept any union sympathizers en route to Anderson and let them know "they are not needed." "If their purpose," he said, "is the maintenance of peace and order, that purpose has been met by the State of Indiana."

Occupants of the long line of halted cars wore armbands and badges of the United Automobile Workers. Many of them were women. Asked why they were en route to Anderson, their reply, in nearly every case, was, "to see that the union gets a square deal."

National Guard planes droned over the line of automobiles during tho day to keep State police advised, by radio, of the situation.

Norman Thomas Expected.

Union leaders announced plans for a meeting. Military and police authorities made no comment. The Governor's proclamation forbids all assemblages. Victor Reuther, union organizer, said he expected Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, to arrive by tomorrow to look over the situation.

Lieut. Graydon N. Harrison led guardsmen in a raid on the union headquarters at Alexandria and reported confiscation of three shotguns, two rifles and ammunition.

Reuther called the military parole a "signal victory" for the union, adding: "It is regrettable that men had to be shot before the State recognized conditions weren't as peaceful as the Mayor had said they were." Mayor Harry R. Baldwin said police protection had been afforded the unionists ever since the

WHEELER AND GLASS OPPOSED TO COURT PLAN

Virginian Denounces Roosevelt Proposal as 'Frightful' and Says He Will Speak Against It on Senate Floor.

PROGRESSIVE BLOC SPLIT OVER ISSUE

La Follette Defends Scheme in Radio Address — 30 Senators For, 28 Against and 38 Non-committal Thus Far.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13. — Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Senator Wheeler (Dem.), Montana, took opposite sides tonight on President Roosevelt's proposed reorganization of the courts.

La Follette championed enlargement of the Supreme Court as "the only way in which the popular will may be translated into effective action."

Wheeler, who ran for Vice-President with La Follette's father in 1924, denounced the proposal as "a mere stopgap" establishing a "dangerous precedent." He urged instead a constitutional amendment giving Congress power to regulate hours, wages and working conditions.

"Frightful," Glass Declares.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia in his first statement on the President's proposals said:

"I am going to speak in the Senate, to say that I am utterly opposed to it. I think it is a frightful proposal, unprecedented since the founding of the Government. I don't mean to say it hasn't been suggested before to increase the number of Judges, but just exactly this proposal is unprecedented since the foundation of the Government."

The Democratic party in Senate and House has been split, as has, to a much less extent, the Republican minority. On a basis of spoken viewpoints, the Senate lineup tonight was 30 for the plan and 28 against, with 38 still uncommitted publicly.

White House Conferences.

President Roosevelt continued today his practice of calling small groups of Senators to the White House for a personal explanation of the program. He talked today with Senators Van Nuys of Indiana and Burke of Nebraska, opponents of the plan, who remained unconvinced; with Senator Harrison, Mississippi, who later declared himself for the idea for the first time, and Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, already committed to it, and Senator King of Utah, an opponent of the proposal, who said afterward there was a possibility of a "reasonable compromise." The day also brought suggestions from some Democratic leaders in Congress that voluntary Supreme Court retirements might ease the present situation. They expressed hope privately for early enactment of the bill which the House has already passed to permit the retirement of Supreme Court Justices on full pay at 70 years of age.

Wheeler's Stand.

Senator Wheeler criticised some Supreme Court decisions but added:

"But to give to the Executive the power to control the judiciary is not giving the law-making power back to that branch of the Government to which it rightfully belongs," Wheeler said, "but rather is increasing the dangers inherent in the concentration of power in any one branch of the Government.

"If this administration can increase the Supreme Court to make it subservient to its wishes, another Harding administration can do the same thing."

"The Supreme Court, in my judgment, was wrong in the child labor decision. It was wrong in the New York minimum wage case. It has been wrong in many other cases.

"Under a proper interpretation of the Constitution the courts would hold that Congress has power to regulate wages, hours and working conditions and failure on the part of the courts to do so should impel us to ask for a constitutional amendment, and with the backing of the President of the United States I think it could be promptly obtained."

Senator Bailey (Dem.), North Carolina, who previously had announced himself opposed to the

3000 AT FLINT FISHER FACTORY RETURN TO WORK

750 OF TROOPS LEAVE FOR HOME

Chevrolet and Buick Plants Reopen Tomorrow—Full Operations Expected by End of Week.

By the Associated Press.

FLINT, Mich., Feb. 13. — Three thousand automobile workers today returned to their jobs in the Fisher body plant No. 1 where the roar of machines marked the real end of the six weeks' General Motors strike.

These workers, idle since Dec. 30, when the plant was closed by a stay-in strike, where the first of 100,000 who will go back to work by Tuesday in the corporation's plants.

A few hours after the day shift of 1500 punched the time clock at the Fisher plant, National Guard officers started demobilization of the 3300 troops on duty in the strike zone.

A cavalry regiment and a field artillery regiment, totaling about 750 men, left for their homes during the morning by trains and motor lorries. The other troops will leave Flint some time next week, Col. Joseph H. Lewis said.

Many Wear Union Buttons.

The return to work began at 7 a. m. with many of the workmen wearing union buttons displayed prominently on their overalls. Before the strike, wearing of the union insignia in the plant was forbidden.

Only the south unit of the plant resumed operations today. In the north unit, where the stay-in took place, maintenance men were busy tearing down makeshift barricades put up by the strikers and preparing the plant for work by the middle of the week. The Fisher No. 2 plant, which also was occupied by strikers, will be ready to open Tuesday.

With the exception of the final assembly line, the Buick plant will be reopened Monday with 12,500 persons returning to their jobs. The Chevrolet plant also will resume operations Monday. By the end of the week, General Motors officials said, virtually all of the 43,000 persons employed in Flint by the corporation will be back at work.

Return to Work Elsewhere.

In other cities about 40,000 Chevrolet workers in six cities have been ordered to report for work Monday. Oldsmobile at Lansing, Mich., will step up its force from 3000 to 8000. Cadillac will open at Detroit Monday on a restricted basis.

General Motors officers have estimated a production of from 225,000 to 250,000 cars and trucks during March and possibly during the following two or three months until they catch up with the heavy backlog of orders on hand.

In Detroit leaders of the United Workers of America and General Motors executives prepared for conferences schedueld to open there Tuesday to negotiate problems not settled in Thursday's agreement.

Gov. Frank Murphy, who directed the nine-day conference which brought an agreement between the corporation and the union, was at New York to receive a gold medal from the American-Irish Historical Society for "eminent public service."

One Strike Goes On.

One strike in Flint, however, is not over. Seventy men completed the forty-sixth day of their sitdown strike in the Standard Cotton Products plant today.

The management of the company, which supplies seat padding to the Fisher Body plants here, insists that it cannot meet the strikers' demands for a minimum wage of 50 cents an hour in view of its contracts with General Motors. The present minimum is 30 cents.

The strikers are members of the United Automobile Workers. Addressing a mass meeting in front of the plant Friday, Norman Thomas, Socialist party leader, referred to them as "the forgotten men who are the real heroes of this labor war."

Union Comment on Clash.

Robert C. Travis, union organizer in Flint, said of the labor disorders at Anderson, Ind., today that he could not account for the presence of Flint workers at the scene of the trouble and denied that union officers at Flint had issued any "marching orders."

Travis alleged General Motors had "induced the civil authorities to withhold protection from our people."

"It is plain," he said, that Gov. Clifford Townsend of Indiana is responsible for this shedding of blood of union men. Victor Reuther, an organizer, had a conference with the Governor Friday afternoon and asked for protection for those carrying on the lawful activities of the union.

"The Governor's failure to act raises the question whether he is a Governor of all the people, like Governor Murphy, or another General Motors executive of a State, like some Governors in the past,"

Knudsen Gives Permission for Wearing of Buttons.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 13.—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, said today he had received a letter from William S. Knudsen, executive vice-president of General Motors Corporation, asserting there would be no objection to union men wearing their buttons in General Motors factories.

Martin also said he had received assurances from an officer of the Ford Motor Co. that there would be no discrimination against men wearing union buttons in the plants of that concern.

INSURGENTS DRIVEN BACK IN FIGHTING FOR MADRID ROAD

tegic point on the Valencia-Madrid highway, was part of a general attempt to sever all of Madrid's communication lines.

Almeria, on the southern Mediterranean coast, 64 miles east and south of Granada, underwent a similar attack last night. Many persons were reported killed and several houses wrecked by bombs.

Refugees from Almeria, who arrived at Monte Toro on a Government ship, said they were attacked at sea by insurgent bombers. One bomb struck and damaged the prow of the ship.

Mass expulsion of families sympathetic to the Socialist Government from insurgent-held areas in the Biscay region of Northern Spain, was reported in a dispatch from Bayonne, France. The report said 300 persons, mostly women and children, were forced to cross on foot a no-man's-land between the opposing forces.

Unification of Defense.

Decision to create a single unified command of all Government forces in Spain appeared imminent tonight. A committee from the defense junta, in command of the forces holding Madrid, was en route to Valencia to request establishment of obligatory military service for all able-bodied males between the ages of 20 and 45. Informed sources declared the Valencia Government probably would decree such conscription as well as unification of all defense armies.

A London announcement by the Spanish Embassy said the forces of the autonomous State of Catalonia likely would be included in the united armies.

Fascists Claim to Have Tightened Ring About Capital.

WITH FASCIST FORCES SOUTHEAST OF MADRID, Feb. 13.—Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Fascist insurgents today tightened the ring which they have been drawing around the city.

The objective is complete blocking of highways through which Madrid draws supplies.

But one segment of the circle apparently remains open for communications between Madrid and the Eastern Mediterranean seaboard. This provides only for a circuitous detour from the Madrid-Valencia highway through Alcala de Henares, 20 miles east of the city, on a Northeastern route to Guadalajara.

Today's maneuver, carried out by air attack and a push by land under fire of Socialist Government artillery, sheared a nine-mile section out of a secondary road connecting a main highway from Albacete to the Madrid-Valencia highway.

Five Ranches Seized.

Twenty-six armored cars failed to halt the insurgents. They seized five ranches east of the Jarama River in the disputed Valencia road territory and consolidated positions at the Arganda bridge, which form a barricade to incoming supplies or outgoing refugees on the regular Valencia route. The Fascists apparently were preparing for an assault on the village of Arganda, east of the bridge.

Diversion of food supply trucks to tortuous detours rendered them more vulnerable to attack. Fascists said 14 trucks Madrid-bound from Valencia were blocked yesterday, seven of them wrecked and the others forced to turn back.

(Madrid officials asserted the attackers were successfully resisted. They claimed capture of a strategic hill in defense of the Valencia road and of two tanks in defeating an attack on Arganda.)

first demonstration several weeks ago.

"The police twice have performed heroic service," the Mayor added, "in rescuing these agitators from the results of their own conduct, and on both occasions they have turned on their benefactors. Their every act has been with studied purpose to arouse resentment in the community."

The Morning's Clash.

None of those wounded in this morning's clash was in a dangerous condition. Only four remained long in a hospital, the others having fled at the approach of police cars.

Emory Shipley, proprietor of the tavern where the trouble started, said "two car loads of men" drove up and demanded that Evon Robertson, a non-unionist who, police said, recently engaged in an altercation with a union worker, come outside.

Shooting started, Shipley said, after he answered that Robertson was not present. Shipley told police he fired a shotgun to drive the crowd away. He was not held. The crowd was gone and the tavern a wreck when police arrived.

Union and non-union employes of the Anderson Automotive plants have been engaged in a feud ever since union workers at the Guide Lamp factory joined the "sit-down" strikes against General Motors last December.

Union leaders have made frequent protests to Federal and State officials complaining of their treatment by the Anderson Mayor and police chief. Secretary Perkins sent an investigator of the Labor Department here several days ago when unionists complained some of their members had been beaten by Anderson policemen. United States District Attorney Val Nolan conducted an independent investigation of allegations that strike breakers had been imported into the state.

CLOTHING MAKERS AND UNION AGREE ON NEW WAGE SCALE

140,000 Workers Affected Directly and 60,000 Others Indirectly; No Details Given.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—After a five-hour conference representatives of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and of the clothing manufacturers announced today they had reached an agreement affecting 140,000 men employes having contractual relations with their employes, and 60,000 more who are not at present under agreements.

The conference was the first at which manufacturers for all American clothing markets had joined in negotiations with the union. The Amalgamated had asked a 15 per cent horizontal wage increase, and attempted to arrange a uniform date, May 1, for the expiration of contracts in all markets. A spokesman for the manufacturers said the minimum rate under prevailing wage scales was slightly more than 70 cents an hour in New York and 40 cents elsewhere.

LEWIS DECLARES CAPITAL'S UNITED FRONT IS BROKEN

"Crouching Lion of Labor" About to Start Steel Campaign but He Does Not Anticipate Strike.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 13. — John L. Lewis declared tonight that the General Motors strike settlement broke "the united front of capital" and predicted victory for his Committee for Industrial Organization when it presents it demands to the steel industry.

Asked at a press conference if he thought strikes would be necessary in the steel plants, he said:

"I abhor strikes. I hope that the steel industry will approach the problem rationally. I don't anticipate a strike."

Of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor Lewis said: "I look on him a good deal like an elderly lady with a wooden leg."

Asked if he believed the A. F. of L. craft unions would seek representation in future auto-labor conferences, Lewis said: "We don't know of any membership the craft unions have in the motor industry. So far they have no more to do with it than Haile Selassie. He may have a few nationals in the industry, just like Green, but why discuss Ethiopians."

The chief of the C. I. O. is recovering rapidly from influenza, which sent him to bed during the last stages of the General Motors strike settlement negotiations this week. He said he would leave for Washington Sunday to plan his campaign in the steel industry, and to work on renewal of United Mine Workers' contracts with operators.

"Crouching Lion of Labor."

He likened the steel campaign to "the crouching lion of the labor movement."

Asserting that the A. F. of L. had been "pecking away" at the automobile industry for several years, Lewis declared that it remained for the mass-production United Automobile Workers of America to organize effectively.

"Collective bargaining has definitely come to the automobile industry," he said. "After 24 years, General Motors, for the first time, has agreed to bargain with a responsible labor organization. The union in the automobile industry has a membership of 200,000, conservatively speaking, and within a few months will have double that number.

"Seven weeks ago, General Motors would not deal with or recognize any union and publicly proclaimed that it would not in the future. Now it has entered into an eminently satisfactory contract with a responsible union.

Compares U. S. Steel to G. M.

"General Motors occupies the same relationship to the automobile industry that United States Steel does in the steel industry. Each produces about 40 per cent of the total output in its field.

"The General Motors policy sets the pace for the industry and we expect other companies to fall rapidly into line. There will not be undue haste about this procedure and the union will proceed in a logical manner."

Asked when he expected formal demands to be made on the Ford Motor Co., and the Chrysler Corporation, Lewis said:

"I have no definite announcement to make on that score at present, but we will have them bargaining by next Christmas. Mr. Henry Ford and all his millions does not daunt us. He is just another citizen with a lot of money."

GLASS AND WHEELER COME OUT AGAINST ROOSEVELT PROPOSAL

President's plan, said tonight in a radio speech that the President's proposal "predicates a new version of the Constitution."

He said the effect of the plan was to notify each of the six members of the court over 70 years of age "that if he remains on the bench another judge will be appointed to offset his presence, because of alleged infirmity of age."

Bailey said only the fact of age supported the President's suggestion, adding that "the Supreme Court is up with its work, is capable, is vigorous; and it is guarding the Constitution with a vigor and a courage worthy of all the great traditions of its noble history."

"If the court has offended, the offense is that it has in a trying time maintained the interpretation of the Constitution which the people have received from their court and approved in every period of their history," he declared.

Suggests Amendment.

Bailey said the President "quite plainly" had made known a desire for general laws "asserting the Federal power over activities heretofore throughout our history confined to state regulation, laws like the NRA, which the entire court held to be unconstitutional." He added:

"And quite as clearly he seeks a Supreme Court which will hold such laws to be constitutional, notwithstanding all the precedents to the contrary."

He said that if the President or Congress ought to have more power "let an amendment to the Constitution be submitted to the people."

"Let us never seek to reconstruct a court to suit our wills," he declared. "We may impeach upon proper grounds, but we cannot reconstruct a court."

Defense by La Follette.

La Follette said in his radio address: "The same forces which opposed the President in November are opposing him now." He went on to say:

"As in the Legislative battles upon New Deal legislation in past sessions of Congress, Democratic reactionaries will be relied upon to lead the fight. But the same basic issue is at stake. It is raised because the President and the Congress are determined to carry out the mandate of the November election and to restore the Constitution to the people and to prevent the further abuse of judicial power . . .

"The idea of an unchecked supremacy of the Supreme Court has been built up over the last 40 years. It has been built up by corporation lawyers of the Liberty League ilk who have tried in the court to counteract the reforms, like popular election of Senators, which are designed to make the will of the people the law of the land. It has been indoctrinated in our schools and in our thinking with the same conscious direction as the propaganda of the public utilities."

Mandate of November.

He contended the one clear way the people could have their will of last November expressed was for Congress to "unpack" a court which "has long been 'packed' by the forces of reaction."

"A Congress which fails to 'unpack' the court is allowing the economic royalists to rule this country with a court 'packed' against the people," he declared.

To supplement the President's proposals, La Follette called for a constitutional amendment giving Congress power to override a decision of the court declaring any act of Congress unconstitutional.

A meeting of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is handling the legislation, was postponed from Monday to Feb. 22, when a subcommittee to which the retirement bill was referred will be ready to report.

While opponents of the plan have claimed enough votes in the committee to split the President's general proposal into two separate bills, with accruing strategic advantages, Chairman Ashurst (Dem.), Arizona, said the postponement was ordered simply because no subcommittees were ready to report and there was no work for the committee to do.

Comment by Lewis.

Senator Lewis (Dem.), Illinois, commenting on opposition charges that the President is trying to "pack" the Court, said:

"It is forgotten that the President does not name the Supreme Court. It is named by the Senate. Cleveland named three men the Senate turned down. The Senate rejected one of President Hoover's nominations.

"Packing the court is an impossibility. The Senate would never allow such and the President would not undertake such. I can't believe he would be so unwise."

C. P. TAFT DEFENDS 'CONSCIENTIOUS' COURT

Thinks President Seeks Power to Threaten Judges Who Differ With Him.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSON, Mich., Feb. 13.—Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati attorney, and son of the late former President William Howard Taft, told Republicans at a Lincoln Club banquet tonight that if President Roosevelt is not satisfied with the United States Supreme Court, he has "the same remedy that you and I have, a constitutional amendment."

Warning the Republican party against a reactionary attitude, Taft said that "calamity howlers didn't register in the last election and they won't on this (court issue.)"

He defined the party's problem as "to find a way to unify its efforts" and "to make itself a conservative party in the best sense, a party which seeks to conserve our resources—our resources of forests and of water and of soil, our human resources of energy and of pioneer spirit and of moral values."

Eight Vacancies Unfilled.

Of the President's proposals for improvement of Federal Court procedure and the retirement of Judges, Taft said, "the President says there are not enough Judges, and yet there are eight vacancies on the Federal bench which he has neglected to fill, some of them for more than a year. He now wants quick constitutional decisions, something which is very desirable, but for three years the New Deal, I suppose under his direction, tried to prevent any constitutional decision at all."

Terming the Supreme bench "the promptest, most efficient and most conscientious court of last resort in the world," the Ohioan said that "this court he condemns . . . has expressed unanimously a far more liberal view on strikes and picketing than your own Supreme Court of Michigan, and has almost alone among American courts sustained the majority rule as the basis of union recognition."

"The problem," he said, "is the problem of decisions of the court with which the President does not agree. . . . One can understand how he feels. I have been annoyed every now and then by the Supreme Court of Ohio. . . .

Power to Threaten Judge.

"Nevertheless I certainly do not favor a proposal, the actual effect of which is to give the President power to threaten any Judge who disagrees with him with a public charge of old age and incompetency. That is exactly what the President is asking for. . . . That kind of a power over Judges should not be placed in the hands of the President."

The Republican party's machinery for making a national attack on the proposal was described by Taft as "utterly inadequate."

Urging that the party find a way of consulting on national issues and of working out a "sound national policy," Taft continued:

"If that method is well worked out, its very operation will carry weight and conviction with Republicans and with the ones who voted for Roosevelt last fall and are now uncrossing their fingers. And they are enough to make our efforts for good government successful."

KELVINATOR FORCED TO OPEN TEMPORARY OFFICE IN STRIKE

Stay-In Group Occupy Regular Quarters; Guards in One Plant Get Food at Last.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 13.—The Mechanics' Educational Society of America withdrew its picket line from one plant of the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation this afternoon and food was sent inside the plant to a dozen company guards for the first time since Friday. The union had considered the advisability of "starving out" the guards.

A stay-in strike has been in progress in the main Kelvinator plant since Feb. 2. The strike spread subsequently to two other plants but they are not occupied by strikers.

Negotiators, who began conferences yesterday, reported today that they were making progress.

The company established temporary offices today, from which pay checks were issued for salaried workers and traveling representatives. The stay-in strikers extended their occupation to the administrative offices this week.

C. ARTHUR ANDERSON AGAINST COURT PLAN

Congressman Joins Senator Clark in Opposition to Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Representative C. Arthur Anderson of St. Louis County, said in a statement today he is "determined to concur in the opinion of my esteemed colleague," Senator Bennett Champ Clark, and oppose President Roosevelt's court plan.

Clark announced last night he was "in complete and total disagreement" with the proposal.

Anderson is the first Democratic Congressman from Missouri to announce definite opposition to the plan.

"To increase the number of 'judges on the bench at this time in the face of certain pending litigation bearing the label of the 'New Deal' is to substantially alter our form of government for the purpose of considering a certain type of litigation," Anderson said. "Therein lies a possible destruction of an untrammeled and independent judiciary that we all must admit has been the bulwark of our democracy and the pride of a free people.

"If it is the will of the people, and I believe it is not, that this radical change be made in the highest court of the nation the proposition should be submitted to them in the form of a constitutional amendment. Congress alone should not decide this question for it is one that rests with the whole people as a personal heritage of Americanism."

Anderson said he regarded Mr. Roosevelt as "the greatest of all presidents," but believed it his duty "to oppose him in the determination of a great and vital question." He said, however, he favored permitting judges to retire voluntarily at 70 on full pay.

WOMAN GOLFER'S HUSBAND LOSES APPEAL ON SENTENCE

Florida Supreme Court Upholds Contempt Conviction of John D. Crews.

By the Associated Press.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Feb. 13.—John D. Crews, husband of Maureen Orcutt Crews, the golfer, lost an appeal to the State Supreme Court today from a sentence of 120 days in jail for contempt of a Miami court.

The Supreme Court affirmed Crews' conviction on a charge that he said he could bribe Circuit Judge Worth W. Trammell of Miami.

It was said Crews was now in California. Lawyers said extradition could not be carried through on a contempt charge because such an offense was not a felony.

Crews was charged in Dade County Circuit Court with telling Mrs. Olive Wofford that by paying $2400 he could influence the decision of Judge Trammell in litigation in which Mrs. Wofford and her husband were interested.

STARK'S ECONOMY IDEAS PUT ASIDE BY LEGISLATORS

Patronage Seekers Shun Proposal to Unite All of Revenue Collecting Activities.

IT WOULD REDUCE EXPENSE AND JOBS

Governor's Business-like Methods, However, Do Not Appeal to Politicians Seeking Favors.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 13. — The power of entrenched political patronage has blocked at the outset, Gov. Stark's economy plan for consolidation of revenue collecting activities of the State into one department. The Governor proposed the creation of a State revenue department for collecting the major taxes which will amount to more than $50,000,000 a year.

Though the Governor refuses to say that he has abandoned his plan, he has taken no definite steps to present it to the Legislature, and even if it were submitted at this late time it would have little chance of passage in view of the political barrage which would be laid down against it.

The issue on which it has been quietly squelched is purely one of patronage, whether the State Auditor and the State Treasurer would retain appointive power over some 200 State employes, or whether it would be transferred to the Governor. The question of economies which might be effected is purely a collateral issue as it almost invariably is in any plan which involves loss of political patronage.

What Study Showed.

Studying the State government in the preparation of his inaugural message, the Governor, a business man accustomed to studies looking to a reduction in costs of operating his big nursery business, found that $17,500,000 in income and sales taxes were being collected by the State Auditor, that $1,500,000 in inheritances were being collected by the State Treasurer, more than $11,000,000 in gasoline taxes by the oil department and $5,000,000 in liquor taxes by the liquor department. The expected doubling of the State sales tax will add more than $12,000,000 a year to these revenues.

It appeared to him that a more business-like method would be to have one collection department, and that thereby the aggregate number of employes required by these separate departments in this service would be materially reduced. So he recommended the reform in his inaugural message.

Being more of a business man than a politician and having no training in the wiles and subtle strategy to be met when effort is made to change the existing order, the Governor adopted an executive policy which was not designed to compete with the practicalities he encountered.

Basis of Stark's Policy.

This policy was that the constitution divides the Government into three branches, executive, legislative and judicial and that it is not the province of one to invade the field of the others. It was his duty to suggest to the Legislature, but not to go beyond using his powers of moral persuasion.

With this was his policy of postponing action on appointments until his legislative program was out of the way.

Members of the Legislature demand a voice in filling the jobs, and they are disinclined to go along with a governor in a legislative program and then take their chances of being given recognition on the job end of the game. They prefer to pay for favors extended rather than to extend favors in the hope of future reward.

That is the practical situation in which the Governor is beginning to find himself, and, though it is illustrative of the sordid condition of state government which is very common, it is the situation.

Held in Abeyance.

Unwilling, apparently, to play the game along those lines, the Governor did not find any pronounced enthusiasm for his revenue department proposal, which would reduce jobs instead of create them, and reduce expenditures rather than increase them. So his plan has been held in abeyance, something to be taken up a little later.

When asked a day or two ago, whether he had dropped the idea, the Governor replied that he had not and that he only a day or so before had had a conference with several advisers about it. But there most decidedly is no push about it now, and the probabilities are that it will not even reach the Legislature officially.

Influence of Officials.

The practical difficulties of carrying out the economy program lie in the fact that each of the State officers from whom patronage would be taken, have very extensive influence among members of the Legislature, and the nearly 200 employes who feel secure in their jobs now but would be uncertain what the future might hold for them if their jobs should be transferred to another department, have influence they can bring to bear influence on a good many members.

State Auditor Forrest Smith does not want to surrender the patronage which he now has, nor does State Treasurer Winn. Secretary of State Brown, though not affected by the immediate proposal, can see that the beginning of such consolidations might eventually lead to his loss of the huge patronage in the collection of automobile license fees.

Oil Inspector Cherry and Liquor Supervisor Becker were not in position to object publicly as they are appointees under the executive and probably are hopeful of retaining their positions, under Gov. Stark.

It cannot be said that any of these officials has waged an open campaign against the Governor's proposal. In the absence of vigorous demand for that from the executive, no organized opposition was necessary to block it, the realization of the strength of the opposition which could be organized overnight being sufficient.

ELIHU ROOT LEAVES $200,000 TO COLLEGE

Bulk of Estate Goes to Three Children — Value Not Stated.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. — The bulk of the estate of Elihu Root, international lawyer and statesman, was left to his three children, Edith Root Grant, Edward Wales Root and Elihu Root Jr., his will filed today showed.

To the trustees of Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., he left $200,000 for the endowment fund, and to the trustees of Beta chapter of Sigma Phi society at Hamilton College he left $5000 for the endowment fund. The Kirkland (N. Y.) Town Library Association, the Presbyterian Stone Church, Clinton, N. Y., the Oneida Historical Society, and Mt. Vernon Presbyterian Church, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., also received specific bequests.

The will left his daughter, Edith Root Grant, the wife of Col. Ulysses S. Grant III, and her heirs property at Kirkland, N. Y., "long occupied by my wife and myself as a summer home."

To his son, Edward Wales Root, and heirs, he left land west of the summer home, and to the other son, Elihu Root Jr., and heirs, other land on the same highway which the summer home bordered.

The will left $100,000 in trust to the executors, the income to be used to maintain "Wild Garden," left to Mr. Root by his parents.

EX-CONVICT ARRESTED, ADMITS COUNTERFEITING

Molds for Making Quarters, Dimes and Nickels Surrendered to Police.

Roy Mitchell, 42-year-old former convict, arrested last night by police investigating complaints of merchants that counterfeit coins were being circulated, surrendered molds and made a statement in which he said he had made and passed about $12 in spurious coins within the last two weeks.

Mitchell was arrested at his home, 317 Clark avenue, and led police to an ash pit in the rear where the molds for nickels, dimes and quarters were hidden. He and two other men, arrested for investigation after counterfeit coins were found in their possession, were held for Federal authorities.

Also known as Robert Owens, Mitchell was sentenced to a 10-year penitentiary term for robbery at Kansas City in 1920.

TAXI DRIVER CAUGHT AFTER CAB KILLS MAN

Hershel Allen, 60, Knocked Down in E. St. Louis; Charles Pittman Flees From Scene.

Charles Pittman, Negro driver of an unlicensed, uninsured 10-cent taxicab, yesterday afternoon signed a statement admitting he drove away after his cab struck and killed Hershel Allen, a National Stockyards employe at St. Clair avenue and First street, East St. Louis, at 6:30 in the morning.

"I saw a man running across the street," the statement said. 'When he was 20 feet from my car, I blew my horn. He did not stop, and I saw I was about to strike him, so I swerved my car to the left. But he ran into the right side of my car.

"A passenger, Clarence McCloud, said, 'Charles, you better stop, because you hit that man,' but I said, 'Oh, I didn't hurt him,' and drove on to Armour & Co."

After discharging McCloud and his other two passengers, all Negroes, at the packing plant, Pittman declared he drove back to the scene of the accident, but saw nothing of the man, and although he heard an ambulance, concluded the man was not hurt. He went about his business, and was arrested an hour and a half later while on his way to his home, 2121 Gaty avenue. McCloud had told Armour officials about what happened, and they had sent him to police.

Although the right front and the top of Pittman's cab over the windshield were dented, Pittman at first insisted the dents were caused by an accident a week before, and denied his car struck Allen. But when confronted by McCloud, he signed the statement. Pittman carried neither the wheel tax license or the minimum $2500 insurance prescribed by ordinance for cabs.

Allen, his chest crushed, was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Mary's Hospital. He was 60 years old, resided at 810 St. Clair avenue, and worked for 42 years at the stockyards where he was employed as a foreman for the St. Louis Horse and Mule Commission Co. His daughter, Mrs. Myrtle Horn, killed herself and her 10-year-old daughter, Shirley, with gas at their home in East St. Louis last April.

Pittman was released on $2000 bond after being booked on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

AUTO WORKERS HOLD VICTORY MASS MEETING

Vice-President Edward Hall of Union Tells Them to Take Advantage of Lewis' Achievement.

"Go back to work and take advantage of what John L. Lewis gave you," advised Edward Hall, vice-president of the United Automobile Workers of America, in an address yesterday afternoon at the Municipal Auditorium before an audience of 1200 automobile workers and their families.

It was announced at the meeting that union automobile workers would return to work at the local General Motors plant tomorrow on advice of their counsel that they would not be in contempt of the temporary restraining order issued during the strike, since they had been asked to return by the company.

Hall, a former Milwaukee automobile worker, substituting for Homer Martin, union president, who was unable to make a scheduled trip to St. Louis, talked for an hour and had his listeners applauding frequently by his rough treatment of General Motors executives and other individuals prominent in the strike.

The speaker referred to Alfred P. Sloan Jr., head of General Motors, as "old horse-face, who wouldn't deal with the union." William S. Knudsen, executive vice-president, was "a nice old guy who says 'No, No, No,' and gets kicked in the shins by his million-dollar lawyer if he says 'Yes.'" George E. Boysen, head of the Flint Alliance, who opposed the strike, was "that goof" in the language of the speaker.

Liberties Over Property Rights.

"Civil liberties prevailed over property rights," Hall told the automobile workers. "Now show the world that you appreciate the liberty bestowed on you by taking advantage of the situation." Remarking that the agreement permitted individual discussion of union matters in General Motors plants and that workers would be allowed to display union buttons Hall shouted, "Oh, boy!"

"Our agreement with General Motors is truly a historic document," he declared. Remarking that the agreement was for six months, the union officer added: "What a beautiful time that brings us to, just before they start production on the new model. And I think the corporation has learned that they won't build automobiles in the future unless they sign a better agreement."

Referring to the term "labor dictators," used in General Motors statements dealing with the strike, Hall asserted that: "Labor dictators, if they want to call us that, can't call strikes unless the workers have a real grievance, and you fellows had many grievances."

Hall launched an attack on the Flint Alliance, which he termed "a vigilante outfit that advertised it was going to shoot." And then the company looked on the sit-down strikers as bad boys, who had done a terrible thing to take charge of General Motors property. Why those sit-down boys would have been crazy to walk outside and get shot.

"$7 a Second to du Ponts."

Taking up the question of General Motors dividends, the speaker asserted that the du Pont family had been paid $7 a second on its General Motors' stock. Swinging his arm to simulate a clock pendulum, Hall remarked: "Just think of it—seven bucks, seven bucks, seven bucks, no wonder the du Ponts were mad at the sit-down boys."

General Motors officers "were so scared after spending half a day with us in a joint meeting that they wouldn't meet with us again for a week," Hall asserted. "If you locked John L. Lewis up in a closet with that bunch he would come out with all their clothes."

Denouncing "stool pigeons and Pinkerton operatives," Hall said the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee was endeavoring to obtain a list of Pinkerton detectives working for General Motors.

"There are some of them here now, and God help them when we get that list," he shouted. "My advice to you is to confess your iniquity now, perhaps that will save a piece of your neck."

Hall stated that during the celebration at Flint, Mich., at the end of the strike, he was in a telephone booth calling Detroit and overheard a man in the next booth "reporting to his chief, Mr. Ahner, the St. Louis private detective. He told his boss that the union had taken charge of the town and that he and his kind couldn't do a thing about it. I'll bet that was a bitter pill for Mr. Ahner."

Hall last night made a radio talk here, then departed for Kansas City to speak at a meeting of automobile workers there today.

FATHER AND 3 DAUGHTERS HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

Their Car Overturned; Driver of Other Machine, Fayette (Mo.) Student Detained.

On their way to a Valentine party, Gordon Barnett, 1604A Belt avenue, 48-year-old laborer, and his three daughters on their way to a Valentine party were injured when Barnett's automobile was struck by another car at Ohio avenue and Russell boulevard at 8:45 o'clock last night.

Barnett, whose wife had remained at home, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter at City Hospital that he had made a boulevard stop at Russell and started across when the other driver tried to pass in front of his sedan, overturning the Barnett car in colliding with it. Passersby turned the sedan upright to liberate the injured passengers.

The other car was driven by Hans Hinrichs, 19 years old, a student, of Fayette, Mo., who was detained by the police. He made no statement. Barnett suffered skull and internal injuries and a fracture of the left wrist. His eldest daughter, Marie, 11, suffered a fracture of the left leg, Helen, 5, a skull injury and Edna, 7, lacerations of the face.

SUSPECT, 17, ADMITS ATTEMPT TO HOLD UP TWO WOMEN

Youth, Identified by Both Victims, Signed Confession, Police Say.

Police said Otis McCoy, 17-year-old Negro, signed a statement last night admitting that he attempted to hold up two women Friday night. The women, Mrs. Stella Konopka, 18, 1319 Sarsfield place, and Mrs. Helen Menczkowska, 1600 Knapp street, identified him.

A Negro placed a revolver against Mrs. Konopka's back, near her home, and ordered her to walk into a nearby vacant lot. She seized the weapon and pointed it at him, pulling the trigger twice, but it failed to fire. He wrested it from her, struck her on the head, and fled. She was treated at City Hospital for a scalp laceration.

Several hours later a man answering the same description attempted to hold up Mrs. Menczkowska in the 1500 block of North Twentieth street, but her screams brought two men to her aid and frightened him away.

ROOSEVELT RADIO ADDRESS ABOUT 9:35 TOMORROW NIGHT

Will Speak at Farley Dinner; Time of Senator Minton's Court Talk Changed.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—President Roosevelt will make a nation-wide radio talk beginning at about 9:35, St. Louis time, Monday night, as previously scheduled, the National Broadcasting Co. announced tonight, after changing the hour for a talk on the President's court plans by Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana.

Company officials said the President had requested that his talk be rescheduled so as not to conflict with the speech by the Indiana Democrat, a supporter of his court proposals.

This was found unnecessary as it was possible to move Senator Minton's half-hour address from the Red network at 9:30 p. m, St. Louis time, to 8 p. m., on the NBC Blue network.

The President will be heard from the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, where he will attend a celebration in honor of Postmaster-General Farley.

Sequence of Events Leading To Effort to Block Grand Jury Inquiry Into Riverfront Vote

Series of Delays Effected, the Latest Being The Action to Prevent Access to the Ballot Boxes.

The sequence of events which led to the extraordinary and unprecedented attempt to prevent a grand jury investigation of the $7,500,000 river-front bond issue election follows:

The Post-Dispatch, last September, exposed gross fraud in the bond election held the previous September. Test canvasses of sample precincts, in which affidavits and statements were obtained from registered voters, demonstrated fraud in every one of the 19 wards which had been recorded as giving the bonds the necessary two-thirds majority.

On Sept. 8, the day the Post-Dispatch began publication of the results of its investigation, Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller formally notified the Board of Election Commissioners to preserve the ballots and other records of voting in the bond election, stating that a grand jury investigation of the election would be undertaken.

Further Inquiry Urged.

The June term grand jury, which had been investigating wholesale registration frauds exposed by the Post-Dispatch, returning 30 indictments, mostly against precinct election officials, urged in its final report, Sept. 11, that subsequent grand juries investigate the riverfront bond election, and the primary elections of 1934 and 1936.

When the September term grand jury was impaneled three days later, Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood instructed it to investigate election frauds, mentioning the three elections to which the previous grand jury had referred in its final report.

In conference with Circuit Attorney Miller, the vigorous September grand jury decided to take up first the primary election held a month previously and spent all its available time on that. This grand jury returned 68 felony indictments, and reported, when it was discharged Dec. 4, that it was "appalled by evidence of open and blatant fraud."

Judge Padberg's Jury.

When the September jury decided to go into the August primary, Circuit Attorney Miller had in mind that the ballots and other records of voting in the river-front bond election had been impounded in response to his order, and would be available for subsequent investigation. That investigation, he thought, would be made by the grand jury chosen Dec. 7 by Circuit Judge Eugene L. Padberg, whose sudden political rise from pharmacist to jurist has been noted heretofore.

Judge Padberg, however, did not instruct his grand jury to investigate any election frauds, and when Miller asked the jury to undertake the bond election inquiry, it refused, by vote of 8 to 4.

In choosing his grand jury, Judge Padberg had picked as foreman Patrick R. FitzGibbon, veteran Democratic politician, whose nephew, a City Hall employe, had served as Democratic election judge in the second precinct of the Fifth Ward, one of the precincts in which the Post-Dispatch had exposed fraud, and one whose ballot boxes the present grand jury is attempting to subpena. Three other members of Judge Padberg's jury were shown to have had City Hall connections.

Judge Padberg's grand jury, despite repeated urging by Circuit Attorney Miller, persisted in its refusal to make the bond election investigation, offering the excuse that the riverfront memorial would be a "good thing." In the general re-assignment of judges last month Judge J. Wesley McAfee succeeded to the criminal courts division Judge Padberg had occupied. At once Judge McAfee called the Padberg grand jury into open court and took the unprecedented action of discharging it in the midst of its term, frankly telling its members that they had shown a view of their duty diametrically opposed to his. But that was all that Judge McAfee could do about it; the law did not permit him to impanel an interim grand jury.

Before Judge Joynt.

There the matter rested until it became Judge Joynt's duty to select the present grand jury, which he did Feb. 1, giving it specific instructions to investigate the bond election, and advising it that it had the "right to open the ballot boxes and examine the ballots to ascertain whether or not, in your opinion, our election laws have been violated." He reminded it that "our system of representative government, the foundation upon which it stands, and whatever hope it may have for the future, depends on fair and honest elections." Continuing, he said: "In order for our form of government to continue to exist, every eligible citizen should be permitted to cast his or her vote, and that vote should be counted as it is cast by the voter." His final vote was that, if the grand jury found the elections laws had been violated, it "should indict the violators irrespective of party or person, without fear or favor."

On the following day the grand jury, in obedience to Judge Joynt's instructions, began its investigation by hearing witnesses to lay the technical foundation for its work. Through Circuit Attorney Miller, it went through the required formality of asking Judge Joynt to issue a subpena on the Election Board's secretary for production of the ballot boxes and other records of voting in the first five precincts of the Fifth Ward, where State Senator Mike Kinney, at Mayor Dickmann's request, had thrown the full force of his political machine behind the bond issue with a lop-sided vote of 5015 to 127.

"Zero Hour" Strikes.

The "zero hour" had struck for those vitally interested in preventing the grand jury investigation.

Within an hour, Attorney William J. Hough was in communication with Judge Joynt. His job was to stop the grand jury investigation. He asked Judge Joynt to delay issuance of the ballot box subpena until he could have time to prepare and file an objecting motion. (It will be remembered that Hough was no stranger in the Municipal Courts Building. As First Assistant Prosecuting Attorney under Harry Rosecan, he was unceremoniously fired from public office by his superior in 1934 for dismissing criminal charges against Fourth Ward Democratic Ward Boss Jimmy Miller of interfering with Republican challengers at the election the previous November.)

Two courses were then open to Judge Joynt. He might issue the subpenas his grand jury requested, leaving it to Hough to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition, if he chose to do so, or he might, out of "professional courtesy," give Hough time to get his clients into court and file his motion. Judge Joynt took the latter course, deferring action until the next day.

But Hough was not ready the following day. He had told the Post-Dispatch his clients engaged him after reading in the newspapers that the grand jury had requested subpenas for the Fifth Ward ballot boxes, but the time at which he fixed his conversation with Judge Joynt the previous day was prior to

CITY DEMOCRATS TRY TO DRAFT BOOGHER

Committee Formally Requests Him to Run for Comptroller; Decision Later.

Lawrence Boogher, assistant vice-president of the Boatmen's National Bank, was formally urged to become a candidate for the party nomination for Comptroller in the primary election March 12 by the Democratic City Committee last night. Boogher said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he had taken the request under consideration and would announce his decision within the next two or three days.

The committee's action was equivalent to a virtual drafting of Boogher to make the race. The Democrats have had difficulty in finding candidates to run for the office in view of Comptroller Louis Nolte's recent announcement that he would again seek the Republican nomination. Nolte, the only Republican official now at City Hall, is a recognized vote-getter and when the Democratic city ticket, with the exception of the candidate for Comptroller, was elected in April, 1933, Nolte was re-elected by 38,000 votes.

Constable John J. Dwyer, Democratic City Committeeman from the Twentieth Ward, said recently he was considering running for Comptroller, but in view of the committee's virtually unanimous indorsement of Boogher would probably not make the race, if Boogher decides to become a candidate.

Boogher, a native St. Louisan, has been associated with the Boatmen's National Bank since 1923, and since 1929 has been assistant vice-president. He is 61 years old, married, has three grown children, and resides at 6241 Waterman avenue.

EAST SIDE OFFICIAL FORMALLY SENTENCED

J. J. Hamilton Denied Retrial for Murder of Thomas Grissom.

John J. Hamilton, East St. Louis member of the St. Clair County Board of Review, was formally sentenced to 50 years in the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Menard yesterday for the murder of Thomas Grissom, union business agent, after his motion for a new trial was overruled by City Judge Rolla W. Griffith of Granite City, sitting in Circuit Court at Belleville.

Hamilton was found guilty by a jury Jan. 16 and his punishment fixed at 50 years' imprisonment. His attorney entered oral exceptions to the Court's decision indicating an appeal would be taken.

"There's nothing to do but take it on the chin," Hamilton said as he re-entered his cell in the Belleville jail.

Hamilton pleaded self-defense in killing Grissom, who was escorting Hamilton's secret wife, Wilma Woods Hamilton, last Aug. 2. Hamilton, then a Constable, shot them both when he saw them at Illinois avenue and Twenty-second street in East St. Louis. He was tried last Oct. 22 for killing his wife, but the jury disagreed and he is to be retried. He was elected to the Board of Review while a prisoner in jail.

Sequence of Events in River Front Bond Vote Inquiry

publication of editions which contained that information. Hough requested, and obtained from Judge Joynt, delay for another day.

'Secrecy of the Ballot.'

By Feb. 4, two days after the grand jury had made its request for the ballot box subpenas, Hough was prepared to go into court, name his dummy clients, one in each of the five precincts where the jury had requested ballot box subpenas, and file his motion. The motion advanced the "secrecy of the ballot" as a reason for depriving the grand jury of access to the boxes, and contended that under the law the ballots should have been destroyed a year after the election.

Judge Joynt held a hearing on the motion the following day, when State Representative John D. Taylor of Keytesville and David E. Blair of Joplin, former Judge of the Missouri Supreme Court, appeared with Hough as associate counsel. Blair and Taylor, hired by Hough and looking to him for their fees, argued the case; Hough, referred to as "senior counsel" by Blair and Taylor, sat mute. Judge Joynt took the matter under advisement, announcing that he would give his decision the following Wednesday, Feb. 10.

Dummy Plaintiffs.

On the day the hearing was held, the Post-Dispatch published statements from four of the five dummy plaintiffs that they were solicited to become plaintiffs, had obligingly done so, had paid no fees, hired no lawyers.

The fifth, George Whitelaw, 42-year-old salesman for a chemical concern who lives at the St. Francis Hotel, Senator Kinney's voting residence and political headquarters, said he had hired Hough, paying him $250 of his own money, because he was interested in the "secrecy of the ballot."

When the day set for Judge Joynt's ruling on the Hough motion arrived, he announced instead that he had decided to call the other two judges of criminal divisions, Judge McAfee and Judge Frank C. O'Malley, into conference to help him decide.

On the same day, Whitelaw's conscience had stricken him, or something else had moved him to back out of the deal. He confessed to the Post-Dispatch that he was a dummy plaintiff, that the suit was not instituted in good faith, and that he had no personal interest in it but expected to get about $2000.

To add to his confusion, his photographs were identified as those of a fake doctor, "Dr. George Whitelaw," who had told one of his customers a fanciful story of having graduated from the Harvard Medical School.

Circuit Attorney Acts.

There was quick action by Circuit Attorney Miller and Judges Joynt, McAfee and O'Malley as soon as the Post-Dispatch was on the street with Whitelaw's confession. The Circuit Attorney had Whitelaw served at once with a subpena to appear before the grand jury the following afternoon.

A conference in the Law Library among the three Judges, trying to decide how to dispose of Hough's motion, was broken up.

Judge Joynt hastened to the Circuit Attorney's office with a request that Whitelaw be produced in his court. He withdrew the request when he learned that Whitelaw already had been subpenaed for the grand jury.

Judges McAfee and O'Malley announced they would have no further deliberations with Judge Joynt in the case until Joynt had established whether the proceeding was bona fide.

Judge Joynt informed the press that he expected to be able to determine the matter without the other judges, whose assistance he had solicited. He stated that his decision would be given Saturday.

Judge Joynt Not Ready.

But yesterday Judge Joynt was not ready. He announced further delay to give him time to study a recent decision of the Missouri Supreme Court in a Jackson County bond issue election case, in which the Supreme Court ruled there was no statutory provisions for contesting the result of a municipal or county bond issue election.

Charges of fraud in the Jackson County election were made by the protesting taxpayer, but the Supreme Court did not pass on these charges, holding that it had no jurisdiction to issue the desired injunction against the sale of the bonds. Obviously, fraud in a bond issue election is as much a violation of the criminal statutes of the State as is fraud in any other election.

Judge Joynt did not say yesterday when he expected to reach his decision. Meanwhile the term of his grand jury shortens. It must be discharged early in March, when Judge O'Malley will select the next grand jury.

Registration Exposure.

When Circuit Attorney Miller impounded the riverfront bond election ballots and voting records last September at the time of the Post-Dispatch exposure of the fraud, and announced that a grand jury investigation of the election would be made, there was fresh in his mind and the public mind the result of the Post-Dispatch exposure in July of wholesale registration padding in every ward in the city. The registration fraud exposure had forced a reluctant Election Board—later fired by Gov. Park "for the good of the service"—to make a complete recanvass of the registration before the August primary. Special deputy election commissioners who made the recanvass reported "not found" for 46,000 who had been listed by the board as registered voters eligible to vote in the primary election.

down Dec. 22 in the Jackson County bond election contest case. The suit was a civil proceeding, filed by a Kansas City taxpayer to enjoin the sale of county bonds, and was not, like the pending St. Louis inquiry, a criminal investigation to indict perpetrators of frauds.

In the Jackson County case, the Supreme Court ruled there was no statutory provision for contesting the result of a municipal or county bond issue election. Charges of fraud in the election were made by the protesting taxpayer, but the Supreme Court did not pass on these charges, holding that it had no jurisdiction to issue the desired injunction against sale of the bonds.

WASHINGTON U. HEADS TESTIFY IN WILL SUIT

Deny Influence Was Used on Dr. Campbell, Who Left School $40,000.

Depositions of representatives of Washington University were filed in Circuit Court yesterday in the suit of Miss Mary Campbell of Denver to set aside the will of her elderly brother, Dr. William Oliver Campbell, a retired dentist, who bequeathed his $40,000 estate to that institution. The will was made in 1933. Dr. Campbell died in 1935 at the age of 78. He resided at the Hamilton Hotel.

The depositions are by Philo Stevenson, alumni representative of the university and executor under the will; Dean Walter McCourt, assistant chancellor and professor of geology, and Isaac A. Hedges, agent for the university's real estate. McCourt, Hedges and Joseph H. Zumbalen, treasurer of the Washington University Corporation, signed the will as witnesses.

Stevenson testified he became acquainted with the dentist about five years ago at Peterson's Billiard Academy, 718 North Seventh street, and they met there various times after the first meeting to play billiards. The witness said that Campbell, on learning of his connection with the university, mentioned he was a graduate of the institution, speaking in high terms of what it had done for him and added he was going to leave his property to it.

One time, Stevenson sent Campbell a form letter asking for a contribution for an alumni movement, the deposition shows. To this request, Campbell replied he did not want to bebothered with such matters, since the university was to have all of his estate at his death, the witness said.

McCourt and Hedges said that they were summoned to Zumbalen's office and asked to witness the will, but they did not know what the will contained.

In her suit, Miss Campbell alleges her brother was influenced by Zumbalen. She also alleges that because of his age Dr. Campbell did not possess testamentary capacity and was forgetful. Another allegation was that while conversing he was in the habit of dropping off into a sound sleep.

The university denies that Dr. Campbell was influenced. It also denies he was not legally competent to execute a will. The bequest was in memory of Dr. Campbell's deceased wife, the will set forth.

The depositions were taken at the instance of the plaintiff, represented by William B. Kinealy. Charles P. Williams appeared for the university and Stevenson, who are named as defendants.

STOP THAT RISING HAIR LINE

● ● Your hair line rises and baldness comes when you let local scalp disorders (such as dandruff) go un-checked. Stop that rising hair line and help avoid baldness by consulting a Thomas expert.

A Thomas expert will examine your scalp and determine which of the 14 local scalp ills (responsible for almost 90% of all cases of baldness) are attacking your hair-growing structure. He will then specifically help overcome those local disorders by adapting the Thomas treatment to meet your precise needs. Your dandruff should disappear; scalp itch will stop; and normal hair growth should be helped.

Call today for a complete scalp examination. No charge is ever made for a scalp examination or for consultation (always in private). If you do not come within the scope of Thomas treatment you will be frankly told. Remember—the scalp examination is free.

Studebaker economy is the talk of America!
And Studebaker sales are soaring!

ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH

THE two always go together when America goes to buy its automobiles . . . the less a car costs to run the more readily it sells!

In January, Studebaker sales went 'way ahead of January last year . . . in fact, they were the largest in the company's history for fifteen years!

And that sensational sales advance stems straight from the new 1937 Studebaker's remarkable economy which equals and often betters the best showing of the smaller lowest priced cars!

The 1937 Studebaker is the world's first car to offer the dual economy insurance of the Fram oil cleaner and the gas-saving automatic overdrive! World's only car with the double safety of the built-in automatic hill holder and feather-touch hydraulic brakes! And the world's only car with non-slam doors that close lightly, tightly and silently on exclusive rattle-proof rotary latches!

Before you buy any new car, you will be smart to drive a new Studebaker and find out why it's called America's spotlight car of the year!

A FEW CENTS A DAY MORE THAN A LOWEST PRICED CAR!

$10,000.00 IN CASH TO USED CAR BUYERS!
The best buy of 1937 is a new Studebaker of course. But if you prefer to get a used car, it may be worth as much as $1000.00 in cash to you to buy it here. The Studebaker Corporation is offering 452 cash prizes totalling $10,000.00 to motorists who buy used cars from Studebaker dealers. This offer holds good for a limited time only. Come in and look over our used cars and get full details.

Edward Not Mentioned In Coronation Program

Report in London Duke of Windsor Will Not Return to England for at Least Three Years.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 13. — The Duke of Windsor, former King, is not mentioned in a 32-page coronation day program which has been printed and issued to a few privileged persons.

The volume contains large pictures of every other member of the royal family, with biographical material for each, but there is no picture and no word about Edward, now living in Austria.

The booklet will not be issued generally for several weeks.

The Duke of Windsor, will not return to England for at least three years, a source close to the Royal family said tonight. His sister, the Countess of Harewood, who visited her brother at Vienna will bring to Queen Mother Mary and the brothers of the former King full details of his plans. These, it is stated, will include arrangements for his marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the American woman for love of whom he abdicated, after her divorce becomes absolute. It may be made absolute April 27.

The person who disclosed the plans also said the Duke would decline the invitation to attend the meeting of the Knights of the Garter—of which order he still is a member—at Windsor Castle in June or take the seat in the House of Lords to which he is entitled.

The Privy Council today approved final plans for the coronation of King George VI, May 12.

Duke of Windsor Greets Honey-Mooning Dutch Princess.

VIENNA, Feb. 13.—Edward, Duke of Windsor, today met Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and her new husband, Prince Bernhard, who are on their honeymoon.

Shortly before he bade farewell to his sister Mary, the Princess Royal, Edward unexpectedly met Juliana in the dining room of the Bristol Hotel. He embraced her and chatted with her for 10 minutes, mostly about skiing, of which both are devotees.

Both Princess Mary and her brother were deeply moved when they parted at the Vienna station, ending her week's visit. The Princess received a bouquet of roses and violets from her brother. Many of the women onlookers were in tears.

Edward showed anger when motion picture cameramen attempted to record the scene. Police confiscated the cameras.

Princess Mary and her husband, the Earl of Harewood, started for London bearing gifts from the Duke to his mother, his brothers, the Duke of Kent's new baby daughter and Queen Elizabeth.

PLUMBERS ATTACK VALIDITY OF SALES REPORT LAW

Court Takes Under Advisement Plea for Injunction to Restrain Its Enforcement.

The suit of six plumbing supply firms, asking a permanent injunction to prevent the city from enforcing an ordinance requiring dealers in plumbing supplies to report sales of articles which require a water supply or a drain, was taken under advisement yesterday by Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood. The case was argued by counsel.

The plumbers contend the ordinance, which was approved last year is arbitrary and unconstitutional. Compliance with its terms is not possible in some instances, they say. For example customers, who are required to make a statement in writing concerning the address of the building in which articles to be purchased are to be installed, could not be forced to make such statement. In case of refusal the dealer could not make the sale, forcing a customer to buy elsewhere.

It was further stated that only dealers in this city are subject to the terms of the measure. The city has other ordinances establishing a plumbing code which are sufficient, plaintiffs contend.

Counsel for the city argued that the ordinance was valid and was enacted in the interest of the public health and welfare. It provides a fine of from $25 to $500 for its violation.

Plaintiffs are the Mound City Plumbing Supply Co., Inc., Sam Brand, in business as New Market Hardware Co.; Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Central Hardware Co.; Anton Beffa Wrecking & Supply Co., and Bessie Leve, operating as the Century Plumbing Co.

STARK TO CALL CONFERENCE ON RELIEF FUND PROBLEM

Way to Be Sought to Obtain Additional Money for This Month.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 13.—Convinced that the State's $600,000 appropriation for relief during January and February has proved inadequate, Gov. Stark announced today he would confer with legislative leaders and representatives of relief agencies to discuss means of providing additional funds for the current month.

St. Louis received $265,000 of the $600,000, and its relief committee will be out of funds by Feb. 22 unless more money is provided.

A committee of business men was named at a relief conference at City Hall yesterday to call on Gov. Stark and appear before the Legislature next week in an effort to obtain more State relief money for St. Louis. Mayor Dickmann, who called the meeting, said the State should provide $4,000,000 for St. Louis during the next two years. The committee will oppose any increase in the State sales tax unless that amount is allocated to St. Louis for relief.

Mrs. Martin Johnson to Speak.

Mrs. Martin Johnson, widow of the noted explorer, who died of injuries suffered in a recent California airplane crash, will lecture as originally planned at Municipal Auditorium the afternoon and evening of March 4, it was announced yesterday. She will illustrate her lecture with motion pictures taken on an exploration trip in Borneo.

JAMES F. M'COURTNEY DIES

Retired Merchant Succumbs on Visit to Brother in Texas.

James F. McCourtney, 78 years old, a retired dry goods merchant, 6158 McPherson avenue, died yesterday at McAllen, Tex.

He became ill while visiting his brother at Pharr, Tex., and was taken to a hospital at McAllen two weeks ago. Surviving are his sons, J. Spencer McCourtney, president of the Columbia Brewing Co., and L. L. McCourtney of the McPherson avenue address. Burial will be in St. Louis.

Formerly an employe of the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., he later operated his own dry goods stores.

Golden Wedding Celebration.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wokurka yesterday observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary with a private celebration at their home, 3524 Texas avenue, which was attended by their four children. Mr. Wokurka, 75 years old, was born in what is now Czechoslovakia and has been a tailor since coming to St. Louis more than 45 years ago. His wife, 69 years old, was born in Germany.

TWO ROAD CREWS RUN DOWN IN TWO DAYS

One Repair Worker Killed, Two Hurt by Truck, Three Injured by Auto.

In two strikingly similar accidents, yesterday and Friday, in which automobiles ran into groups of State road maintenance men repairing pavements with tar, one worker was killed, one was gravely injured, two hurt seriously and two cut and bruised.

Harry Delbruegge, 36 years old, of Valley Park, was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital yesterday in a grave condition.

A Coroner's jury returned an open verdict yesterday in the death of Louis Arft, 30, of Manchester, recommending that Charles Zimmerman, 3820A North Twenty-fifth street, driver of a truck which struck Arft, be held for further inquiry. Zimmerman, part owner of the Sudden Service trucking concern, whose machine he was driving, was required to furnish new bond. He did not testify.

In each accident the State truck was parked on the shoulder of a concrete State highway and there were the customary warning signs posted on the road on either side of the sections where the men were working, officials reported.

Delbruegge was one of five employes unloading tar barrels from a truck on Gravois road, Jefferson County, two and one-half miles southwest of Fenton, at 7 a. m. yesterday. An eastbound automobile driven by E. C. Reid, 6066 Wanda avenue, struck three in the group. Delbruegge's brother, Lawrence, 31, of Valley Park, and Mike Dunnigan, 43, of Eureka, were cut and bruised.

State highway patrolmen, who detained Reid before he gave bond, quoted him as saying he did not know what happened. They reported that his car ran off the pavement, onto the shoulder, before striking the men.

Arft was engaged in the filling of cracks in the concrete from a portable tar barrel at Hollow, on Manchester road, at 11 a. m. Friday. Those with him were Elmer Landvatter, 36, of Chesterfield, who suffered a fracture of the right leg and lacerations of the face, scalp and hands, and Walter Jarvis, 42, of Glencoe, who suffered a leg injury and cuts and bruises.

Zimmerman told State patrolmen that he had been ill earlier in the day; that he remembered seeing the caution sign and the State truck, but that then "everything suddenly went black," and his next recollection was of seeing one of the men on a front fender of his truck afterwards.

DR. CHARLES SEYMOUR NAMED HEAD OF YALE

Succeeds Dr. James R. Angell Who Will Retire in June.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 13.—The Yale Corporation today elected Dr. Charles Seymour, 52-year-old educator, diplomat, historian and an alumnus, today as the fifteenth president of Yale University. He succeeds Dr. James Rowland Angell, Yale's head since 1921, who retires in June, having reached the retirement age of 68 for faculty members.

Dr. Seymour was notified of his election by Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, an ex-officio fellow of the corporation, and the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin of New York City. The new Yale head became a member of the faculty in 1911.

Dr. Seymour, New Haven-born, was graduated from Yale with the class of 1908. He attended public schools here and took his bachelor's degree from Kings College, Cambridge, before matriculating at Yale.

For the past 10 years he has been university provost. He is a member of an old and distinguished Yale family. His father, Thomas Day Seymour, was Hillhouse professor of Greek language and literature at the university for more than 25 years. Thomas Clap, president of Yale from 1740 to 1776, was his great-great-grandfather and Jeremiah Day, head of Yale from 1817 to 1846, was his great-uncle. Joseph Coit, who received an honorary master of arts degree at Yale's first commencement in 1702 was Dr. Seymour's great-great-great-grandfather.

Dr. Seymour married Miss Gladys Marion Watkins of Scranton, Pa., a sister of a classmate, C. Law Watkins, in 1911. They have three children, a son and two daughters.

Headed American Commission.

Dr. Seymour, who is sterling professor of history and master of Berkeley College in addition to provost, has also written several books. A reputation he established in 1916 by his book on "Diplomatic Background of the War," resulted in his appointment as a master of the American commission to negotiate peace and in 1919 President Woodrow Wilson named him chief of the Austrian-Hungarian division. Later, he acted as United States delegate on the Rumanian, Yugoslavian and Czechoslovakian territorial commission.

Selection of Dr. Seymour to head the university places the office again in the hands of an alumnus. The custom was broken only once, in the election of Dr. Angell. Informed of the corporation's action, Dr. Angell said:

"The university is most fortunate in the choice of . . . its next president. He will bring to the position a life-long acquaintance with Yale and a sympathetic understanding of her tradition and ideals. His training as an undergraduate at Cambridge, together with his intimate contact with European affairs, has given him a cosmopolitan point of view invaluable for the head of a great institution . . ."

Statement Later on Plans.

Dr. Seymour said he would issue a statement soon outlining his policies. Describing the method of his notification later, Dr. Seymour said:

"I was sitting in my office when Gov. Cross and Mr. Coffin called. I thought they were seeking some information about the university administration. The news was a pleasant surprise. It is a great honor and a tremendous responsibility."

Students and members of the faculty appeared elated over the corporation's choice.

Dr. Angell has had a notable career in the educational field. The son of the late Dr. James B. Angell, president of the University of Michigan, he was well known among educators as a "creator of psychologists" when he came to Yale 16 years ago.

For 25 years he served the University of Chicago, first as assistant professor of psychology; then as dean of arts, literature and science and later as acting president in 1918 and 1919.

Under Dr. Angell's administration, the residential college plan was inaugurated. During the first decade of his presidency the endowment was increased by $20,000,000, and the student body increased from about 3800 to almost 6000.

ALMOST ALL OF FARM BOARD COMMODITIES LIQUIDATED

Stocks of Other Similar Government Agencies Said to Be Relatively Small.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13. — Government authorities disclosed today that almost all of the commodities acquired through operations of the Hoover administration's farm board have been liquidated. Likewise, commitments still on the books of the Farm Credit Administration, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and the Commodity Credit Corporation were shown to be relatively small.

The farm board's wheat purchases, totaling 908,615,449 bushels of spot and futures holdings from 1930 to March, 1933, have disappeared. With the exception of 85,000,000 bushels donated to the Red Cross, they were sold on the open market.

During its life the board financed the removal from the market of nearly 3,500,000 bales of cotton. The Red Cross received 800,000 bales and the remainder was sold, excepting 74,000 bales turned over to the Secretary of Agriculture in 1934.

FORESEES TYRANNY BEHIND COURT PLAN

R. G. Simmons Before Young Republicans Talks of "Deep Issue" Involved.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 13.—Robert G. Simmons of Lincoln, Neb., former Republican congressman, told the Young Republicans of Missouri at a Lincoln day dinner tonight that President Roosevelt's judiciary proposals raised the "deep issue" of the maintenance of liberty of the citizen from the tyranny of any administration and any Congress."

"The issue goes deeper than the question of whether President Roosevelt will or will not pack the court," Simmons said. "The issue goes deeper than the question of whether President Roosevelt will or will not invade the human rights guaranteed by the Constitution. The issue goes deeper than the question of whether Congress will or will not ride roughshod over those same rights.

Playthings of President.

"The issue is whether the American people want to put that power in the hands of any President, or any Congress. If a New Deal President can pack the courts, so as to have the Constitution interpreted his way, then any other President controlling Congress can do the same thing, and constitutional guarantees become in that event, mere playthings of any President and any Congress."

Simmons said these issues "should not be passed upon under the subterfuge of proposed changes in the court."

"They should," he said, "be frankly and directly submitted to the American people in a consttiutional amendment. Then 'we, the people' can consider, debate and determine that question directly free from any partisan considerations."

"Just Before the Dawn."

Mrs. John Wyether of St. Joseph, Republican national committeewoman for Missouri, another speaker, told her fellow party members that "the darkest hour is just before the dawn."

"Just before coming to this meeting I looked over the newspapers, and from the accounts of the congressional battle over the packing of the Supreme Court, I believe you will agree with me that that dawn already is here."

State Senator Ray Mabee of Unionville was elected president of the association, succeeding Clarence Powell of Dexter. William Buder, St. Louis attorney, was elected treasurer, succeeding Mabee.

Miss Dorothy Williams of Springfield, who was secretary in 1935, was again elected to that office, succeeding Miss Laura Patrick of Harrisonville.

WOMAN GETS 7 YEARS FOR EXTORTION THREAT

Joyce McGee Pleads Guilty of Writing Letter to Kansas City Manager.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 13.—Joyce McGee was sentenced to seven years in prison today after she pleaded guilty of writing an extortion letter to City Manager H. F. McElroy. Sentence was passed by United States District Judge Albert L. Reeves five minutes after the woman was indicted.

The woman was remanded to custody, the place of her imprisonment to be decided later.

She confessed writing a letter demanding $500 from McElroy, threatening harm to his daughter, Mary, who was kidnaped in 1933 by Walter and George McGee, both now serving life terms in the Missouri Penitentiary.

The woman, who has used such aliases as Richetti, after Adam Richetti, involved in the Union Station murders here, and Nash, for Walter Nash, victim of the same killing, has declared she was married both to Walter and George McGee, but police here dispute her story.

RAILROADS DENY FLORIDA CITRUS GROWERS' RATE PLEA

Emergency Reduction in Charge for Transporting Grapefruit Had Been Sought.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The Association of American Railroads denied today the Florida citrus industry's plea for an emergency reduction in grapefruit freight rates. The decision was reached at a meeting of Eastern, Western and Southern traffic executives in Chicago yesterday.

A memorandum cited a long list of reasons for refusing the petition, including the railroads' heavy emergency expenditures caused by the Mississippi and Ohio floods.

The citrus industry and Florida State officials, declaring an emergency existed, had asked for a temporary reduction of 50 per cent in grapefruit freight rates.

Grosskop-Metelman Exhibition.

Paintings by Miss Ethel Grosskop and Alvin J. Metelman, instructors in the Washington University fine arts school will be placed on exhibition today at the Monday Club, 37 South Maple avenue, Webster Groves, where they will remain for a month.

NEW ITALIAN PRINCE IS GIVEN 12 NAMES

Vittorio Emanuele Baptised—King Grants Amnesty to Political Prisoners.

By the Associated Press.

NAPLES, Italy, Feb. 13.—Prince Vittorio Emanuele, who one day may be King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia, was given preliminary baptism today, while thousands of political prisoners learned of a grant of amnesty by the King on the occasion of the birth of his grandson.

The child, one day old, was baptised by Cardinal Ascalasi, Archbishop of Naples, in the chapel of the royal palace with water from the fountain in the basilica of St. Vincent de Paul—the same fountain from which came baptismal water for the present King in 1869.

The baby's father, Crown Prince Umberto, and three grandparents, Queen Elena, who was with the Crown Princess Marie Jose at the birth yesterday; King Vittorio Emanuele and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, maternal grandmother, attended the baptism.

The Prince was given 12 names: Vittorio Emanuele Alberta Carlo Teodoro Umberta Bonifacio Amedeo Damiana Bernardino Gennaro Maria.

Countess Bossi-Pucci held him on a satin pillow during the ceremony. Cardinal Ascalasi also blessed the Crown Princess, his mother.

A crowd of 5000 gathered outside. Shortly afterward the King and Queen left for Rome. It was believed Premier Mussolini might come to Naples tomorrow to represent the Government in the ceremony of drawing up a birth certificate for the Prince, second in line of succession to the throne.

WENDEL KIDNAPING JURY CAN'T AGREE, IS DISCHARGED

Two Men to Be Retried March 1; Third One Has Pleaded Guilty.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—A jury in Kings County Court was dismissed today after reporting it was unable to agree on the guilt or innocence of two men charged with kidnaping Paul H. Wendel last February and torturing him into signing a false confession of the Lindbergh kidnaping. The jury deliberated 20 hours.

The defendants, who are to be retried March 1, were Martin Schlossman and Harry Weiss. A third defendant, Murray Bleefeld, pleaded guilty yesterday after all evidence was in.

Ellis Parker Sr., chief of Burlington County (N. J.) detectives, and his son, Ellis Parker Jr., were indicted but not tried, because Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey refused to extradite them.

The jurors left immediately after their dismissal by Judge J. J. Fitzgerald. It was reported in the court room that they had stood nine to three for conviction.

"Under the circumstances, it seems einexplicable that an agreement could not be reached," Judge Fitzgerald told the jury.

SUES LAWYER FOR $15,000 FOR ALLEGED SERVICES

Mrs. James Holt Says Amount Is Due Her and Husband's Estate From Louis E. Miller.

Louis E. Miller, an attorney, was sued in Circuit Court yesterday for $15,000 alleged to be due Mrs. Gladys Holt and the estate of her late husband, James Holt, for services she says she and her husband rendered Miller under a contract of employment entered in 1928.

The petition, filed for Mrs. Holt by Charles L. Cray, an East St. Louis attorney, says the amount sought is Mrs. Holt's estimate of the amount alleged to be due. At Miller's office in the Chemical Building it was said he was out of town.

MAN ASKS CHILD TO HAND HIM RIFLE, THEN ENDS LIFE

As Alton Girl, 8, Puts Back Weapon, Woman Finds Husband Dead.

Herscal Burcham of Alton, a WPA worker, asked his 8-year-old daughter to hand him his small caliber rifle yesterday as he lay in bed in his home at 1205 Marshall street. The child obeyed. He shot himself in the chest and said "Now put it back."

As the girl was doing so her mother ran into the room and found the father dead. The wife said he had threatened to kill himself.

Schools for children who were forced to leave their homes by the floods are planned in several refugee camps in Missouri with Maj. Keene as director. Instructors and advanced students from the State Teachers' College at Cape Girardeau will conduct the classes. Books will be furnished by the Cape Girardeau public schools.

On arrival at 12:45 o'clock tomorrow afternoon he will be met at Union Station by a delegation of bankers and business men headed by Tom K. Smith, president of the American Bankers' Association.

Stephenson is director of the Trust Research Department of the Graduate School of Banking, sponsored by the American Institute of Banking, the educational section of the American Bankers' Association. ROBBER CAPTURED BY BARMAN AND WIFE

Stanley Zydel Grapples With Unarmed Member of Trio in Granite City.

One of three robbers who attempted to hold up the owner of a Granite City tavern at 1 a. m. yesterday was captured by the tavern keeper and his wife, with the assistance of Mr. and Mrs. Jess C. Allen, customers. Two robbers escaped.

The tavernkeeper, Stanley Zydel, grappled with one of the robbers who was not armed, while Allen grabbed one who displayed a revolver. The third robber remained outside, at the wheel of an automobile.

The robber with the revolver pulled its trigger several times as he fought with Allen, but the weapon did not fire. He broke away and fled in the automobile. Allen and Zydel, aided by the two women, subdued the other robber.

The captured robber said he was Frank H. Watts, 22 years old, and gave an address in the 300 block of Illinois avenue, East St. Louis. He gave police the names of his companions.

WEATHER MAN LOOKS AT FLOOD PROBLEM

Says Overflows Cannot Be Prevented but Damage Can Be Lessened.

By W. C. DEVEREAUX.
Senior Meteorologist, United States Weather Bureau at Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 13.—As additional records of January rainfall are received and tabulated, we learn that the fall in the region around Cincinnati averaged more than 12 inches during the 10 days preceding the crest of the flood. The region of greatest rainfall extended from Cincinnati to Louisville, Ky., and southward to Central Kentucky.

This amount of fall is about three times the amount that normally falls in a full month and nearly 100 per cent more than has been recorded before for a similar period at stations reporting to this office. At the beginning of this period of heavy rains, the Ohio River was nearly full from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Louisville and above flood stage from Evansville, Ind., to Cairo, Ill.

The large amount of water falling during this period passed quite rapidly into the rivers and caused the highest stages of record in the Ohio River from Point Pleasant, W. Va., to the month of the river at Cairo—a distance of 716 miles.

The greatest question under consideration at present is how may we reduce the height of the flood stages in the future. One of the Federal agencies actively engaged in this work is the Soil Conservation Service of the United States Department of Agriculture. Its officials and engineers have been working with me for several days and most of the following information has come from them.

First Point of Attack.

The first point of attack in the problem of flood control is at the point where the rain first falls. All of that part of the water that can be retained on and in the land will decrease the height of the flood by that amount.

From experimental plots in the watershed of the Muskingum River it has been shown that four times as much water ran off cornfields as off grassland or woodland.

The rapid runoff from the cultivated land is due in part to the lack of proper treatment of the soil and to the method of cultivation. The forests must also be well managed to obtain the best results in reducing the runoff. Much of the water which is retained on the land surface even for a short time will soak into the soil and will not reach the rivers for weeks or months.

In the Ohio Valley there are 127,000,000 acres, of which about 37 per cent are covered with forests, many of them in poor condition. If even 25 per cent of the rainfall could be retained on only 10,000,000 acres, the volume of water held back would be enormous and the height of the flood would be reduced. The application of conservation measures to the watershed of the Ohio Valley has many desirable results, but we are discussing at present only the specific one of reducing flood heights.

More Storage Reservoirs.

As soon as the water enters a ditch, gully or brook, the attack should continue by building dams and storage reservoirs. These at first may be only small dams of brush or stone and small ponds on the farm. The amount of water that is retained on any one acre, or even on ten acres, may be small, but it is the total runoff from these millions of small patches that makes the great floods in the Ohio River.

As we progress down each small stream and into the larger tributaries, the size of the dams and retarding reservoirs must be made larger. These reservoirs may be of two principal types—viz., those with fixed outlets which hold back a part of the flood water as in the Big Miami Valley or those which retain practically all of the water as in the Muskingum Valley. The type of dam most suitable for each tributary may be determined by the United States Engineer after exhaustive surveys and studies.

Reversal of Procedure.

After the water has reached the Ohio River the treatment should be reversed. Dams could not retain the water because the volume would have become too great. The channel should be improved and widened wherever possible, the cities and towns moved back from the river wherever possible, and sea walls and dikes built to keep the water out of the towns less fortunately situated.

To make the flood control practicable all of these and other plans must be co-ordinated and so synchronized that the greatest good will be accomplished for all sections of the valley.

There is no overnight or cure-all method to prevent floods in the Ohio River. In fact, floods cannot be prevented in the Ohio River, but they can be made less destructive.

NEW ORLEANS IS SAFE, FLOOD OBSERVERS SAY

Further Rise at Vicksburg by Wednesday Forecast—Many Refugees There.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—Flood waters of the Mississippi developed 35 sand boils behind levees between New Orleans and Vicksburg today, but were quickly controlled with sandbags.

Levees were raised on Lake Pontchartrain, behind New Orleans, because of an expected rise following the opening of a protecting spillway above the city. River observers said New Orleans was perfectly safe.

Forecaster W. F. McDonald said the flood was coming down river on schedule. He predicted it would pass uneventfully through the lower river area.

At Vicksburg, Col. Lunsford E. Oliver said, "Conditions over this district remained in fine shape." The river gauge at Vicksburg stood at 52 feet, a rise of .04 foot in 24 hours.

R. T. Lindley, meteorologist, said, "Nearly stationary stages will be prevalent at Arkansas City and Greenville for three or four days, with a further rise at Vicksburg to about 52.5 feet next Wednesday or Thursday."

Many refugees have been concentrated at Vicksburg. Vidalia, across the river from Natchez, raised the height of its levee.

On the upper river, the flood continued to fall rapidly.

Harry L. Hopkins, director of the WPA, said in Chicago men and money would be provided to repair flood damage in nine states. Loans to flood victims were being arranged by the RFC. "We are taking the lid off," said Hopkins.

When you see that tinge of "Pink" act promptly see your dentist—
Don't be a "DENTAL CRIPPLE"
Let this modern dental routine help keep your gums healthy—your teeth sparkling white
TO IPANA AND MASSAGE

HAS YOUR tooth brush flashed that dental warning—that tinge of "pink"? True, it may seem only a small warning...but it's one you definitely can't afford to overlook...it's nature's way of saying "Don't let gum troubles start!" Right then and there you may be drifting into a future dental tragedy—right then and there you may be a "dental cripple" in the making.

At the first sign of "pink tooth brush" —see your dentist! You may not be scheduled for serious gum trouble—but your dentist should make that decision. Usually, however, it's just another case of gums robbed of work by our modern, soft-food menus. Gums denied the natural resistance of coarse, hard foods... gums that, as many dentists will tell you, need "the stimulating help of Ipana and massage."

Ipana and massage is a modern way of helping to promote solid, healthy gums—as well as sparkling, lustrous teeth. Rub a little extra Ipana on your gums each time you brush your teeth. Gradually you'll feel those lazy gums awaken. Circulation quickens. They grow firmer. They become healthier, more able to resist dental disorders.

Change to Ipana and massage, today. Adopt this oral health routine and make your smile one you can be proud of—a smile that's brilliant, gay, sparkling white.

Remember
A good tooth paste, like a good dentist, is never a luxury.

U. S. BONDS DECLINE, CORPORATES UNEVEN

Face Amount of All Issues Changing Hands Totals $8,482,000 at Week-End.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Comparatively wide swings accompanied heavier volume in the bond market today as United States Governments declined and corporates moved unevenly.

The face amount of all issues changing hands totaled $8,482,000 against $6,171,000 a week ago. Virtually all the increase was accounted for by greater activity in corporate loans. A few more foreigns were traded than on the previous Saturday, while Federal loans moved in smaller volume.

The latter, nevertheless, described wider arcs on the downside than had been seen for some time, net losses ranging to 10-32 of a point.

In the corporate list rail bonds furnished most of the fireworks. The Associated Press averages for 20 such issues broke .4 of a point to a new 1937 low of 97.5. Much of this drop was accounted for by Erie 4s of 1996, off 5⅝ at 90¼ and Atlantic Coast Line 4½s off 1½ to 96½.

Loans moving the other direction were numerous including Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s up 2⅝ at 41, Rock Island refunding 4s up 3⅝ at 23⅛ and Great Western 4s up 1¼ at 48½.

Other groups dropping to new lows for the year, based upon the Associated Press averages included the 10 utilities at 101.8 off .2 of a point and the 10 low yields at 111.4 off .2 of a point.

Peru 6s carried on the advance of the past few days by loans of the South American Republic and closed 2 points higher at 25. Japanese 6½s moved the other way a major fraction as most of the active issues in this quarter fluctuated narrowly.

ST. LOUIS PRODUCE MARKET, Feb. 13.—The following report on prices paid here today to produce dealers by purchasers of round lots of vegetables was made by the "St. Louis Daily Market Reporter:"

POTATOES—Market was rather dull and the feeling was somewhat unsettled. A little business was transacted on the street but carlot trading was at a standstill. Higher price stock was more or less neglected, the tendency of buyers being to the cheaper grades. New potatoes were quiet and steady.

U. S. Steel Assumes Leadership In Market, Rising to Almost 110; Meets Profit-Taking at Close

In Bullish Demonstration Provoked by Settlement of Motor Strike the Metal Issue Reaches Six-Year High.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The stock market backed away today from heavier offerings, mainly in steel and other recent industrial favorites.

Despite a rally in the second hour of the short session, final prices were mostly on the downtrend and many prominent issues were off fractions to more than 2 points.

The character of stock leading the sell-off was accepted as indication in speculative quarters that the usual week-end profit-taking urge was taking toll in lower prices.

Moreover, there seemed to be revision of profit calculations in steel and allied industries in consequence of wage boosts and the move for an advance in the Pittsburgh steel district.

Sales during the week (5 days) amounted to 12,777,920 shares, compared with 14,399,010 the preceding week and 12,714,280 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 85,845,706 shares, compared with 96,506,059 a year ago and 25,402,551 two years ago.

For the immediate future, however, industrial observers painted a bright picture, with General Motors plants aiming to make up for time lost during the strike.

Also mentioned as a market influence in some quarters was an impending meeting of New Deal financial heads for discussion of the influx of foreign capital. Stress was laid on this point in view of reports of a new wave of foreign buying the last few days in American securities and possibility the administration might suggest measures for control of the capital inflow.

With steel, copper, motor and farm implement shares bearing the brunt of the selling, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was shaved .1 to 73.7. Transfers totaled 1,371,060 shares against 1,453,480 last Saturday.

Some Shares Attract Buying.

Some oils, chemical, textile, merchandise and rail equipment shares attracted buying. Sears Roebuck rose 2⅝, closing within a fraction of 90. Montgomery Ward was up nearly a point at 62. Celanese advanced nearly 2 at 32⅜ and Allied Chemical added more than a point at 240½.

To Discuss Foreign Capital.

Also conspicuous among gainers were Bohn Aluminum at 48, Congoleum Around 43, Glidden Around 50, Lima Locomotive 82½, Newport Industries, 39¾, Shell Union Oil 31¼ and Worthington Pump 44¾.

Outstanding losers included U. S. Steel at 108, off nearly 2; Bethlehem at 89⅞, off more than 1; Chrysler at 132¼, down 1¾, and Anaconda at 55¼, off 2½.

Lower fractions to about 2 points were Westinghouse at 158, General Motors at 69¾, American Telephone at 182½, Southern Pacific at 49⅛, Consolidated Edison at 44¾, American Smelting at 91¾, American Tobacco "B" at 95½ and American Rolling Mill at 37¼.

U. S. Steel Near 110.

With soaring advances reminiscent of its performance in the bull market of 1929, U. S. Steel held undisputed sway as leader of the share list most of the past week.

From the outset it was catapulted forward by heavy buying, and in the bullish demonstration Thursday, provoked by settlement of the General Motors strike, it shot up more than 4 points to within a small fraction of 110 for a six-year high. This followed a similar rise on Wednesday.

The strike agreement also brought a flood of buying orders into General Motors and it climbed to new 1937 high.

But the buoyant strength of steels, motors and a few other groups did not obscure lagging trends in some other sections of the list. Utilities and rails contributed comparatively little to the forward swing, although the former improved following announcement by North American Co. and American Water Works & Electric Co. They proposed to register with the Securities & Exchange Commission under the public utility holding company act of 1935.

Developments of Week.

Persistent demand for U. S. Steel common along with other steels seemed, observers thought, to have a fairly obvious connection with the exceptionally favorable reports on the industry's operating ratio, and on shipments and backlogs of some of the larger producing companies.

Estimating the week's ingot production at 81 per cent of capacity, a record since early 1930, "Iron Age" declared major steel companies did not doubt their ability to maintain present output through the first half of the year, barring fresh labor troubles. Advices from other industrial sources and comment on wholesale and retail trade were preponderantly favorable.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose to the highest since April 20, 1931.

The bond market was less responsive. It was hesitant and narrow, reflecting reduced trading interest in connection with further talk of possible tightening of money rates. U. S. Governments held to a fairly even line, and junior rails drew moderately good support.

In the foreign exchange market some tension was noted as a result of a sharp decline in the guilder.

Prices Are Paced by Recovery Highs Set by Industrial Staples.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Paced by recovery highs set by industrial staples, commodity prices last week nudged ahead to within a fraction of the seven-year peak touched in early January.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale prices rose to 90.05 per cent of the 1926 average, compared with 89.68 a week ago and 78.17 in the same period last year.

Quotations spurted 12 per cent during the final quarter of 1936. An enormous demand swept over the markets of the world for both industrial raw materials and foodstuffs. Rising business needs played a part; so did rearmament programs of European Powers.

Shortly after the turn of the year, however, activity quieted down. Prices moved less spectacularly. The almost unanimous gains formerly noted gave way to drifting prices.

Since the closing week last year, the index has moved within a 1 per cent range, declines in some quarters being offset by boosts elsewhere.

Mixed Trend Prevails.

The same mixed trend prevailed during the latest period. Nonferrous metals, industrial and agricultural commodities equaled or bettered recovery highs. Textiles, on the other hand, fell back sharply and foods also gave ground.

Lumber was a big gainer. Although the Pacific Coast shipping tie-up has been settled and timber is moving again, heavy building activity resulting from the relatively open winter has created a scarcity.

Rubber, bituminous coal, steel scrap, tin and zinc all shared in the advance occasioned by the strong demand.

Textiles, under the leadership of cotton cloth, continued sliding. In the past four weeks this index has slumped 8.5 per cent.

The recently terminated General Motors strike is generally considered by analysts to have played a part in the downturn. More important lately, however, has been the reported tendency of buyers—with well-stocked inventories—to hold off, awaiting price stability. Wool and cotton cloth were both weak.

Steady world demand for grains bolstered quotations. Corn, wheat, oats and rye improved. Cotton dipped. Livestock was little changed, a slight upturn in cattle being the only move.

What Index Shows.

Foods were mixed, declining eggs, sugar, lard and butter more than offsetting increases in cocoa, coffee and flour.

The index, with its indices based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

LEAD, ZINC AND COPPER

Lead and zinc were nominally unchanged in St. Louis Saturday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Metal prices nominally unchanged.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Raw sugar was quiet and unchanged today at 3.55 for spots with no sales reported.

Futures were irregular. Then No. 3 contract was easier under further liquidation promoted by renewed uncertainties over the question of an excise tax on sugar. No 4 held comparatively steady on commission house buying reflecting the firmnes of London over the holiday.

In No. 3 May and July sold off from 2.63 to 2.60, or 3 to 5 points net lower, but rallied partially on trade covering and final prices were unchanged to 3 points net lower. Sales were 14,150 tons.

In No. 4 March declined to 1.11½, or 2 points net lower. The later deliveries all held above the previous close with May selling at 1.15½ and Sept. at 1.18½.

Final prices were 1½ lower to 2 higher on sales of 5900 tons.

Refined was unchanged locally at 5.00 for fine granulated although the tone was unsettled by the announcement refined had been reduced 20 points on the West coast which led to increased offerings in resale sugars at 4.70.

COTTON MARKET LITTLE LOWER AT THE CLOSE

Moderate commission house and trade buying absorbed offerings during the greater part of the day but increased pressure developed in the old crop positions toward the close.

Although southern advices reported loan cotton selling a little more freely, sales of spot cotton at the 10 designated markets for the week amounted to only 39,736 bales against 30,868 in the preceding week and 50,092 in the same week of last year.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 102,000 bales against 83,000 last year and 90,000 two years ago.

Spot quiet; middling 13.11.

PURE OIL CO. CAPITAL STRUCTURE READJUSTMENT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Pure Oil Co. stockholders will be asked to approve capital structure readjustments that may clear the way for declaration of common-stock dividends, Henry M. Dawes, president, announced today.

The program to be submitted to shareholders at a special meting March 26 will involve an increase in the number of authorized no-par-value common shares to 10,000,000 and an increase in the number of $100 par-value preferred shares to 1,000,000 shares.

Dawes said the objective of the program would be retirement of the 8 per cent preferred stock and all of the bonded and long-term debt, and to provide cash for capital expenditures.

Dawes said directors contemplated sale of $42,000,000 worth of $100 par preferred stock, which may be convertible into common shares and which will be offered to stockholders and underwriters. Proceeds would be used to retire the $28,500,000 of 15-year, 4½ per cent sinking fund notes, 76,620 shares of 8 per cent $100 par cumulative preferred stock, and $4,000,000 of long-term bank notes and for capital expenditures.

No dividends have been paid on Pure Oil's common stock since 1930. However, all arrearages on the classes of preferred stock outstanding have been cleared up. Stockholders will meet in Columbus, O.

MAY WHEAT $1.38 AT CHICAGO, PEAK PRICE IN 8 YEARS

Huge Purchases of Grain Friday for Germany and Fresh Inquiries From Same Country Prime Factor in Upturn.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Soaring about 3 cents a bushel today to $1.38½, Chicago May delivery of wheat outdid the previous topmost peak price reached in eight years.

Huge purchases of wheat yesterday for Germany, together with fresh inquiries for substantial amounts today to be shipped to that country, were largely responsible for the upward rush of values. Today's inquiries for wheat to go to Germany were in addition to 3,680,000 bushels taken yesterday from Argentina.

Dust storm reports affecting wide areas of domestic crop territory southwest and west did much also to stimulate general buying of wheat futures, and to hoist prices. In some quarters, fears were expressed that dust storms this year may equal those of 1934 and 1935, when clouds of soil particles from the great plains were blown all the way across the country eastward and out into the Atlantic.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅝@2⅝ above Thursday's finish, May, $1.37⅞@1.38; July, $1.18⅞@1.19; September, $1.14⅝; corn, ½@1¼ up; May, $1.09⅝@¾; July, $1.04⅝@¾; September, 97½@⅝c; oats, ½@¾c advanced; May, 51⅛@¼c, and rye showing 2⅛@2¼c bulge, May, $1.13½. The outcome in provisions was unchanged to 5 cents down.

At today's high point, $1.38½ for May, wheat was well above the present season's top record, $1.37¾, touched last December. This contrasted with $1.63¼, the 1929 peak. The new upturn today was in the face of disappointing action of the Liverpool market which closed at only a slight advance. At times, too, setbacks in today's Winnipeg prices served as a drag on Chicago upturns, and so likewise did apparent dearth of any export business in Canadian wheat.

Aggressive general buying of wheat futures here was most in evidence as the day approached an end. Profit-taking sales, however, expanded at the last, and caused something of a reaction from the day's top. On the upward sweep of prices, numerous stop-loss buying orders were caught.

Estimates were current that at the present rate of buying, more than half of the total surplus of wheat in Argentina will be exhausted before April 1.

Rye, corn and oats values climbed with wheat. A notable stimulus to the rye market here was 3 cents jump yesterday in Winnipeg rye quotations. On the other hand, heavy purchases of Argentine corn for Germany received considerable notice as indicating that Germany is in this respect competing with the United States.

An unexpectedly large increase of storage stocks tended to pull the provision market down.

Wheat futures purchases Thursday totaled 24,464,000 bu, corn 4,744,000. Open interest in wheat was 104,898,000 bu, and in corn 38,249,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Feb. 13.—Wheat price ranges were higher in world markets.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅝@½d higher and closed unchanged to ⅝d up, all compared with Thursday's close.

Winnipeg wheat opened ⅜c lower compared with Friday's final prices and closed ½@¾c off.

Local wheat receipts (2 days) were 75,000 bu, compared with 43,500 a week ago and 42,000 a year ago (2 days) included 25 cars local and 25 through. Corn receipts (2 days), were 184,500 bu, compared with 105,000 a week ago and 192,000 a year ago (2 days), included 100 cars local and 23 through. Oats receipts (2 days) were 46,000 bu compared with 18,000 a week ago and 42,000 a year ago (2 days), included 15 cars local and eight through.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market today soft wheat was 1@2c higher; hard, 1½@2c higher; corn and oats, ½@1c higher.

Sales made on the floor of the exchange were as follows:

WHEAT—No. 1 red winter wheat, $1.46@1.46½; No. 2 red winter wheat, $1.46@1.46½; No. 1 hard wheat, $1.46; No. 1 mixed wheat, $1.45½@1.46; No. 3 mixed wheat, $1.45.

CARDINALS AGAIN TO LACK RESERVES IN 1937, ROSTER SHOWS

HEMSLEY STILL UNSIGNED AFTER 3-HOUR TALK WITH DEWITT

Rollie Hemsley, Browns' catcher, and General Manager Bill De Witt of the club conferred for three hours late yesterday and parted without reaching an agreement on salary for the backstop for 1937.

Declining to disclose the difference that separates the player and the office on the matter of pay, both Hemsley and De Witt refused also to state the amount offered by the club.

Following the conference, Hemsley said he would depart this morning for his farm home at Dixon, Mo. His only comment on the meeting with De Witt was that he was "not satisfied" with the club's offer.

It was generally known that Hemsley received $10,000 for his services in 1936 and there have been indications during the winter that the club, now under new ownership, would ask the receiver to take a substantial reduction. On the other hand, friends of Hemsley have said he would ask for more money than he received last year.

Outfielder Beau Bell has failed to return the contract sent to him by the Browns. He and Hemsley are expected to be the only players who will give the club any difficulty over salary matters for the coming season.

Snyder Victor in Pocket Billiards

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. — Ted Snyder of Brooklyn marked up his second victory in the national amateur pocket billiards championship when he defeated Charles Oliva of Chicago 125 to 36 in an 18-inning game tonight.

Herbert Courtney of New York, the state champion, defeated J. Howard Shoemaker, former national champion from Douglaston, L. I., 125 to 113 in the second game tonight. The match lasted 35 innings with Shoemaker putting together the best run of 28 in the twenty-ninth inning. Courtney's best run was 14.

Leading players will resume action tomorrow night when Courtney plays Edward C. Rogers of Glen Cove, L. I. Rogers, with four victories and one defeat, is tied for second place with Arthur Canfield of Syracuse. Lewis Brooks of Philadelphia leads with four victories and no losses. Snyder meets James Parks of Detroit in tomorrow's other match.

DICK NEAL WINS TWO RACES IN FLORIDA OUTBOARD REGATTA

By the Associated Press.

NEW SMYRNA, Fla., Feb. 13. — Dick Neal of Kansas City, guided his bucking outboard motorboat to victory in two events today and won principal honors in the first program of the annual New Smyrna regatta.

Never out of the money in the Class B and C races, Neal had a high speed of 48.1 miles an hour in outdistancing the field in the final heat of the Class C trials.

Although he won only the first heat, Thom Cooper of Kansas City, piled up enough points to take the Class A prize. Mulford Scull, of Ventnor City, N. J., captured both final heats, but Cooper was second both times.

HERMAN SIGNS 1937 CONTRACT WITH CUBS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—The signed contract of Billy Herman, star second baseman, was received today by the Chicago Cubs. There was no announcement of his 1937 salary.

Herman's signing leaves eight Cubs still outside the fold. The club has not heard from Ken O'Dea, young catcher, and unsigned contracts have been returned by Joe Marty, Bill Jurges, Tuck Stainback, Tex Carleton, Curt Davis, Frank Demaree and Augie Galan.

GOMEZ VISITS YANKEE OFFICE, TALKS TERMS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. — Vernon (Lefty) Gomez arrived from Bermuda today and immediately stopped in at the New York Yankees' offices to register his official "kick" about the "bat-boy salary" he has been offered for his erratic southpawing in 1937.

He conferred with Business Manager Ed Barrow and, although no agreement was reached, the report was that progress was made. A new meeting was arranged for Monday.

Gomez, once the top performer of the Yankee hurling staff, had such an unimpressive season last year, that the salary offered him for the coming campaign was slashed to $7500 from the $20,000 he received in 1936.

3 World Records Set At Boston Meet; Varoff Defeats Japanese Star

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—George Varoff of Oregon, added the world's indoor pole vault record to his outdoor mark tonight when he cleared 14 feet, 4⅞ inches in his second try before a packed crowd of 14,000 at the forty-eighth Boston A. A. meet at the Boston Garden. The previous record of 14-4 was set by Keith Brown, former Yale star, in 1934.

Don Lash of Indiana turned in the meet's third world record when he raced the two miles in eight minutes 58 seconds flat, four-tenths of a second under the mark set by Paavo Nurmi 12 years ago, and defeated his closest rival, Norman Bright of San Francisco, by at least 100 yards.

Wayne Rideout of North Texas Teachers' College was third in the nine-man field. Lash took the lead on the third lap and was never challenged on any of the remaining 19.

The first world record to crash in the meet came when Sam Allen of Bristow, Ok., won his 45 yards hurdles heat in 5.7 seconds, one-tenth of a second under the record set by Monty Wells in 1927 and probably equalled a hundred times since.

Allen, however, was nosed out in the final by Johnny Donovan, Dartmouth's intercollegiate champion, who broke the tape in 5.8 seconds, equalling the old record.

After Varoff vaulted to his new record, the height was remeasured and an eighth of an inch was allowed for the sag of the bar, making the record figures 14 feet, 4⅞ inches.

Earle Meadows, the Olympic champion, was well over the bar at 14-4⅞ but his elbow knocked it off as he descended on his third try and he was forced to share second place in the pole vault with Sueo Oye, one of the two Japanese runners-up at Berlin. Oye later was awarded second place.

Jim Herbert, New York University Negro freshman, who represented the New York Curb Exchange, gained his third major victory in as many weeks when he led Charlie Beethan of Ohio State to the tape in the Hollis "600" by two yards in 1 minute 13.4 seconds.

Glenn Cunningham, America's premier miler, raced under wraps, finishing in 4:12.3, while gaining a 10-yards victory over Gene Venzke of the New York A. C. in the three-man Hunter mile. Arthur Clarke of Toronto, the Canadian champion, trailed Venzke by three-quarters of a lap.

The huge crowd sat in silence as the three stars made their 11 turns. Cunningham was rewarded with mild applause when he broke the tape. Venzke, never two yards away from Cunningham, was clocked in 1:03.6 for the quarter,

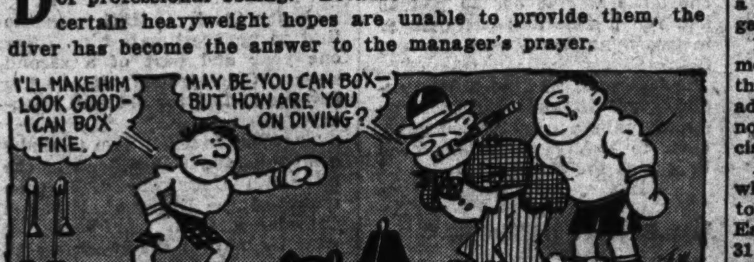
Our Tank Boxing Shows.

DAY by day diving is becoming a bigger and bigger feature of professional boxing. Because fans demand knockouts and certain heavyweight hopes are unable to provide them, the diver has become the answer to the manager's prayer.



I'LL MAKE HIM LOOK GOOD—I CAN BOX FINE.
MAY BE YOU CAN BOX—BUT HOW ARE YOU ON DIVING?

The airing given this phase of boxing "build ups" in New Orleans is by no means the first hint that has leaked out as to the nature of certain fighters' knockout records.

Long before the Torrance case developed we had the Carnera series in which Primo pushed over setup after setup until he had a record of more than 20 knockouts in one season.

Subsequently it developed that Primo did not even own a knockout punch—and this in spite of his kayo of Jack Sharkey for the title.

Build-Up Is Easy.

FOR quite reasonable sums fighters can be found with ability to "make a fight look good even while going into the tank before a heavyweight oaf who is being built up.

The practice has grown to such an extent that if a manager of a "hope" is accused of this practice he may even defend it on the ground that he wants to develop confidence and ring poise in his man, before sending him into a real encounter.

In the meantime the public is paying its good money under the impression that it is seeing a prospective champion in a real fight!

Suspicion engendered by the Carnera, Torrance and other build-up instances, may cause widespread distrust of all fighters with long knockout records in the future. And that would be unfair to boxers with 18-K knockout records.

Greedy Managers Cause It.

GREEDY managers, rather than crooked fighters, are responsible for the present situation. In many cases, as in both the Torrance and Carnera instances, the fighters probably were unaware of the manipulation of opponents.

Since the idea was to build up confidence in inexperienced fighters, these very naturally must not know that their opponents were taking "dives."

Carnera's manager, Leon See, exposed the details of the build-up of Primo. It was a sorry tale and involved some rather famous ring names. But it also showed

Here are three of the central figures in the Louisiana boxing scramble. At left is Boxer "Jack Willis," real name Jack Phillips of Brooklyn, who failed to appear to fight Jack Torrance at Baton Rouge last Wednesday night. In center is Torrance's manager, Herbert Brodie, talking to the ex-collegian prior to giving his testimony yesterday before the State Boxing Commission. Phillips and Brodie, along with Mushy Jackson, who furnished the opponent for Torrance in the former L. S. U. shotputter's first professional bout, were fined $300 each and suspended. Torrance was exonerated.

MISSOURI WINS FROM BILLIKENS BY 41-27 COUNT

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 13.—St. Louis University rallied at the start of the second half here tonight to pull up within one point of Missouri, but that constituted the one and only Billiken threat in a game which found the Tigers on top all the way and at the finish, 41 to 27.

The Missourians, with scoring plays working smoothly for the first time this season, ran their advantage to 12 to 1 in the first nine minutes of play before Frank Keaney, Bill co-captain and forward, broke the scoring ice for the St. Louisans by tossing in a rebound.

Martin Rossini, over-sized guard, was the driving force which kept the St. Louisans in the running all the way. Rossini's work stood out in many ways for his aggressive rebound gathering, pivot ball handling under the hoop and his accurate basket eye.

It was Rossini who, almost singlehanded, gave Missouri a battle in the second half. In that period he collected 10 points of the 16 the Billikens scored. His last half scoring spree and a free toss he made in the first half gave him a total of 11 points for individual game scoring honors.

Missouri's basketball crowds, famous—perhaps infamous would be the better word—for their booing, added a new wrinkle tonight. They not only booed, but also hissed decisions they didn't like.

A crowd of 3600 saw the game which was Missouri's second victory over the Bills this season. Earlier at St. Louis, Missouri won, 31 to 26.

The St. Louisans featured, for the most part, a pell-mell style of fast break, while the Tigers stuck mostly to set plays, with fast breaks coming only occasionally.

DIMAGGIO AND THE YANKS NEAR ACCORD

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13. — Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankee holdout, said today he had received a compromise offer substantially exceeding the first contract sent him.

"We haven't got together yet but things look favorable," said the young Californian. "I think everything will be straightened out next week."

Torrance's Manager, Opponent and Another Fined and Suspended

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—The Louisiana Boxing Commission today suspended three men and fined them $300 each, following an investigation of an alleged conspiracy to "throw" a scheduled fight between Jack Torrance and Jack Willis.

Torrance, former Louisiana State athlete and holder of the world record for the shot put, was exonerated of all blame by the commission.

The investigation grew out of the disappearance of Torrance's opponent shortly before they were to have fought last Wednesday night at Baton Rouge.

The men suspended were Herbert Brodie, manager of Torrence; Jack Phillips alias Jack Willis, who was to have opposed Torrance, and Mushky Jackson, who, it was testified before the Commission, furnished the opponent of Torrance in the former L. S. U. star's first professional bout.

The commission in their findings after an all day hearing declared that "this fiasco" carries "many reprehensible features."

Brodie and Willis were arrested by New Orleans detectives on request of Irwin F. Poche, secretary of the State Boxing Commission, and were held incommunicado until today's hearing on charges of conspiracy to violate the State boxing laws. Jackson had not been charged.

Told to Take "Dive," Willis Says.

Willis testified in today's hearing that he was sent to Louisiana from New York under promoter's plans for him to appear good, but "take a dive" early in the fight. He said he decided "not to go through with it" and disappeared just before the scheduled bout. The fight was called off.

Witnesses in their testimony linked the names of Mike Jacobs, New York fight promoter, and others with Torrance's venture in the professional fight ring.

Brodie, Torrance's manager, denied any knowledge of the "dive" plans for Willis, said he knew nothing about a reputed unsigned letter informing Willis to "dive" and told the commission that if Torrance made good in the prize fight ring he was to fight for Jacobs.

Jacobs Makes Statement.

Brodie said, however, that Jacobs did not have anything now to do with Torrance. In New York Jacobs, promoter for the 20th Century Sporting Club, insisted there was no basis for drawing his name into the investigation.

"I had no part in the arrangements and don't know a thing about it, beyond what I've read in the papers."

Torrance, on the witness stand, testified that he signed a 10-year contract with Brodie as his manager with a guarantee of $2500 a year and 66 2-3 per cent of gate receipts, but that he had received no money to date because Brodie had used the money for training expenses.

After voluminous testimony the

BEARS LOSE TO GRINNELL TEAM; SCORE IS 45-29

By the Associated Press.

GRINNELL, Ia., Feb. 13.—Grinnell downed a weary Washington University basketball team, 45 to 29, here tonight for the Bears' second Missouri Valley Conference defeat on successive nights by Iowa quintets.

Leading 8 to 1 after the first six minutes of play, the Pioneers kept the lead throughout the game.

Washington's only serious threat came near the close of the first half when the Bears, led by Uhlemeyer, scored six points in the last four minutes. Grinnell led at halftime 18 to 12.

The Pioneers ran the score to 24-12 early in the second half, the Bears seldom getting possession of the ball.

Luick, who scored eight field goals, was in the best shooting form of the season. Uhlemeyer, Bear forward, led the visitors with eight points.

SECOND BASE BIG PROBLEM; FOUR KNOWN GOODBOXMEN

Catching Staff Without Men of Long Experience; Bordagaray, King and Scoffic Outfield Reserves

By J. Roy Stockton

Frankie Frisch's infield and outfield problems, which were very much alive as the Cardinals courageously staggered through the 1936 pennant race to finish in a second-place tie with the Cubs, are not eliminated by the 1937 Redbird roster, just off the press.

One of the great difficulties in 1936 was that there was no satisfactory substitute when Terry Moore, Joe Medwick or Pepper Martin was forced to the bench by injury. Lynn King, a fine defensive outfielder, was just a former Drake quarterback when he tried to do things with a baseball bat. The veteran Chick Fullis was summoned in a late emergency, but Chick wasn't entirely what was needed.

The 1937 roster shows three flychasers available to help Medwick, Terry Moore and Pepper Martin. They are Stanley Bordagaray, last year with the Brooklyn Dodgers; John Rizzo, who batted .307 for the 1936 Houston club of the Texas League, and Louis Scoffic, who batted .320 for Rochester, after having been given a trial with the Cardinals during the early part of the 1936 campaign.

Fog—And No Horn Blowers.

Anyone who reaches for horns because of the presence of Bordagaray, Rizzo and Scoffic is certainly a turn-around optimist and probably a seventh son of a seventh son of a cheer leader at Vassar.

Eight infielders are on the roster. They are Johnny Mize, Stuart Martin, Leo Durocher and Don Gutteridge, forming the prospective regular infield and four reserve candidates for jobs in the first line of defense. The reserve corps includes Manager Frisch, Walter Alston, rangy first and second baseman from Huntington, W. Va.; Jimmy Brown, Rochester shortstop of 1936 and Alfred Cuccinello, Rochester second baseman.

Here are the blue notes in the infield score: Frisch scarcely can be expected to play more than a few games. Stuart Martin, convalescing after a three-weeks illness and facing the possibility of an appendix operation, is certain to miss part of the spring training period and it may be months before he regains weight and strength necessary to be considered a potential regular.

Eliminate Frisch and Stuart Martin from serious consideration and you have the pennant prospects of the Redbirds depending on an infield including Mize or Alston at first base, Alston or Brown at second, Durocher at short and Gutteridge at third.

Four and a Dozen Pitchers.

Sixteen pitchers and three catchers are listed on the reserve list of the Redbirds. The catchers, as has been told, are Brusie Ogrodowski, with one year of major league experience, and Arnold Owen and Paul Chervinko from the Columbus club of the American Association.

The pitchers may be divided into two groups. The first includes known qualities as follows: Dizzy Dean, Paul Dean, Jess Haines, Si Johnson, Mike Ryba, Lon Warneke and Jim Winford. The unproved members of the hurling department include Nathan Andrews and John Chambers from Sacramento; Morton Cooper and Bill McGee from Columbus; Ray Harrell and Bob Weiland from Rochester; Herbert Moore and Ira Smith from Houston, and Abe White, a 30-year-old pitcher without 1936 record, from Buford, Ga.

It is possible that Frisch may find some comfort in the fact that Don Padgett and Enos Slaughter from Columbus and Harold Epps, Houston, will be in camp as outfielders and may be transferred to the St. Louis reserve list if they flash major league ability.

There also will be a few infielders, pitchers and catchers in camp, in the same category. And judging from the unimpressive roster, Frisch may be looking for comfort early. Certainly it is no roster to start a civic celebration.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 13.—A bullet-like pass from the stick of Flash Martin broke up a tie and gave the Tulsa Ice Oilers a 3-to-2 victory over the St. Louis Flyers in the first overtime period of an American Association hockey game here tonight.

The overtime period was just a minute and 18 seconds old and the Flyers seemed tiring from their five games played in the last week when Bellemer gave a pass to Riley near the blue line.

In From Angle.

Riley shoved the puck to Martin who shot a sizzler clear and true from an angle. The puck rifled past Stopper Nelson's knees into the laces and the hard-fought game was won.

The game was costly for the Flyers in that they lost the services of defense man Joe Matte who got cut on the foot and will be out of play for two weeks. Little Fido Purpur got a crack on the head that necessitated eight stitches but he came back into the game after a physcian had patched him up.

The Oilers and the Flyers went at it hammer and tongs from start to finish and 4554 roared their approval. There was plain and fancy fisticuffing. A total of 20 penalties was called.

Starting with a rush the Flyers piled up a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Bobby Burns and Carbol.

Tie the Count.

The Oilers tied the score in the second chapter on goals by Martin and Bellemer, the second one coming only five seconds before the end of the period. Like the first period the second was a scramble throughout with eight penalties called as both teams set a dizzy pace.

In the third both teams missed some close shots but neither could tally the goal needed to keep the game out of the overtime period.

Fenenga Approves, Muhl Opposes New Rules, Making Football More Open Game

By Robert Morrison.

The "razzle dazzle" type of football that wows spectators has attracted a new convert—the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations which recently made fundamental changes in its forward pass rules for 1937.

The new regulations, which will affect Missouri high schools and those of 15 other state members of the federation, caused a varied reaction among St. Louis district coaches.

In effect, the altered rules make it easier for the prep teams to perform spectacular, deceptive pass plays like those steadily gaining in popularity in college games, especially in the Southwest.

Bert Fenenga of Cleveland High, representative of district coaches to the Missouri association, sympathized with the trend advanced by the new pass rules.

Clarence "Stub" Muhl of University City High, member of the American Coaches' Association, foresaw danger to the game of football in the introduction of what he called basketball tactics.

Coaches Welcome Change.

It was believed, however, most coaches of the city and county would welcome the new rules because the resulting style of play would increase spectator interest.

The rule revisions adopted by a committee at Chicago early in January were announced in the current issue of the Scholastic Coach magazine. They still remain to be written into the 1937 rule book, to be worded as the committee directed.

First of the most radical changes is the following:

"The penalty for any forward pass which is thrown from beyond the line of scrimmage will be five yards and loss of down from the spot where such pass is thrown."

The old rule, after a run and an accidentally forward-moving lateral, nullified the gain and brought the ball back to the original line of scrimmage with the loss of a down.

Coach Muhl strongly attacked the change.

"It encourages taking chances on a lateral after a run," he said, "and that's approaching basketball tactics. For that reason, I believe it endangers the game of football."

On the other hand, Coach Fenenga was much in favor of opening up the game as this change tends to do.

"It tremendously increases the razzle-dazzle, a great thing for the spectators," he explained. "It calls for smaller, faster, more agile players and gets away from the old idea of strictly man-power attack."

"Furthermore, it will call for more painstaking coaching than the old style of play demanded."

"Far more persons will go to see the razzle-dazzle. Although I doubt the advisability of constant changing the rules, there is nothing sacred about football regulations. As these changes make it a better game for the spectators I favor them."

Another Change.

No less essentially important is another forward pass rule revision which reads as follows:

"When the ball while behind the line (one yard back) is handed to a teammate who is eligible to receive a forward pass it is NOT to be considered a forward pass."

Under 1936 rules the hand-to-hand pass in a forward direction was legal but the receiver then could not make another forward throw. But he may under the new rule.

Fenenga believed this to be a really valuable improvement. He said he had always contended that on spinner plays teams using a double wing back system had nearly always violated the old rule anyway.

"The new regulation will lead to the most complicated plays ever known in football," Fenenga continued. "The runner who gets the ball on a spinner now can go in front of the back who received the center snap. That position immeasurably increases opportunity for deception."

A total of 32 rule changes were made by the national federation. Of 11 more important ones, four were concerned with forward pass penalties. But there was nothing done about interference on a forward pass, although a special committee was named to assist officials in decisions on interference.

One change set a penalty of five yards instead of 15 for a forward pass not from scrimmage. This is on kickoffs and punt returns when a lateral happens to go forward. The penalty was considered excessive.

Penalty Reduced.

Another revision temporizes the penalty for a pass touching an ineligible player. Previously the penalty was the loss of the ball. Now the rule says it will not be considered a major incompletion. If it occurs the procedure will be the same as if the ball had been touched by an eligible receiver.

This grew out of the more frequent use of the short shovel pass through the line.

Penalties between the goal lines under the 1937 code will be the usual distance unless the distance is greater than half the distance to the goal line then the penalty will be half the distance.

The sleeper play is practically barred by forbidding any player to prostrate himself either before or during the snap from center.

To prevent a player from absorbing too much punishment an "additional substitution" rule has been made. A player will be permitted to return once during the fourth quarter; that is, he may be in at the start or enter during the quarter, be taken out and be sent back in.

States besides Missouri in which federation rules are used are Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Minnesota, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Webster College Rallies, Trims Fontbonne, 27-18

Webster College rallied in the final period to defeat Fontbonne, 27 to 18, in a basketball game played under girls' rules yesterday afternoon at Fontbonne.

The losers led going into the last quarter, 15 to 13, but Barbara Vette and Ann Ritch began hitting the basket for Webster to tie the score at 17-all and then went on to win the game. Miss Ritch had 11 points and Miss Vette 10 to lead for Webster, while Kay Flynt's 10 points were high for Fontbonne.

Under girls' rules, the court is divided in half and the guards are not permitted to pass over the center line to take a shot at the basket. Neither are the forwards permitted in the guarding zone. Six players, three forwards and three guards, are on each side.

JACK SRENCO AND NEPHEWS WIN 2 TITLES AT HANDBALL

Jack Srenco retained his Downtown Y. M. C. A. handball singles championship when he defeated his nephew, Earl Srenco, 21—6 and 21—16, yesterday in the four-wall courts of the Downtown "Y".

Earl joined his younger brother, Harold, to capture the doubles laurels, defeating the twosome composed of the veteran Marshall Lehr and Simon Wolff. The scores were, 21—11, 21—12.

In the singles final, the youthful Earl was expected to give his uncle a close run. However, Jack was in good form and he finished out the first game in 12 innings and the second in 11 innings. Earl maintained a slight lead during the first five innings in the second game but was unable to stop Jack's rally in the ninth frame when the latter tied up the score, 15—15.

The doubles match was likewise unusually short, taking but six innings to finish the first game and five for the second.

The Class B singles match, which turned out to be a comedy of errors insofar as the spectators were concerned, Jim Levey managed to squeeze out Leach Cross, 7—21, 21—16, 21—16.

WRAY'S COLUMN

that Carnera was really being educated to fight.

After a time the dives were abandoned and easy marks were substituted. Eventually Carnera developed far enough to travel on his own merits. Whether he reached the top thereby, who knows?

Too bad the big, good-natured innocent Torrance should have become involved in the build-up racket. He was altogether too big and too slow ever to become a great fighter. Fast hitters like Joe Louis would have crucified him.

Today he finds himself discredited, where once he was highly regarded as the greatest amateur (shotputter) the world ever knew. He traded his birthright for a terrible mess—and not of pottage.

Fit and Ready.

CONDITION has given many a good horse or fighter victory over a less well-conditioned but more classful rival.

Which may explain the fact that, at this writing, Seabiscuit, a horse comparatively unknown to fame until late last season, is now a 6 to 1 favorite to win that one hundred grand prize, offered the winner of the Santa Anita Handicap.

Of what good is class if the legs are soft and the wind short? Conditioned rivals just breeze on by when the unfit stake horse is called on in the stretch but can't respond.

Many of the stars nominated for the big race of Feb. 27 have shown they are not ready for a hard, punishing stretch run. Rosemont, the recent favorite, was one of these.

But Seabiscuit, which was raced into condition on the Coast late last winter and early this season, has proved that he is tightened up and is fit to run the race of his life.

He won his last three races by enormous margins and in one of them he set a record—that was at one and three-sixteenths miles. He has had only one test this year, at seven-eighths of a mile, and in that he romped over some of his handicap rivals with the utmost ease.

He's a fit horse—and that's the primary requisite of a racer that must travel one and one-fourth miles.

He's Bred to Win.

BUT don't get the idea, because Seabiscuit has not hitherto been known as a handicap star, that he has not won plenty of races or that he lacks aristocratic breeding.

As a three-year-old he started 35 times, won five races, finished second seven times and was third four times. The next year (1936), in 23 starts he won nine races, was second once and third five times. He won his only start this season.

His recent record is impressive. He has won his last three races at 1 3-16 miles, one mile and seven-eighths of a mile all in track-burning time, with about the same weight he will carry in the Handicap—114 pounds. Of his last eight starts he won five and was third in each of the others.

Bred to Record-Breaking.

AND as for his breeding, well, old Hard Tack was a pretty tough racer in his time. On the dam's side he has the blood of a really great horse, the holder of a record—Whisk Broom II.

Whisk Broom II, according to the record books, picked up the enormous weight of 139 pounds and ran a mile and one quarter in two minutes flat—an amazing feat.

In Seabiscuit we find today condition, performance and breeding—and that's a combination sufficient to justify favoritism, even in a race for $100,000.

Just Baseball Inflation.

INFLATION already is with us, provided we accept some of our recent baseball statistics as fact. Thursday a dispatch informed the world that major league spring training expense bills would total $600,000.

That would mean an average of $37,500 for each of the 16 teams. But you don't see the magnates pulling any sour faces over a sum that represents the annual salary of three ace pitchers, or four first class fielders.

They merely grin and take all the credit. "It's all in a good cause and I guess we can stand it," you can almost hear them exclaim.

And, of course they can. For notwithstanding some teams go to far places such as the Pacific Coast, Mexico City and Havana, the first cost of the adventure is offset in some cases by the receipts.

The Cardinals went to Cuba last year and their brief trip cost them $2500 or so. But their receipts were $7500.

Almost every major league team cuts down the overhead of spring training at least half, thanks to exhibition game receipts or guarantees. Some teams break even.

Even Connie Mack's long trip to Mexico City will yield big financial returns—or Connie would not have arranged it.

It is highly probable that the decimal point was overlooked in that training camp cost.

The "General" Retires.

"GENERAL" ALVIN CROWDER has retired from baseball aged 37, although only 11 years of his professional service was in the major leagues.

His career was remarkable in that several managers and owners made mistakes about him.

Owner Clark Griffith was the first to underestimate him. After one year and part of a second season, Griff traded him to the Browns in 1927 for old man Zachary.

The next baseball man to make a mistake about Crowder was the late Phil DeCatesby Ball, then owner of the Browns. Although Crowder pitched two years of winning ball for the Browns, Ball was so eager to get rid of Heinie Manush that he threw in his great pitcher as lagniappe in a deal that brought Goose Goslin to St. Louis.

Probably that was the world's greatest baseball bargain for Griff, who thus was getting back the pitcher whom he once discarded.

Crowder then proceeded to show up the St. Louis officials' judgment. In three successive full seasons he won 68 victories for Washington, an average of more than 21, tieing Lefty Grove one year with 26 victories in 1932.

But in the middle of the 1934 season Crowder weakened and Griffith again had cold feet. This time he thought Crowder was through and he traded him to the Tigers for the waiver price.

Once more Crowder surprised and pained the man who traded him. The following year he won 16 victories, helping to pitch Detroit into the world series. In the world championship that year he won one game—the only one he pitched.

Crowder's career is an object lesson to managers not to give up on a pitcher just because he happens to have a slack season.

MURRAY QUITS MARQUETTE TO COACH VIRGINIA

By the Associated Press.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 13.—Norton Pritchett, University of Virginia athletic director, announced today that Frank J. Murray, head football coach at Marquette University since 1922, had accepted a similar post at Virginia.

Murray will succeed Augustus G. Tebell, former Wisconsin end, who has been head coach at Virginia for three seasons, before which he was for four years a backfield assistant. Pritchett said Tebell would be retained on the athletic staff as head coach of basketball and baseball if "satisfactory arrangements can be made."

Coach Murray's teams, three times, in 1922, 1923 and 1930, have been undefeated, and three times, in 1931, 1935 and 1936, they have lost only one regular game.

Last year Marquette defeated Wisconsin, St. Louis, Michigan State, St. Mary's, Creighton and Mississippi, losing only to Duquesne of the 1936 schedule, but his team dropped a post season game to Texas Christian University.

Pritchett did not reveal the tenure or salary terms for the new coach. He said, however, that Murray reached an agreement with Virginia officials today after six weeks of negotiations.

PARTICIPANTS in the North American speed championships, chafing under the restraint of warm weather which melted the ice and forced a day's postponement, turned today to other pursuits.

The second day's competition was put off until tomorrow, leaving Frank Stack of Sudbury, Ont., and Miss Maddy Horn of Beaver Dam, Wis., still leaders of the senior men's and women's divisions.

With the mercury at 50 and the municipal rink, scene of the competition, buried deep in slush, Leo Freisinger and Eddie Schroeder, Chicago members of the 1936 American Olympic team, indulged in a round of golf.

The State dog sled Derby scheduled to start today, was postponed until next week-end.

SHAMROCKS TO PLAY FIVE-GAME SOCCER SERIES IN MEXICO

CASINO ESPANOL OFFER ACCEPTED BY OFFICERS OF ST. LOUIS CLUB

First Contest to Be Decided Late Next May—Former Champions May Add New Athletes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO, D. F., Feb. 13.—Negotiations were closed here today by the Casino Espanol of this city to bring to Mexico the famous Shamrock soccer club of St. Louis, Mo., three-time winner of the United States soccer championship. Baltazar Junco, president of the Casino Espanol, announced that he was in receipt of a communication from William Lehman, business manager of the St. Louis club, in which the Shamrocks accepted Mexico's terms for a series of five games to start late in May.

Mexico's leading clubs begin a five-week series with the Independiente club of Buenos Aires, Argentina, here tomorrow.

Negotiating for Some Time.

Bill Lehman, one of the organizers of the Shamrock club, active player and official, said last night that he had telegraphed acceptance of terms for a series of games in Mexico.

'We have been carrying on negotiations for several weeks," said Lehman. "We received an invitation to visit Mexico as long ago as 1935, but were not in position to accept because many of our better players were otherwise engaged. When we turned down the trip at that time, the New York Americans accepted, and, with the assistance of Billy Gonsalves and Buff Donelli, broke even in a six-game series."

Lehman said that the Mexican trip was but one feature of what he expects to be a very busy spring and early summer season for the Shamrocks.

May Add Several Players.

"It looks as though we have a better chance of winning the national challenge cup than we had last season, and that means that we should be engaged in cup matches until early April," he said. "Then, we hope to have the Argentine team now in Mexico visit us, and after that we expect to play one game with the Charlton Club of London, leaders of the English League. There's plenty of high-class competition ahead of us. Our job is to keep our club at top strength."

Lehman said that he reserved the right to add several players to his roster for the visit to Mexico.

No St. Louis club, as a unit, has engaged in a foreign tour since 1920, when a picked team, aided by several America-born Eastern players, toured Sweden and other Scandinavian countries under the direction of Thomas W. Cahill, then secretary of the United States Football Association. Frequently, since that time, St. Louisans have been picked on representative United States teams for international tournament play, both Olympic and "open."

COOPER LEADS HOUSTON OPEN GOLF WITH 138

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 13.—Lighthorse Harry Cooper of Chicago stood alone at the half-way mark of the $3000 Houston Open golf tournament tonight—five shots ahead of the field and four strokes better than a tough par that mastered everyone but himself.

Cooper tacked a subpar 70 to his opening 68 for a 138 total — far ahead of the two youngsters tied for second place with 143's.

Lanky Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., and Sammy Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., ex-caddy, were trailing the little Chicago links master while the remainder of the field was spread-eagled.

Cooper, leading money winner of the winter swing, worked methodically at River Oaks par 35-36—71 for his 70. He managed three birdies but slipped over par twice.

Six strokes behind after a wobbly 74 yesterday Snead loosed six birdies and finally whipped par by two shots today. He rang up successive birdies at the fifth, sixth and seventh holes and picked up three more on the last nine.

Nelson was in a great spot to challenge Cooper's lead but faltered on the incoming nine holes.

At 147 were Jack Burke, home club professional; Zell Eaton of Oklahoma City; Orville White of St. Louis; Wood and Smith.

Ten shots behind Cooper at 148 were Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill.; Ben Loving of Richmond, Va.; Hack Williford, San Antonio, low amateur; Ed Dudley and Picard.

Thirty-six holes will complete the 72-hole tourney tomorrow. The winner carries off $700. All gate proceeds over the $3000 prize money will be given to the Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EAST NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 13. —The German-American soccer club of Philadelphia, defending champions in the National Challenge Cup Competition conducted by the United States Football Association, was eliminated in a second round match today by the Irish-American F. C. The score was 1 to 0.

Last Sunday, at Philadelphia, these teams played a 1-1 tie.

SHAMROCKS IN RETURN GAME WITH 'TOUGHEST FOE' OF SEASON

As they prepare to face the Graphite Bronze Club of Cleveland in an exhibition match at Public Schools Stadium this afternoon, the Shamrocks are aware that they have a particularly difficult task on their hands. When the Graphites played here earlier in the season, the Shamrocks were rudely shocked out of their self-satisfied attitude by a young man named Jimmy McDermott who cut between the St. Louis fullbacks for three beautiful goals. True, the Shamrocks put on terrific pressure late in the game to win, 5 to 3, but it was largely a question of "muscling their way through," as one keen soccer fan puts it.

McDermott is back again, after having scored two goals against the Bartunek club in a National Cup match. Thus, in two games against the best clubs in the West, this slippery, sharp-shooting center forward has scored five goals. He is spoken of by Shamrock players as perhaps the best center forward in the country. Bill Watson will try this afternoon to discover whether it's all true. Watson was not in the lineup when the Graphites visited here before, and young Eddie Begley tried, with some success, to keep an eye on McDermott. Watson, back in his best form now, will be put to a real test this afternoon.

Today's match is an exhibition affair.

RALPH ALEXANDER.

Ralph Alexander, outfielder, first baseman and all-round athlete at Kirksville Teachers' College, was signed to a Brownie contract yesterday and will report to Manager Rogers Hornsby at San Antonio, Tex., with the second squad, Gerald Holland, director of information for the St. Louis American League club announced last night.

Alexander, who weighs 205 pounds and is half an inch taller than six feet, bats and throws right-handed, and he swung the war club so effectively at Kirksville that he was always between .380 and .400. He played football, baseball and basketball under Coaches Don and Fred Faurot. He was baseball captain in 1936 and co-captain of the undefeated 1936 football team and earned nine letters at the school.

Louisiana commission deliberated the case a short while and termed it a "fiasco." Their findings declared that the billed Torrance-Willis match "carries many reprehensible features."

"Jack Torrance," their report stated, "has been the innocent victim of a series of unfortunate circumstances and we feel that he should be entirely exonerated from all blame and responsibility."

Brodie denied the charge he instructed "Jack Willis" to "look good and throw the fight early" in the Torrance-Willis scheduled bout last week in Baton Rouge.

Brodie entered his denial after being accused in the hearing by Willis, who was brought into the room while Brodie was on the stand and made his charge.

"You know I didn't say anything like that," Brodie declared.

Brodie testified that his methods of picking opponents for Torrance had been regular, but that "naturally he didn't want to get anybody who would make Jack look bad."

Brodie said Willis was furnished him by a man he named as Sammy Bogel of New York.

James A. Rockhold, promoter of a fight that fizzled between Torrance and Willis, testified Willis told him Tuesday that he was supposed to "take it" for a knockout in the first round.

Willis, whose identity had remained in doubt, said today he was Jack Phillips of (525 Fifty-fourth street) Brooklyn, N. Y. He showed a New York boxing license card bearing his photograph and the name "Jack Phillips."

Rockhold testified Willis arrived in Baton Rouge Monday, two days before the fight, but did not work out.

"Willis told me before the fight, I think it was Tuesday," Rockhold testified, "that he was supposed to take it (the dive).

"I went before the boxing commissioner and told him and the referee warned Willis that he had to fight."

A. Katz, New Orleans promoter of Torrance fights, testified that he had had dealings with both Herb Brodie, Torrance's manager, and Mike Jacobs, New York boxing promoter, in putting on Torrance's New Orleans fights.

Rockhold testified Brodie told him that for 52½ per cent he would furnish both Torrance and his opponent for the Baton Rouge bout and that Brodie said "That is the way the others do in this business."

W. I. Spencer, sports editor of the Baton Rouge Morning Advocate, testified Willis, or Phillips, turned over to him at the police station a typed, unsigned letter purporting to instruct the fighter to box under the name of "Jack Willis" and to appear good and "take a dive" in the first round.

The letter, Spencer testified, was enclosed in an envelope of the New York Hippodrome. He said he turned both letter and envelope over to the police.

Spencer said Willis admitted that "Jack Willis" was not his name and told him that his real name was "Arthur Huttick."

Spencer testified Willis told him he had intended to fight under his proper name but, after he arrived in Baton Rouge and saw the preparations made for "Jack Willis," he just decided he would go through under that name.

20 PLAYERS OF 22 IN SOCCER CUP GAME TODAY ARE YOUNGSTERS

Youth and speed are the most striking characteristics of the two St. Louis Soccer League clubs, Optimists and Burkes, who meet at West Side Park this afternoon in a first round National Cup match. Out of the 22 players scheduled to start, not more than two are in the veteran class; Eddie Hart, manager and captain of the Optimists, and Henry Diaz of the Burkes. Many of the others are in their first year of professional soccer and several are in their 'teens.

This youthful appearance of both teams does not necessarily mean that the game will develop into a kick-and-rush contest. As a matter of fact, no team in the league plays better combination football than the Spanish boys who make up the Burke club, and Eddie Hart has likewise driven home in the minds of his youngsters the wisdom of nice passing. Both have proved under all sorts of field conditions that they have excellent defensive teams. Goals should be few unless the Optimists develop stage fright.

Manager Emil Cueto of the Burkes finds himself in such good shape regarding playing material that he will not start Joe Garcia, a crack left fullback, nor Joe Diaz, an exceptional halfback. The Garcia family, however, will be well-represented with brother Art at outside right, and brother Lou at center forward.

Play opens at 2:15 p. m.

INDIAN BROOM WHIPS OTHER CANDIDATES FOR $100,000 STAKE

MR. BONES CUTS VICTOR'S LEAD IN POWERFUL STRETCH DRIVE

King Saxon, a Sprinter, Sets Early Pace and Finishes Third, Ahead of Red Rain and Grand Mintou.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 13.—Indian Broom, Major Austin C. Taylor's outstanding candidate for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, came from behind today to win the Glendora Handicap at Santa Anita over four other crack entries in the approaching rich classic.

With a sudden show of energy, Jockey Basil James booted Indian Broom into the front as the select field turned for home in the vest-pocket edition of the Santa Anita Handicap (to be run Feb. 27) and won by a length and a quarter over Jock Whitney's great colt, Mr. Bones.

King Saxon of the A. B. Spreckels Stable finished third after setting a blistering pace. Cornelius V. Whitney's Red Rain was fourth and Raoul Walsh's French born four-year-old Grand Mintou was last.

Indian Broom ran the mile and one-sixteenth over a good track in 1:44 3-5.

The $1500 Glendora drew special interest with its select field of Santa Anita Handicap eligibles, but the main plum of the day, a purse of $10,000, went to California-bred three-year-olds and upwards, a mile and one-sixteenth race styled the Santa Catalina.

In the Glendora, King Saxon, held up the start and left the gate from the outside but jumped into an early lead. He held it to the far turn, and then James began to open the throttle on Indian Broom and move up on the outside.

Johnny Gilbert gave Mr. Bones the whip, passed King Saxon in the stretch and was driving hard at the finish, but could not overtake Indian Broom.

Indian Broom paid $3.60, $2.60 and $2.20.

Mr. Bones paid $3.20 and $2.60, and King Saxon $3.20. Sangreal and Sarada were scratched.

JACKSON MEETS OTTO STEIN IN BOWLING MATCH

By Clem Glaub

Following a two-week layoff because of tournament competition, the Classic Sunday Traveling Bowling League will resume play tonight at the Melene Recreation alleys.

In addition to the regular league matches, a three-game match has been arranged by E. C. Gillett, secretary, which will pit Lowell Jackson, individual match-game champion of St. Louis, against Otto Stein Jr., former national match-game titleholder.

The teams will take the alleys with the Hermanns, Budweisers and Silver Seals tied for the league leadership, each team winning 23 games while losing 10. The Hermanns will face the Club Plantation, the Budweisers oppose the Witeks, and the Seals play the Say-It-With-Flowers.

An A. B. C. ruling which prohibits two alley men on the same team has forced Jackson out of the Plantation lineup. He probably will roll with the Silver Seals against the Flowers. Hank Summers of the Plantations also is an alley man.

The match with Stein will be Jackson's first in an individual event since he won the city title at the Mid-Town alleys last month, when he defeated a select field of 10 bowlers for the right to represent St. Louis in a national tournament.

Stein won his match game title in 1934 when he defeated Joe Miller of Buffalo but lost it the following year to Hank Marino of Milwaukee, present champion. Marino recently retained his title by winning from Miller in a challenge match.

Ray Newton is leading the Traveling league in average with a mark of 210, closely followed by his teammate and doubles partner, Harold Schaeffer, who has a 207 figure. Newton also holds high-three total with 782 and has scored the only 300 game registered in the Traveling circuit.

Indian Broom moved up steadily on the outside of the early leaders after going half the distance and getting to the front around stretch turn drew away from Mr. Bones in the last eighth to win handily. Mr. Bones was closest to King Saxon while racing under restraint in the early part and made a game effort to hold the winner. But was not good enough on the slippery going. King Saxon acted bad at the post and broke in quickly from outside the gate and made the pace for the first six furlongs then tired. Red Rain was pinched off soon after the start and dropped far back on the field in the first half mile, but made up much ground in the final quarter. Grand Manitou was forced to race in the worst part of the track next to the rail and tired badly after being prominent for three quarters.

Pistol Shot Opens Trout Seaso n.

MONDAY, March 1, will find thousands of Missourians, either native or adopted, standing on the banks of rippling streams as another trout season gets under way. As usual an official starter will shoot his pistol, denoting that dawn has arrived and time for the big splash has come.

These starters are the game wardens of each State park in which fishermen, and fisherwomen, will be matching their skill with the hungry rainbows.

Scenes of anticipated major activities include Bennett Spring State Park in Dallas and Laclede counties, Roaring River in Barry County and Montauk in Dent County. Last year huge throngs lined the banks for hundreds of yards at a time; this year's crowds are expected to even exceed those of 1936, because the trout supply has increased.

Due to the broad program of trout hatchery enlargement and improvement along with more scientific feeding practices permit more rapid and economical production of fish flesh, the Game and Fish Department will release 25 per cent more fish for the season's opening. Only fish 10 inches or more in length will be used, although the legal "over-all" is only eight inches.

According to G. N. Herndon of the Fish Hatcheries Bureau, "the fish this year in comparative growth are four months in advance of last year. Furthermore, the fish are more hearty, more thrifty, and more comparable in fighting ability as well as in texture and flavor of flesh, with trout raised in wild state. These conditions are due to the change in diet necessitated by fish food costs and dictated by the results of experimental feeding conducted the past few years by the Game and Fish Department."

Ten Pounds the Limit.

RULES for trout fishing in Missouri are simple. Everyone fishing on a State park must have either the $1.00 county or the State $2.50 hunting and fishing license or the non-resident $1.00 trip license good for 15 days. Residents of a county or resident women or minor children do not need licenses.

The daily creel limit is a total of 10 trout or a total of not more than 10 pounds. Minimum length of trout is eight inches.

Certain areas restricted only to flyfishing will be plainly marked off and persons violating these sanctuaries will be arrested for trespassing under the State park rules.

State-Owned Quail Hatchery.

LOOKING forward a few months it is interesting to note that a modern State quail hatchery will be installed on a 40-acre tract of land a mile west of Easton, Buchanan County. Purchase of the land at $50 per acre was completed last week by the State Game and Fish Commissioner. The tract is in a wooded hollow on the St. Joseph-Easton road and is said to be ideally located for the purpose. The facilities of the Northwest Missouri Quail Club at the hatchery in St. Joseph will be transferred to the State hatchery.

This will be the first state-owned quail hatchery in Missouri. Others are leased and will continue as before. The hatchery will have a capacity of 10,000 birds per year. Chukar partridges will be raised in addition to the quail. The Chukar is much more easily raised than quail and is a fast, hard-flying bird.

Outdoor Notes.

WEATHER has interfered with the progress of work in all the State parks, but every effort is being made to carry on. Work at Bennett Springs Park is concentrating on the new dining lodge in anticipation of an overflow crowd on March 1 . . . might be a disappointment to everyone if March 1 turned out to be a blustery, snowy, dreary day . . . that is, everyone but the trout . . . from rumors going round there will be a fair share of "worm fishing" for the rainbows . . . this is always whispered among some groups but the meat getters seem to like the idea at times . . . already a few of the casters are getting the kinks out of their elbows and the rust off the reels as they swish their bamboos at the Forest Park casting pier... the first Fish Commission of Missouri was established by the Legislature in 1878, consisting of but one member with an annual appropriation of the entire sum of $1000 . . . the following year a trio made up the commission . . . each serving for a four-year term . . . Alfred R. McKinley, holder of Miller County's long-distance fly flip, of better than 100 feet, will demonstrate his "big stuff" at Bennett Spring Park . . . plenty of 50-foot casters will run close competition on the creel, probably.

NORMANDY RALLIES IN FOURTH PERIOD TO WIN FROM WEBSTER FIVE

Led by Forward Van Deven, Normandy High School's basketball team rallied in the final quarter last night to defeat the Webster Groves High five, 24 to 22, at Webster.

The teams were tied at the half, each scoring eight points in the opening quarter and three in the second. Then the home team outscored Normandy in the third quarter, 6 to 4.

In the final period Van Deven counted a field goal and three free throws to send Normandy into the lead which it held to the end.

GRANITE CITY WINS FROM ANNA-JONESBORO IN OVERTIME GAME

In a thrilling basketball battle that required two overtime periods to decide the winner, Granite City defeated Anna-Jonesboro last night in a non-conference high school game at Granite City. The score was 38 to 33.

Tied at the end of regulation time, 31-all, the two teams managed to stay on even terms when Bill Harrison scored for Granite City and Mulkey knotted the count at 33-all in the first extra period.

Granite City then scored on field goals by Dick Yates and Cameron Van Buskirk, who also tallied a free throw, to give the winners five points while Anna-Jonesboro was held scoreless in the second extra session.

25 FRESHMEN TO ANSWER EARLY FOOTBALL CALL AT ST. LOUIS U.

By James M. Gould

With a squad expected to reach 25 in number, Head Coach Cecil Muellerleile of St. Louis University will start aspiring freshmen on their spring football work tomorrow. Daily afternoon sessions will be held at Walsh Memorial Stadium with lectures filling in when the weather makes outdoor practice impracticable.

While the Billikens will lose only eight varsity regulars by graduation, the men who have finished their collegiate football careers were stars and will take considerable replacing. Those who graduate in June are Lou Drone, quarterback; Dick Fitzgerald and Tom Mitchell, ends; Pete Keleman and Ben Putnam, guards; Marty Rossini, tackle, and Norm Kloepper and Ralph Hemp, backfield men.

St. Louis U. appears to be well fortified with backfield men, but the line will need plenty of patching. Therefore, Coach Muellerleile and his assistants will give the freshmen coming up who see themselves as varsity linemen real attention.

Eight of the youngsters are given better than even chances of making the varsity in their sophomore year. These are Mel Aussieker, formerly of Normandy, and Denny Cochrane, East St. Louis, in the backfield; Joe Drabelle, a red-headed center from McBride; Carol Mundt, Soldan, a tackle; George Garrelts, also a tackle, from Quincy, Ill.; Jim Tierney, a guard, from Webster; Dan O'Sullivan, a big lineman, C. B. C.; Dick Brooks, an end, from Springfield, Ill., and Brian Burnes, a quarterback, from C. B. C.

Bill Foehr, Ralph Bridges, Billy Ratican, Ralph Holtschlag, Frank Boro, Louis Barth, Al Chase, Manuel Chavez, R. Filipczak, Bill La Barge, Bob Sackbauer, Bob Sanders, Bob Smith and Bill Watts all are considered to be of high promise, but can better be rated after the spring practice season.

Bill Cochrane and Charley Harris, both of whom played on the varsity two years ago, will return to the team as eligibles. Their experience makes them more than ordinarily valuable.

Coach Jimmy Conzelman, at Washington U., will call out his football men for indoor work tomorrow also. Both freshmen and varsity players have received the call. The Bears' baseball squad also will report.

Schedule Lacrosse Games.

The Mount Washington Lacrosse team, national champion last year, has scheduled games with Swarthmore, Princeton, St. John's, Maryland, Navy and Yale.

AUTO MEN'S PAYROLL HIGHEST ON RECORD

Now $800,000,000 Yearly—Output Last Year Worth $3,626,612,000.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 13.—Increased by $40,000,000 this week, the steadily-growing payroll of the automobile industry today stands at the highest point on record.

Increases in the last four years have increased the aggregate earnings of automobile workers from the depression low of $278,000,000 in 1932 to nearly $800,000,000. In 1932 the product of the industry, including parts, had a wholesale value of $793,045,300; last year it reached $3,626,612,000. The previous high in earnings for any year was in 1928 when the payroll of the industry totaled $747,000,000.

Wage increases were announced this week by General Motors Corporation, the Chrysler Corporation and Packard.

General Motors announced increases averaging 5 cents an hour and totaling $25,000,000 a year. Similar increases were put into effect in November when the corporation also announced distribution of a $10,000,000 Christmas appreciation fund.

Alfred P. Sloan Jr., General Motors president, said the November and February increases would increase wages to about 25 per cent above the highest prevailing in the pre-depression period.

The Chrysler increases averaged 10 per cent and totaled $13,000,000 to $14,000,000 a year.

Packard increases increased the yearly payroll about $2,000,000 and averaged about 5 cents an hour.

These companies produce about 60 per cent of the nation's automobiles and trucks. Their announcements leave the Ford Motor Co. as the only major company that has not made general wage increases in the past year.

A member of the Ford organization, asked if any increases were planned, said wage increases with it "are a continuous process" and that its wage rates "are still well above those of the other companies."

Another Ford official said the company had increased wages by $44,843,000 during 1936 and that the average hourly pay was now 83 cents. The payroll rise was caused partly by an increase in the number of workers from 108,000 to 128,000, the official stated, but the annual earnings of the workers were increased $141 a man on an average.

In addition to the money distributed through wage increases, the automobile industry is spending millions of dollars a month for plant expansion. During the last two years the industry has spent $150,000,000 for this purpose and for increasing inventories.

150 BUSINESS MEN INDORSE SLAY FOR ALDERMAN

Democratic Organization Backs William B. Walsh, Deputy Constable, for Place.

Alderman John R. Slay of the Seventh Ward was indorsed for reelection yesterday at a meeting of about 150 business men at the German House, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues, at which a Slay-for-Alderman Club was formally organized with George Goodwin as president.

Slay, first elected with 13 other Democratic Aldermen in April, 1933, has been identified with the anti-administration faction in the Board, and is being opposed by Mayor Dickmann for re-election.

The Seventh Ward organization headed by Park Commissioner Joseph J. Mestres, ward committeeman, has indorsed William B. Walsh, a deputy constable, for the Democratic nomination for Alderman of the ward.

CHANGE IN LAW TO PRESERVE BALLOTS THREE YEARS URGED

Resolution Calling for Amendment by Legislature Adopted by Grand Boulevard Association.

A resolution urging the Legislature to amend the law permitting destruction of ballots one year after an election, so as to require that ballots be preserved for three years, was passed Friday night at a meeting of the Grand Boulevard Association at Carpenter Branch Library, Grand boulevard and Utah street.

The purpose of preserving ballots for three years would be their possible use as evidence in an election fraud proceeding. Although the statute of limitations does not operate to bar prosecution in election fraud cases until after three years, it is possible under the present law that the evidence on which such prosecutions might be based might be destroyed after one year.

STATE WELFARE COMMITTEE WILL MEET ON FEB. 22

It Will Consider Desirability of New Department to Administer Social Security.

TWO PLANS READY FOR CONSIDERATION

One by Gov. Park's Board Other by Relief Administrator Crosley Differ Only in Minor Details.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 13.—The State Public Welfare Committee, authorized by the Legislature at the request of Gov. Stark, will meet in Jefferson City Feb. 22, to begin an investigation of the desirability of a new governmental department to administer social security and other public welfare activities in Missouri.

Senator Allen McReynolds of Carthage, ranking member of the committee of 10, issued the call for the meeting.

Two proposals for the creation of a public welfare department will be available for consideration. One was prepared by former Gov. Park's Committee on Social Security, of which Senator McReynolds was chairman, and the other by Wallace Crossley, State Relief Administrator, in a report to Park.

The Social Security Committee recommended that the Board of Managers of the State eleemosynary institutions be reorganized into a new department to include administration of most of the services involved under the Social Security Act and the activities now directed by the Eleemosynary Board.

Park Board Plan.

The plan provides for the creation of the following four divisions in the department: public assistance, to include general relief, old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, and aid to the blind; child welfare; institutions, for the insane, feeble minded and the tuberculosis, and statistics and records.

Appointment by the department's governing board of a director of recognized qualifications was urged by the McReynolds Committee, which also recommended that a subordinate non-partisan board of four members in each county be named by the State board to cooperate in carrying out the welfare services in the county.

Pointing out the need for experienced administrators under such a plan, the committee in its report said: "It is of particular importance that as the work is carried on, the State should put forth a persistent effort to evolve the same high grade of personnel and administrative standards in this field that have been developed in such fields as that of public education."

Crossley's Proposals.

Administrator Crossley, in presenting his plan, said: "Unless there is some real State planning in regard to public welfare and the social securities program, so that coordination and efficiency in administration may be secured at the outset, it will be costly to the taxpayers and unfair to those unfortunate citizens for whom the State and local subdivisions are assuming responsibility."

His suggestions for a State department were almost identical with those of the Social Security Committee. The differences were on minor details of the administrative organization.

The new committee has been directed to present a plan for the department to the General Assembly. Its members include, in addition to McReynolds: Senator Donnelly of Lebanon, Senator Dail of Marceline, Representatives Morris E. Osburn of Shelbyville, Frank J. Iffrig of St. Peters, and Howard Elliott of University City, Maj. Albert B. Lambert, St. Louis; Claude C. Earp, Nevada; W. T. Kemper, Kansas City, and W. Ed Jameson, president of the Eleemosynary Board.

ARMY ENGINEERS DEMOBILIZE FLOOD FORCES AT CAIRO

Similar Action at New Madrid, Mo.; Normal High Water Patrol Maintained.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 13.—United States Army engineers began demobilizing their emergency flood forces at Cairo, Ill., and New Madrid, Mo., today while the high water threat subsided, Lieutenant-Colonel Eugene Reybold, district engineer, announced tonight.

"However, the normal high water maintenance and patrolling forces will be retained," he said. "Additional demobilization, progressively downstream, will be ordered when justified by further fall in the river stage."

The gauge at Cairo showed a fall of about five feet from the record crest of 59.62 feet. At New Madrid it was down three feet.

Col. Reybold said the Memphis gauge had been stationary practically for the last 12 hours, with an average stage of 49.55 feet, a fall of about 3 feet from the crest.

HULL'S AIDS DISCUSS NEUTRALITY PROGRAM

Take Up Study of Legislation With Senate Committee; No Conclusions.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—An inconclusive discussion with state department spokesmen started the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today on its study of permanent neutrality legislation.

Committee members said major points of controversy were not reached.

Chairman Pittman (Dem.), Nevada forecast afterward that the committee would act "at a very early date." He called another meeting for Wednesday, when he said he expected Secretary Hull would attend.

Assistant Secretary Moore led the State Department delegation. Pittman said his own bill was chosen by them "for the purposes of discussion." He did not say, however, that they had indorsed it.

Pittman discounted differences between his bill and a measure offered by Clark (Dem.), Missouri; Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan; Nye (Rep.), North Dakota; and Bone (Dem.), Washington. He said he had amended his proposal again to bring it in line with the bill offered by these former members of the Senate Munitions Committee.

Pittman's amendment would bar insurance of goods shipped during a war in violation of the neutrality program.

In talking with reporters, he contended his bill would prevent American ships from going into war zones, whereas the other measure would prevent only American cargoes from entering these zones.

"Both my bill and the Clark bill protect against American citizens losing their cargo," Pittman said. "My bill goes farther and attempts to protect the lives of American seamen on American ships by prohibiting the ships from transporting to belligerents things that would probably cause the sinking of the ship."

The former Munitions Committee members have contended there was a great difference in the amount of discretion allowed the President under their bill and the Pittman measure.

The committee chairman said the controversy which bears promise of being the most troublesome, over "freedom of the seas," was not mentioned at today's session.

HEAVY INCREASE IN SALE OF STATE AUTO LICENSES

Total 130,000 Increase of 30,000; Arrests for Failure to Have Tags Begin Tuesday.

About 9800 new State automobile licenses were sold in the annual eleventh-hour rush at the St. Louis office at 1701 Chestnut street yesterday, it was estimated when the office closed at 4:30 o'clock. Total sales to date this year amount to 130,000, or about 30,000 more than were sold at the same time last year.

Arrests for failure to have new plates are scheduled to begin Tuesday. Persons arrested for not having new licenses will be required to make $500 bond for appearance in the Court of Criminal Correction on charges of not having proper license plates. Penalty upon conviction is a fine of from $5 to $500.

At the county branch of the State license office at 7816 Forsythe boulevard, Clayton, it was estimated when the office closed at 5 p. m. that about 2600 licenses had been sold during the day, bringing total sales this year to about 35,000. Long lines stood in front of both city and county offices most of the day.

JUDGE NOLTE DEFERS WILFRED JONES RULING

Considering Case for and Against Accepting Baby Broker's Resignation as Lawyer.

Decision on acceptance or rejection of Willfred Jones' resignation as a member of the bar was postponed until next Saturday by Circuit Judge Julius R. Nolte of Clayton after Grover C. Sibley, a member of the State Bar Advisory Committee and of the St. Louis Bar Disciplinary Committee, opposed acceptance at a hearing yesterday.

Jones, in St. Louis City Jail under 10-year penitentiary sentence for his part in the mail fraud growing out of the great Muench baby hoax, tendered his resignation to Judge Nolte last Monday, three days after the St. Louis Bar Committee had filed a disbarment suit against him in St. Louis Circuit Court.

The St. Louis County Bar Disciplinary Committee, asked by Judge Nolte for its opinion, had recommended acceptance of Jones' resignation, pointing out he had been admitted to the bar by the County Circuit Court in 1903. In continuing yesterday's hearing, Judge Nolte asked the St. Louis committee to file written suggestions.

Sibley told the Court that although the St. Louis committee did not oppose speedy and economical disposition of the question of Jones' legal status it was of the opinion that a Circuit Judge was without authority to accept resignation of an attorney. Although a Circuit Court might remove the name of an attorney from the roll of lawyers authorized to practice in that court, Sibley said, it was questionable whether acceptance of a resignation would bar the attorney from practice in other courts in the State.

Moreover, he continued, such action in the County Circuit Court might confuse the issue of jurisdiction, since the St. Louis Circuit Court already had accepted jurisdiction of the disbarment suit. Jones has been ordered by Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood of St. Louis to show cause March 11 why he should not be disbarred.

If Judge Nolte should accept Jones' resignation, Sibley suggested, a court record should be made, showing the reasons for resignation so that should Jones seek reinstatement, in event of affirmance of his 10-year sentence and his subsequent release from prison, the facts would be available to the Judge to whom he applied. Jones is 65 years old.

Sibley, who was in Clayton courthouse on another matter, was called in to the hearing by Judge Nolte, who said he wanted to proceed with caution in view of the disbarment suit against Jones in St. Louis.

TENANCY COMMITTEE FOR LAND PROFITS TAX

Decides on Measure to Avoid Periodic Booms and Rapid Farm Turnover.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—President Roosevelt's Farm Tenancy Committee has decided to recommend a Federal tax on profits made from selling land within five years after acquiring it, as a means to prevent periodic land booms and to discourage the rapid turnover of farm property.

The committee's recommendations for a broad Federal and state effort to solve tenancy problems are scheduled to reach the President early next week.

In addition to the tax, it was said the committee would propose creation of a farm security corporation to buy good farms and sell them to selected tenants, at low interest and on a 40-year payment plan. Tenants would have to pass a five-year trial before they could contract to purchase. It will also urge Federal purchase of 100,000,000 acres of poor crop land to be retired from cultivation. This would be bought at the rate of 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 acres annually.

Creation of a farm security administration to direct tenancy reforms, and expansion of credit facilities on a more liberal basis than offered by the Farm Credit Administration and other agencies are also on the program.

The committee majority also was reported to favor State legislation which would: Improve landlord-tenant relations; set up arbitration councils to settle lease disputes; provide compensation for tenants who improve rented property, and amend tax laws to aid small farmers.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, chairman of the committee, would, under its recommendations, be responsible generally for administration of the program.

The committee was said to have estimated that 2,865,000 farmers were tenants, and that this landless group was increasing at the rate of 40,000 a year. The committee will report, it was said, that tenancy is leading to "imprisonment in a fixed social status." It was learned on good authority that the committee found seven groups in need of Government financial aid or direction: Tenants with relations unfavorable to both landlord and tenant; croppers, chiefly on tobacco and cotton farms of the South and operating 716,000 farms; farm laborers, comprising one-fourth of all persons employed by agriculture; farmers on submarginal land; farmers on land too small in size to support them; farmers helplessly burdened by debts; and young farm people unable to get land.

COUNTY ASSESSMENT INCREASED $6,836,366

Total Is $216,558,796 on Realty and Personalty, Clerk Miller Reports.

Assessed valuation of real estate and personal property in St. Louis County for 1937 taxes, due next autumn, amounted to $216,558,796, an increase of $6,836,366 over last year, it was shown in an abstract completed by County Clerk Walter E. Miller yesterday for the State Board of Equalization.

Records of the new assessments were thrown open to public inspection at the County Clerk's office in the Courthouse at Clayton on completion of the abstract. The County Board of Equalization, which will hear appeals from assessments, will be in session from March 1 to April 29. It is composed of the three members of the County Court, Assessor Martin L. Neaf and Highway Engineer John M. Crutsinger. In addition, in appeals involving property in the third-class cities of the county—Webster Groves, Maplewood, Kirkwood and Richmond Heights—the Mayors of these cities will sit on the board.

Real estate was assessed for 1937 taxes at $191,837,480, an increase of $4,355,270 over last year, and personal property at $24,751,316, an increase of $2,481,096. The valuations were as of last June 1, for the 1937 levy. There will be added to the assessment later the railroad valuation, to be fixed by the State Board of Equalization, and the merchants' and manufacturers' levy. These were last year about $30,000,000 and $4,500,000.

Assessor Neaf said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the increase in the real estate valuation was due entirely to new buildings erected in the year ending June 1. The realty assessment included $146,639,690 for land and buildings in 151,068 town lots and $45,197,790 for 269,797 acres assessed as acreage.

Chief items of the new personal property assessment were: Manufacturing equipment, trade and professional tools and miscellaneous, $9,880,778; 36,917 motor vehicles, $5,582,534; household goods, $4,418,435; money, notes and bonds, $3,507,639, and 16,611 head of various kinds of livestock, $284,635.

ROPER FOR DISCHARGE BOOK FOR SEAMEN

Rejects Miss Perkins' Suggestion That Enforcement of Law Be Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Officials reported today that Secretary of Commerce Roper has rejected suggestions by Secretary of Labor Perkins regarding administration of the "Safety-at-sea" Act.

Miss Perkins told a press conference Thursday she felt enforcement of the act's "continuous discharge book" requirement should be relaxed until Congress acts on a resolution to suspend it.

Asked whether Miss Perkins' proposal had altered the department's stand that the provision must be enforced, J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said today: "We take the position that we have no choice except to carry out provisions of the law. If we failed to do that we would be violating the law."

Continuous Record of Employment.

He said the law stipulated that distribution of the books should begin on Dec. 26. The books provide a continuing record of seamen's employment. Organized seamen have said the record would indicate whether seamen had participated in strikes, thus enabling shipmasters to discriminate against union men.

The Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, Commerce Department agency, reported today it is going forward with the distribution and that about 35,000 of the books had been distributed. Eventually, about 75,000 seamen are expected to have them.

A group of striking seamen from the East Coast recently picketed the Commerce Department, demanding that issuance of the books be suspended.

Two Disagreed Before.

Miss Perkins and Roper disagreed more than a year ago on whether a group of striking seamen should be prosecuted for mutiny. Roper was reported for prosecution and Miss Perkins against it. The Justice Department took no action.

The discharge book situation was further complicated today by issuance at San Francisco of a temporary Federal Court order restraining enforcement of the law. Johnson said the department would obey any court ruling, but added he understood the order applied only to the San Francisco area.

Meanwhile, Roper postponed to March 25 enforcement of a provision of the law requiring seamen to have certificates of "service and efficiency."

BABY'S BODY IN TRUNK; MOTHER ARRESTED

Agawam (Mass.) Woman Found in Public Library Tells Incoherent Story.

By the Associated Press.

AGAWAM, Mass., Feb. 13.—Police arrested Mrs. Eleanor Randall in nearby Springfield's public library tonight in connection with the death of her 23-month-old daughter, Frances. The child's body was found in a trunk at the Randall home today by the father, Frederick Randall, after he had asked police to search for his wife and child, missing since yesterday.

There was a bruise on the child's head. An autopsy was ordered to determine whether the baby had suffocated in the trunk or had died as a result of a blow on the head.

Hungry and near collapse, Mrs. Randall was quietly reading a book when Agawam and Springfield officers found her at a library table. Police said she would be arraigned in District Court Monday in connection with the baby's death.

Randall said his wife had been released from the Northampton State Hospital late last month.

Two of the arresting officers quoted Mrs. Randall as saying she had passed the night on a porch of a vacant Springfield house. They said she rambled in her speech and could not give a coherent account of how she spent yesterday afternoon.

DISPOSE OF 25 REALTY PARCELS IN SIXTY DAYS

By BERRY MOORE

Establishing a record, the Michaelson Realty Co. has effected the resale of all except one of 26 pieces of property of diverse character, purchased less than 60 days ago by operators through the concern from the Franklin-American Trust Co., for a total of $131,550.

While not disclosed, the prices realized through the resales netted the operators a flattering profit on their investment, it is understood. The buyers were manifestly inspired by the prospects for higher prices, in view of the upward trend of rentals, the agents state.

Comprising flats, apartments, dwellings and small business buildings, the property had been taken under loans by the Franklin-American Trust Co. Negotiations in the original transaction were conducted through Thomas F. Stephens, real estate officer of the First National Bank.

The quick turnover is in noteworthy contrast with the slow movement of the market during the depression period, dealers declare.

Make Building Program Recommendations to Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Sweeping recommendations for a home-building program in which the Government would aid in creating "adequately capitalized private enterprise home building companies" were submitted to President Roosevelt today by the committee for economic and social progress, headed by Allie S. Freed, president of Paramount Motors Corp. of New York.

Responsibility for much of the "present confused state of home-building activity" is placed on Government, business and labor in the report, which covers the important phases of home building, home mortgage finance and home operation. Both Government and business, it asserted, "have never realized that housing is mainly an industrial and financial problem."

The committee declares itself opposed to direct Government borrowing and lending for private construction, but admits that subsidized housing is necessary for families with less than $1000 a year income.

Private home building companies, aided in their formation by the Government, the report declares, can purchase on a mass basis, contract with labor on an annual wage basis, rather than at high day to day rates, create planned home communities, borrow at higher percentages of the "economic values" of projects and at lower interest rates, and produce economically for the mass market.

In addition to Freed, the committee includes John D. Biggers, president of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., Chester H. McCall of the United States Advertising Corp., and representatives of steel companies, department stores and many other enterprises.

BREITT & NAUMERS CO. TAKES NEW QUARTERS AT 702 PINE

The Breitt & Naumer Real Estate Co. yesterday removed to new ground floor quarters at 702 Pine street, which it has taken under a long lease. The concern, of which Fred C. Breitt is president, was formerly located at 106 North Eighth street. Charles E. Naumer is secretary and treasurer and Eugene Wehmeyer is vice-president.

The new quarters have been remodeled and equipped at a large outlay to conform with the increased requirements of the concern. While the concern conducts a general real estate and financial agency, it makes a specialty of commercial and industrial properties. Breitt has been an aggressive figure in the real estate field for the last 30 years, beginning his career as private secretary to the late Malcolm Macbeth, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange for three consecutive terms.

As heretofore, Wehmeyer will act as manager of the concern's industrial department, specializing in the sale and leasing of property in that field, in which he has had broad experience.

Naumer will have charge of the leasing and renting departments and also serve as office manager.

Others associated with the company in various capacities include Fred W. Terry, Williard W. Teasdale, Marguerite A. Davis and Ernestine Burgarin.

LOWER CARRYING CHARGES SOUGHT FOR HOME OWNERS

President of National Association Calls for Reduction in Overhead, Including Interest, Amortization, Taxes, Etc.

With every indication that home construction and all that goes with it will be more active during the coming years than at any previous time in this generation, the home losses of the period just past cannot be permitted to recur, Paul E. Stark, Madison, Wis., newly installed president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, emphasizes.

He calls for lower total monthly carrying charges for home ownership, including interest payments, amortization charges and taxes, as the best safeguard for the country in the new investment and building period ahead.

Excerpts from his address at St. Louis, upon assuming the presidency of the association:

"Building is increasing at a rapid pace. As activity reopens, this must be our first objective: the tragedy involved in hundreds of thousands of foreclosures per year cannot be permitted to reoccur.

"We must destroy those forces that brought on the disaster.

Cause of Foreclosures.

"The principal cause of the recent epidemic of foreclosures and the enormous loss sustained at that time was, briefly stated, this: it cost too much to maintain shelter. It costs too much today. I do not mean that the brick and the lumber and the labor cost too much, although that, too, has been a factor. I mean that interest rates were then, and are now, too high; that the period of amortization was then, and is now, too brief; and that taxes were then, and are now, unfair, unjust and confiscatory. These are the deadly germs that brought about the foreclosure epidemic of 1933. These same germs can again bring catastrophe unless they are destroyed.

"The cure, of course, is lower interest rates, longer period of amortization and lower taxes and to

REALTY EXCHANGE INDORSES TAX PENALTY REMISSION BILL

The board of directors of the Real Estate Exchange recently unanimously indorsed House Bill No. 70, introduced in the State legislature by Representatives Hamlin of Marion County, Hamlin of Greene County and Dale of Ray County. The bill proposes the remission of all penalties, interest and costs accrued against all delinquent real estate taxes; provided such taxes are paid in full not later than June 30, 1937.

The measure also provides for a remission of 75 per cent of the penalties, interest and costs if the taxes are paid before Aug. 31, 1937; 50 per cent remission if paid before Oct. 31, 1937; and a remission of 25 per cent if paid by Dec. 31, 1937.

After Dec. 31, 1937, all penalties, interest and costs would be restored in full force and effect.

An Attractive Home Design With Floor Plans and Home Building Suggestions Appear On Page Three of This Section

ACQUIRES PROPERTY ON MARKET STREET

Isadore Pass Buys Southeast Corner of Leffingwell, Improved With Stores and Flats.

The southeast corner of Market street and Leffingwell avenue has been purchased by Isadore Pass, through the C. M. McDonald Real Estate Co. The site has a frontage of 52 feet on Market with a depth of 129 feet, extending through the block to Walnut street, on which there is a second frontage.

Two-story buildings, comprising stores and flats, occupy the Market street frontage of the site. Old one-story buildings occupying the Walnut street frontage are to be replaced with a modern garage for the Independent Fish Co., operated by the purchaser at 2741 Market street.

The seller was represented by the Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co.

C. M. McDonald, who is a past president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, reports renewed demand for property on Market street, which, as a result of the depression, has been comparatively dormant. Widened from 60 to 100 feet between Sixth street and Vandeventer avenue, Market street has taken on new importance with the resultant increased volume of traffic on this thoroughfare.

GEO. S. METCALFE RE-ELECTED SECRETARY OF ASSOCIATION

George S. Metcalfe of Victoria avenue, Kirkwood, a member of the board of directors of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Des Moines, Ia., was re-elected secretary of the Roosevelt Federal Savings and Loan Association at its annual meeting held Thursday at the organization's office at 3607 North Broadway.

Other officers re-elected were: George W. Strodtman, president; Charles Sieloff and F. R. Wyatt, vice-presidents; George Gruenwald, treasurer, and Walter L. Metcalfe, attorney. In addition to the officers, the board of directors of the Roosevelt Federal Savings and Loan Association consists of Oscar Beumer, Charles Burmeister, William J. Hegwein and Edward W. Klorer.

these three objectives, I believe, the National Association of Real Estate Boards should dedicate itself during 1937.

"To illustrate the effect of these three factors, let us consider the case of a homebuyer who purchased a home prior to 1929. Nobody knows what the average interest rate was at that time. A banker estimated that it was between 8 and 10 per cent in Wisconsin. Assume it was 7 per cent. Assume 11 years was allowed in which to repay. The average term was probably less than five years. Suppose the average tax rate was 25 mills. Under these conditions the home buyer carried, on a $5000 home upon which he had paid 20 per cent, a burden of $64 per month. Any marked decrease in income would and did wipe out his equity, blast his dream of home and security and leave him a bitter critic of the system which made his misfortune possible.

4½ Interest Rate Proposed.

"It is my deliberate judgment, and I am speaking now only for myself, that the interest rate for ordinary homes should not exceed 4½ per cent; that the period of amortization should be not less than 30 years and the tax rate not more than 1 per cent. Under these terms a client could purchase this same house at a monthly cost of $30.25, a reduction of $33.75.

"With these figures in mind you can understand the statement recently issued by the Department of Commerce to the effect that if the interest rate alone could be reduced 1½ per cent and the amortization rate somewhat extended, 5,000,000 more families would be brought into the bracket that could own their homes.

Are the possibilities involved in these figures important to home buyers? Are they vital to the building industry: Will they affect our standard of living? Are they important to unemployment, still the No. 1 problem of the day? Are they a factor in social security?

"It is also my deliberate judgment that this interest rate, this period of repayment and this tax rate can be secured.

"Billions are being loaned at lesser rates on less desirable securities. There are billions of dollars in credit lying idle. The Home Loan Bank system is now making money available to its institutional members at 3 per cent. In regard to tax costs we have made this progress 18 states have already taken action, either through an over-all limit on the tax rate or through some form of homestead exemption, to put a stop to the confiscation of homes and home sites through taxation."

Stark Emphasizes Need.

Stark emphasized as needed for stabilization of real estate futures the establishment of a central mortgage banking system where mortgages could be sold if necessary. This agency would be able to stabilize mortgage money supply through issuance of its bonds, which at all times would be an investlic could rely.

The Wagner-Pepper bill, now before Congress (S. 1166) embodies this plant for a reserve system for long-term real estate credit, which has for years been advocated by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The bill has been referred to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. Immediate appointment of a subcommittee to study it is expected.

Intensified effort toward the better understanding of real estate use and better establishment of the facts needed in the making of investment judgments in real estate will be a principal activity of the real estate boards of the country through their National Association in the coming year, President Stark pledges.

The National Real Estate Foundation now being established for unbiased research and education in real estate, allied with the association but to be a self-perpetuating institution, represents, he said, the culmination of 20 years of work for real estate fact-finding and technical education.

CONSTRUCTION GAIN OF 20 PER CENT

F. W. Dodge Reports on January Compared With Same Month Last Year.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—A gain of more than 20 per cent was shown in construction during January as contrasted with the figures for December, 1936, according to data from F. W. Dodge Corporation. The January, 1937, total likewise was some 13 per cent better than the figure for January, 1936. For the 37 eastern states covering all classes of construction, the total amounted to $242,844,000 in January, 1937, and compares with $199,695,700 for December, 1936, and $214,792,800 for January, 1936. Each major geographic district registered a gain over December totals, except New England, the Central Northwest and the New Orleans district (Louisiana and Mississippi). Gains over January, 1936, were scored in all principal territories except New England, the Chicago district (Northern Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Southeast Wisconsin), the Central Northwest, Kansas City district (Kansas, Western Wisconsin, Oklahoma and Nebraska), the New Orleans territory and Texas.

The January, 1937, construction total for the 37 eastern states as a whole included $78,423,700 for residential building, $95,968,900 for nonresidential building and $68,451,400 for public works and public utilities. The residential figure was 20 per cent greater than the December, 1936, figure and more than doubled the total of $37,439,500 shown for this class of construction during January, 1936. Gains in residential building over a year ago were shown for each major geographic area east of the Rockies without exception—the most pronounced gains occurred in the metropolitan area of New York, the Pittsburgh territory (Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia), the middle Atlantic states and Southern Michigan.

QUARTERS AT 4472 EASTON LEASED FOR RETAIL STORE

The building formerly occupied by the Easton-Taylor Trust Company, at 4472 Easton avenue, has been leased by Samuel Kolker for a store for men's and women's ready-to-wear, and household furnishings. The lease was negotiated by the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Real Estate Co. through Arthur H. Fuldner.

The building is a portion of the business block acquired last summer by Wm. J. and Clarence H. Kaimann, moving picture theater operators, who made the purchase in order to get possession of the Circle Theater which comprised the major portion of the premises. Negotiations in this instance were also handled by Oreon E. & R. G. Scott.

Single Flats Bought.

Yeckel, Earickson & Co. report sales as follows: Single flat at 3540 Connecticut street from Emma C. Zeller to Marie A. Sheridan; single flat, 3864 McDonald avenue for George and Ida Schultz to Theresa Moser; colonial bungalow, 5806 Delor street in St. Louis Hills for Gertrude Buhlinger to Dr. and Mrs. Chauncey Wright; building lot north side of Holly Hills boulevard for C. Piekarski.

The Henry H. Haffner Realty Co. has added Jack Lubo to its sales force. The firm conducts a general real estate and financial business.

the above-mentioned operation included an eight-family flat at 1710-16 Nicholson place; a four-family flat at 3915 Blaine avenue; a four-family flat at 2224 Blendon place; a four-family flat at 6526 Chamberlain avenue; a four-family flat at 4169-71 De Tonty street; a four-family flat at 905 Eastgate avenue; an eight-family apartment at 930-32 Eastgate; stores and flats at 2001-03 Forest avenue; a four-family flat at 5655 Hebert street; two stores and six flats at 1737-43 North Broadway; four-family flat at 713 Mound street; four-family flat at 715 Mound street; store and three flats at 1736-38 North Ninth street; a bungalow at 6210 Idaho avenue; a bungalow at 6215 Idaho avenue; a bungalow at 6218 Idaho; a bungalow at 2123 Sixty-seventh street; a bungalow at 54 Barat road, Ferguson; two-family flat at 1367 Burd avenue; stores and eight flats at the southeast corner of Seventh and Rutger streets; bungalow at 6309 North Drive; Old Majestic Theater at 1018-24 Franklin avenue; eight four-room flats at 1322 North Nineteenth street; two-family flat at 2723 Sheridan avenue; a bungalow at 6819 Southwest avenue; four-family flat at 4129-31 North Newstead; 12-room residence at 4231 Washington avenue.

Apartments Change Hands.

The Glick Real Estate Co., representing an undisclosed client, has closed negotiations for the purchase of two six-family apartment buildings at the southeast corner of Laurel avenue and Westminster place, owned by John L. Meyer. Each apartment has four rooms, exclusive of sun room and sleeping porch. There is electric refrigeration and other modern conveniences.

The three-story structures have a lot of a total frontage of 144 feet on Westminster, with a depth extending to the east and west alley of the block. The purchase price was not disclosed.

Obviously in response to higher rental returns, offers for apartments, as well as for flats, were a feature of the week, according to real estate men. Negotiations in several instances have gone beyond the conversation stage, it was stated.

The Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co. is considering an application for a loan for an apartment building planned for a prominent South Side corner. As a source of capital, this concern has been a factor in building operations in Blue Ridge Terrace, the apartment house section of the Moorlands. Absorption of apartments and duplex structures in Blue Ridge is attracting the attention of both investors and speculators, realtors report.

New Apartment Projects.

A number of apartment projects are on the eve of being launched in University City. These include one of unique conception, designed by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect. It is to be built by a syndicate formed by the Henry R. Weisels Co., which is withholding details pending final arrangements. Plans have been disclosed for two 12-family buildings for a Forsythe boulevard site in University City, with construction scheduled to start at an early date.

Construction of buildings of this type is expected to be accelerated with the materialization of capital which apparently is ample for legitimate projects in this field.

The General American Life Insurance Co., represented by M. H. Rodemyer & Co., has made loans for several large apartment projects in Blue Ridge Terrace. The loans are secured by first deeds of trust on the property.

The General American Life, in its annual report issued last week, said the yield from its investments estate and farm lands was 4.27 per cent in 1936, compared with only 47-100 of 1 per cent in 1935. Average 1936 yield from all ledger assets was reported as 4.6 per cent.

J. B. Hahn Jr. with Yates Co.

John B. Hahn Jr. has joined the sales force of the Roy J. Yates Real Estate & Building Co., at 3199 South Grand avenue. He has had a number of years of experience in the real estate business and has a wide acquaintance on the South Side.

RESIDENCE BEING ERECTED FOR G. M. PARKER IN UPPER LADUE

The new residence being constructed for George M. Parker in Upper Ladue will be one of the most attractive in that section.

It is planned in the tradition of the classic revival in St. Louis, circa 1840, to be of red brick with copper roof, painted sash and shutters, painted iron work, with a living terrace on the south.

Plan contains, besides the usual entrance hall, living room, dining room, pantry and kitchen, book room on the first floor having a fireplace. There will be two servants' rooms over the garage at the service end of the building.

The second floor will contain four bedrooms, two baths, ample storage and linen closets, cedar closet, besides a large dressing closet in connection with the master bedroom.

G. A. CRAMER ERECTING HOME IN DROMARA LANE

The residence being built for G. A. Cramer, president of the Cramer Dry Plate Co., in Dromara Lane, on the north side of Price road, north of the Clayton road, promises to be one of the most striking in that development.

The house is designed in the Early American colonial style from plans by Hugo K. Graf, architect. It will be of painted brick, with shutters on the second floor and with bay bow windows flanking each side of the entrance. The entrance will show the Chippendale influence. A two-story porch will be on the southern end, the house facing east. The northern end will contain the servants' quarters and the garage. The roof will be of black slate.

The first floor will consist of living room with the porch opening off of it and a central hall with the dining room opposite the living room. The hall leads back to a card room paneled in birch and a powder room and toilet. The basement will include a recreation room with a fireplace.

The second floor will consist of three bedrooms, including master bedroom with double closets, dressing room and fireplace. A sleeping porch opens off this bedroom. Two baths serve the three rooms.

The site was acquired through Albert T. Terry Son & Co.

STEINER COMPANY LEASES BUILDING AT 2620 DELMAR BL.

The Steiner Automobile Co., distributers of the Reo trucks, has leased the one-story building located at 2620-26 Delmar boulevard for a long term.

Extensive alterations are being made to the building, which, when completed, will include a large display room, private offices, parts department and ample space for service. Large skylights are being installed to insure ample light.

Harry Steiner, president of the company, has been connected with the automobile industry in St. Louis for the last 28 years.

The company has occupied quarters on Locust street for many years. The new quarters were leased predicated on the belief that the commercial trade can be more conveniently served on Delmar boulevard.

The building is owned by Frank Dallavalle. R. S. Dodd of Brown-Ideson-Dodd, Inc., arranged the lease.

DIMMITT-RICKHOFF-BAYER AGENTS FOR FRONTENAC LOTS

The Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co., Inc., has been made exclusive agents for a group of lots in Frontenac, restricted residential development at the southwest corner of Spoede and Conway roads.

The surface and municipal improvements include macadam roads, sewers, water and electric mains. Restrictions are flexible, with a 75-foot building line and a 15-foot side lines. Property is under control of three trustees with all plans and landscaping subject to their approval.

Complete details on several building projects will probably be completed this week.

Breakfast Rooms May Be Turned to General Use

Unused Space May Be Converted Colorfully Into Dinettes Which Become Studies or Card Rooms.

To brighten breakfast moods and make a gay setting for other meal-minded times, homemakers are taking leftover pantries and converting them into dinettes. In return for this recognition, dinettes show their agreeability by becoming study rooms, card rooms or general utility rooms on other occasions.

Temperamental people will welcome a soothing morning room plan which has found favor here. The black and white floor is as calming as the ceiling which is painted sky blue. The walls, divided horizontally with bands of aluminum, are painted in soft shades of gray, beginning with deep gray at the bottom, then silver gray, pearly gray and finally, ivory gray at the top. The chrome chairs have red upholstery. The table top is lacquered black while the white Venetian blinds have black tapes.

Another decorative dinette takes its dramatic theme from the Orient. It has gold-painted chairs, black-lacquered table, black-painted dado, baseboard, molding and woodwork. The walls are painted a pale golden yellow and the ceiling is "lotus" white. A white lantern lighting fixture has a jade silk tassel. At each side of the golden yellow blinds hang jade silk curtains. Accessories are Chinese red and there is an effective screen painted in tones of jade, black, gold and vermilion.

Promoting better digestion and dispositions, another homemaker has arranged a dinette with a ceiling painted pale sage green. The tops of the serving and dining room table are also coated in this tint. Chairs and bases of the table have been enameled white to match dishes and accessories. The sage green is used to paint woodwork, baseboard, dado, dado rail and molding, as well as the interior of the illuminated shelves. The wall above the dado is papered with a green floral design on a white ground. The red-brown floor has a broad border and stripes of the sage green. A great mass of brilliant blooming plants are set in pots painted russet-color near the window. White marquisette curtains accompany deep sage green draperies that are looped back.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. We have recently bought a new house, and now we should like to install laundry tubs in the cellar, but we find the drain pipe for the plumbing is too high. What would you advise? MRS. L. B.

A. If there is any place above grade that you can put the trays conveniently, we would advise your doing so. Not only will the matter of drainage be solved but the necessity of carrying heavy loads up and down stairs will be obviated, and the washing can be done without the aid of artificial light. If this is impossible, you will have to have an electric pump placed on the waste line of the tubs that will lift the used water up to the soil line.

Q. Is it necessary to fur the inside of brick walls? D. L. M.

A. Yes; it is. It is possible to make a brick wall weather-tight, but it has high conductivity and so, when there is excessive moisture in the air and the outside temperature is much lower than that on the inside, condensation will form and the walls will be wet, which may damage the finish and will be disagreeable. When building the wall, it would be well to place through-wall flashing at the first-floor level and turn it up against the back of the furring to divert any water that might condense on the inside of the brick wall and protect the wood from rotting.

Q. We are going to build a house and have employed an architect to draw the plans and specifications, and he insists that he should be allowed to supervise the building, too. It will cost quite a little, and we feel that the contractor should be able to build the house without any architect if the plans and specifications are any good. Will you advise us if this is necessary? MR. AND MRS. HENRY S.

A. It is possible for a contractor to build a house without architectural supervision, but the chances of your getting the house you want, and the one the architect has planned, without his supervision are slim. There are questions that will come up all through the building operations which should be decided by the architect and not by the contractor. Few laymen know enough about building to know whether or not the plans and specifications are being carried out, and their best protection is the architect.

Q. Are these various insulation boards that are being advertised for sheathing in place of wood serviceable? H. C. T.

A. Yes; they serve both as sheathing and as insulation. When they are used, it would be well to have the frame braced at all corners, so as not to make the wallboard responsible for all the stiffening of the structure.

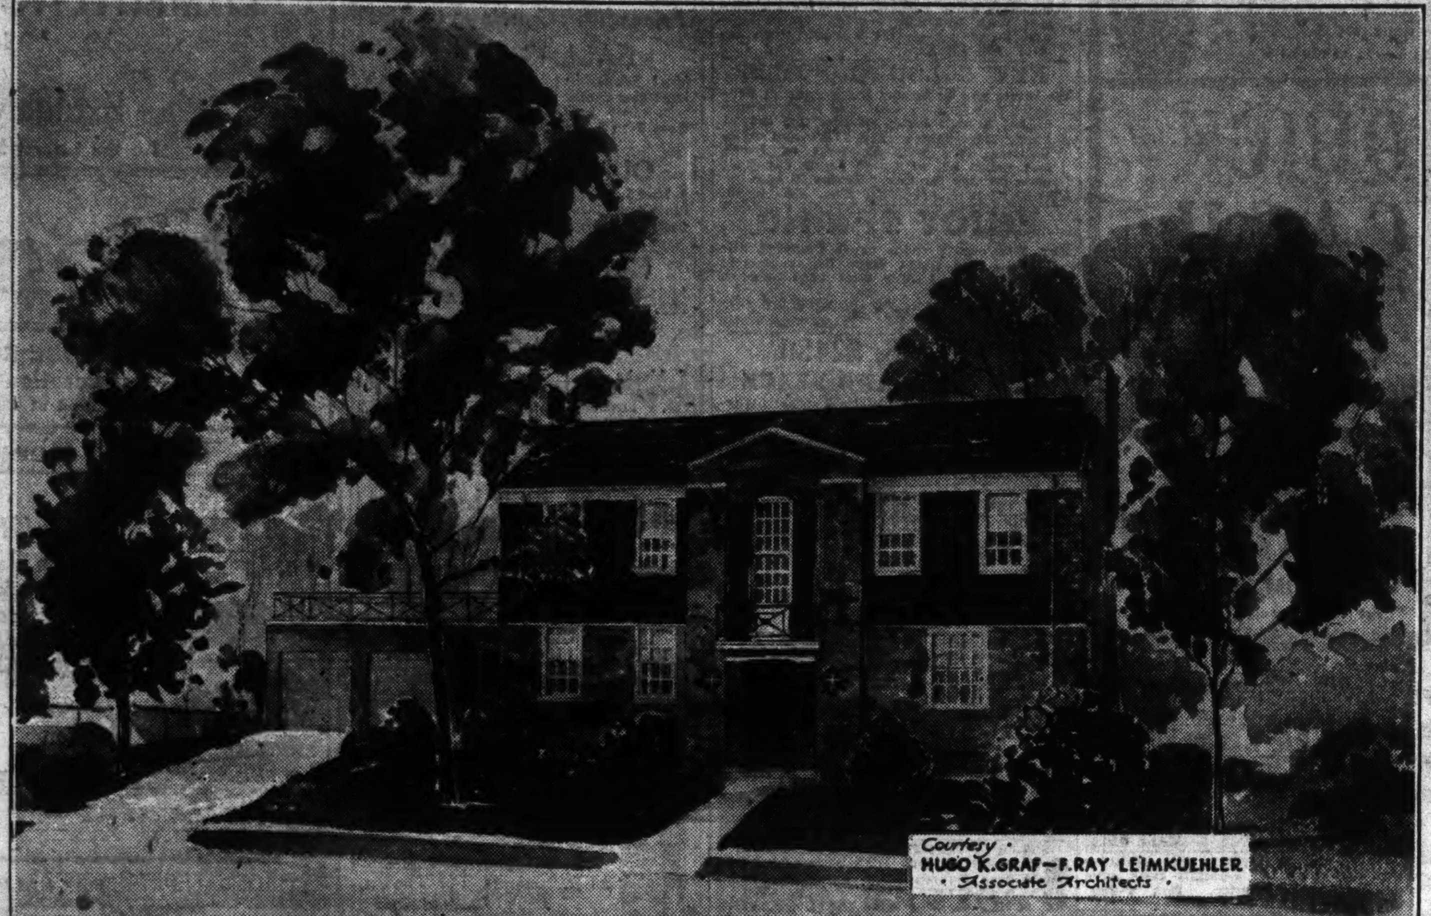
Q. I want to put a root cellar in my basement and would like to know how I should go about it and what conditions are best for the preservation of the vegetables. T. M., Creve Coeur.

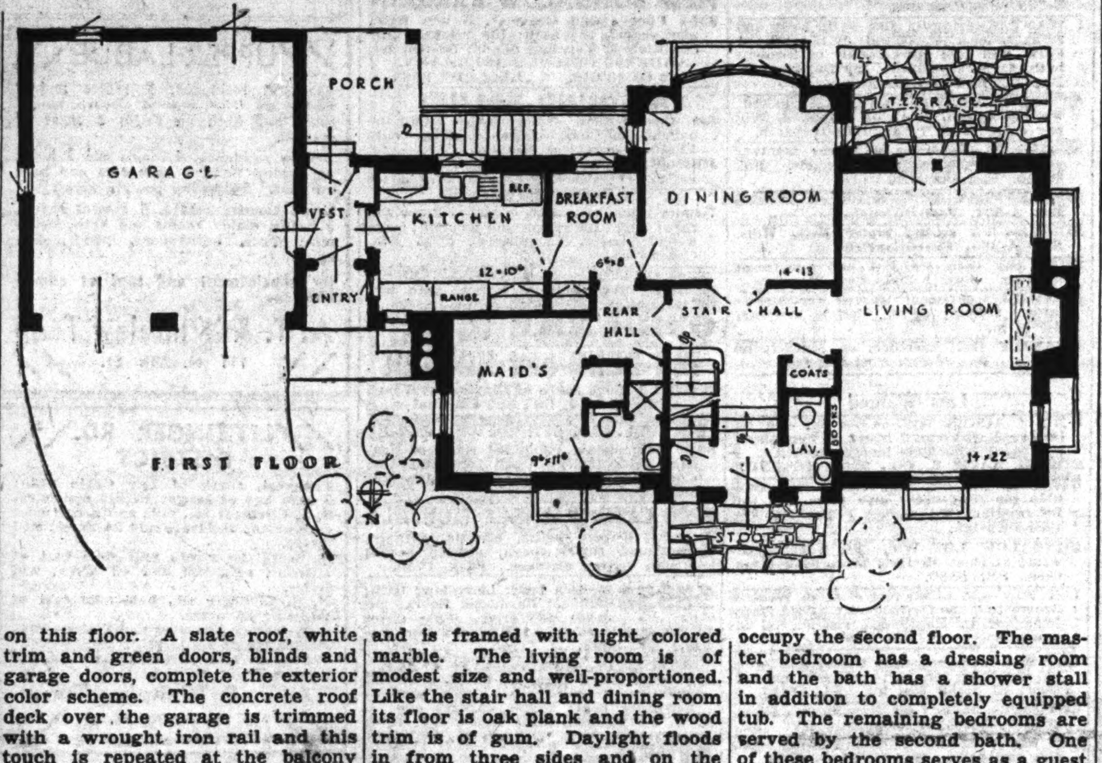
A. If there is a heating plant in the basement you must be sure that no pipes or ducts run through the space selected for the root cellar. You should build a masonry wall and insulate it well, preferably on the basement side, and put in as tight a door as possible. A refrigerator door is the ideal one, but if this is too expensive, approach it as nearly as possible. If the ground is well drained and there is no danger of water entering through the floor, remove the cellar floor so that the vegetables can rest right on the ground. Then provide a ventilating duct from near the cellar floor to the outside air. The object to be attained is a cool, damp atmosphere with as little variation in temperature as possible.

A Type of House Indigenous to Missouri



Courtesy HUGO K. GRAF—F. RAY LEIMKUEHLER Associate Architects

Early Houses Here Were Adapted From Neo-Grec and Regency and Unlike Anything Found in Europe.



WHEN Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Curtin decided to build a house they stipulated an unostentatious house. Style was not mentioned as one of the requirements, but the size, the number of rooms and their orientation were definitely fixed from the very beginning. After a thorough study of the plan, the aspect of the house evolved into a type which is identified with the early mansions peculiar to this part of the country.

The early houses here had a dignified character which was unlike that found in houses elsewhere. They were a mixture of Neo-Grecian and Georgian or Regency adapted by the French and Germans who settled here, but unlike anything found in the old country. Since there are certain characteristics in the house that are reminiscent of those early Missouri houses, one might call this a Modern Missouri type.

This house, which is under construction at 522 Olive Court in Webster Groves, is of light red and brown sand mold bricks laid in light colored mortar at the first floor. This wall has a pleasing soft mottled color. On the second floor shingles stained a reddish-brown were used on a completely insulated stud wall because this construction gave the additional area required on this floor. A slate roof, white trim and green doors, blinds and garage doors, complete the exterior color scheme. The concrete roof deck over the garage is trimmed with a wrought iron rail and this touch is repeated at the balcony over the entrance and around the areas at ground level.

The floor plan is spacious. From the entrance vestibule one has a view through the dining-room to a garden at the back. This picture window in the dining-room does much to enhance the aspect of the house. Whenever the occasion demands, the doors to the dining-room, having eight octagonal panels similar to the entrance door, may be closed.

From the stair hall whose oak plank floor is on a higher level than the entrance hall one enters a congenial living room. The fireplace which is on the axis of this vista has a mantel of dark gum and is framed with light colored marble. The living room is of modest size and well-proportioned. Like the stair hall and dining room its floor is oak plank and the wood trim is of gum. Daylight floods in from three sides and on the south French doors give access to a flagstone terrace.

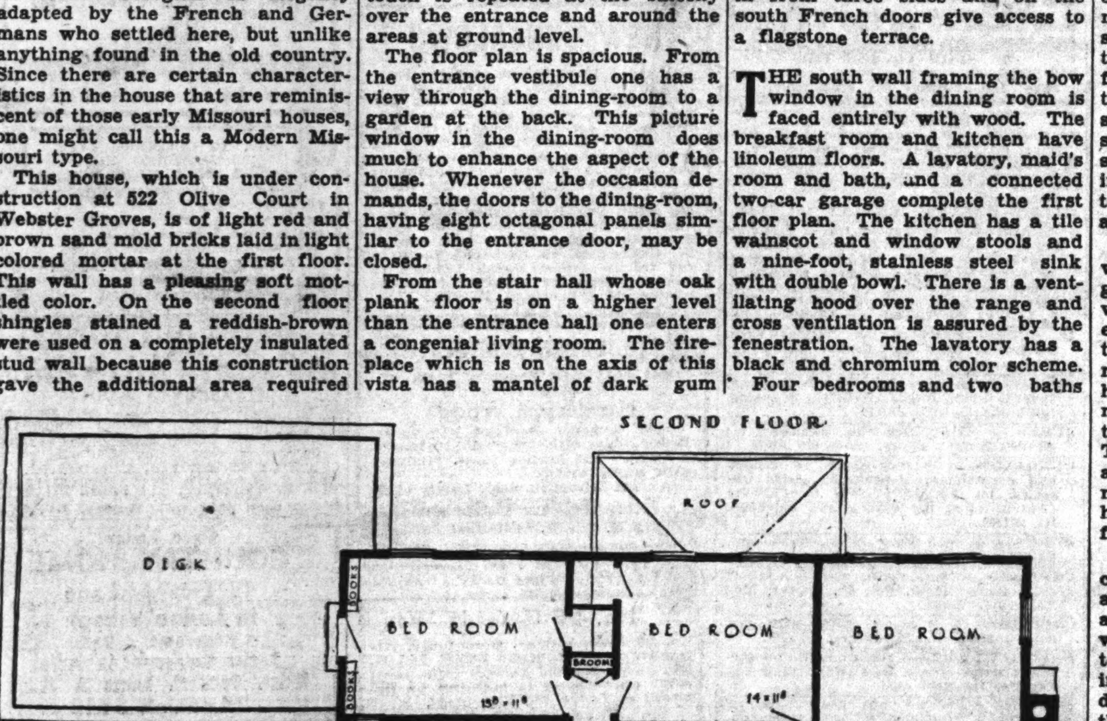
THE south wall framing the bow window in the dining room is faced entirely with wood. The breakfast room and kitchen have linoleum floors. A lavatory, maid's room and bath, and a connected two-car garage complete the first floor plan. The kitchen has a tile wainscot and window stools and a nine-foot, stainless steel sink with double bowl. There is a ventilating hood over the range and cross ventilation is assured by the fenestration. The lavatory has a black and chromium color scheme.

Four bedrooms and two baths occupy the second floor. The master bedroom has a dressing room and the bath has a shower stall in addition to completely equipped tub. The remaining bedrooms are served by the second bath. One of these bedrooms serves as a guest room. Sliding doors in the upstairs hall permit complete isolation from any festivities on the first floor and with two doors to the second bedroom a connected suite is formed. A disappearing stair gives access to the attic space where the summer ventilating system is installed. This system embraces a large rotary fan and air ducts to all bedrooms.

The basement is a well-lighted, well-planned space that differs greatly from the usual open space which represents the extent of the excavation. There is a workshop, the owner's hobby, a recreation room with fireplace, a laundry, heater room and vegetable storage room. The ceiling is plastered and the partitions are of concrete block. The doors are special batten type and heating ducts open on the recreation room and workshop. The house is heated by a gas-fired, forced warm-air system.

Many conveniences have been incorporated for efficiency. There are ample broom and cedar closets, a clothes chute and several three-way switches. Heat control is automatic and roll screens have been installed at the double-hung windows. There are Venetian blinds throughout the house and the shutters at the front door have metal screens which are clipped on during the summer. The cubage of the house is 42,500 feet.

The house was planned by Hugo K. Graf and F. Ray Leimkuehler. Mr. Leimkuehler is a member of the St. Louis Chapter American Institute of Architects.



FOR BETTER LIVING

A number of manufacturers have recently introduced novel floor coverings of attractive and durable materials which provide for very rapid finishing of floors, either in new houses or those being remodeled. Due to the speed in which they may be laid they offer the owner an economical solution in the selection of the floor finishes.

The variety of these new types of floor coverings is considerable, ranging from linoleum with the glue already applied to ornamental hardwood parquet flooring which comes in rolls and may be applied in a manner similar to linoleum. There is a wide variety of color and design in these new coverings, and with their attractiveness and speed of installation they are particularly adaptable to remodeling and renovating of homes or business structures.

In houses where there are little children, the thumb bolts on bathroom doors should be of the type that can be opened from the outside with a key.

When planning to build a new home, the prospective owner should know exactly how to finance the project and what special features the house should include. A planning desk in the kitchen is a help to every woman who plans to do her own or even part of the housework.

The renewed popularity of Venetian blinds brings up the question of why ordinary window blinds or shutters have fallen from their useful beginnings to the pointless role of decorations. It is probable that the difficulties presented by the universal use of screens account for their lapse into disuse. Blind operators worked from the inside obviate this objection.

In selecting the brick for a house, choose a type that is native to the country, if possible. Climatic conditions affect bricks materially, and better results will generally result by following this practice.

The home decorator may take liberties with the dining room. When this room does not open directly from the living room, original and daring combinations may be used. Because it is a room in which a comparatively short time is spent, an unusual effect is not so likely to become tiresome.

When a dining room opens from another room with double doors, it should follow the same style and color scheme, if a harmonious effect is desired.

COLORED PIPES

Proper identification of pipe and valves is essential to good building management. This may be accomplished by painting them distinctive colors—for instance, hot-water supply, red; cold, blue; waste lines, yellow; vent pipes, black.

A small amount of time will be necessary for this work, which may be done while painters are busy in the building, and the results in convenience will well repay the effort and nominal expense.

Business for sale ads in the Post-Dispatch want pages become business opportunities for many readers with business experience.

A Few Brush Tips

When planning the color scheme for your bathroom, first shop for a shower curtain that appeals to you. Then let the color you select for the curtain become the keynote of your color scheme. Paint the walls in a light contrasting tint, trimming the woodwork and enameling the floor (if it is of wood or linoleum) in strong accent colors.

Painted and lacquered floors are sometimes decorated with stencils, striping and other special treatments.

Interior painting may be done at any time of the year. Now is a good time to have the work undertaken. Later on the spring rush will make it difficult to obtain the services of master painters when you desire them.

Finish Hardware Chosen Carefully

The finish hardware in a house—the door knobs, hinges, etc.—vary greatly in price and appearance, and while expensive hardware is very nice and should be included in an expensive house, it would be foolish to spend a lot for this item in a house where every penny counts. Of course, very cheap locks are not good economy, because they will not last, but a lock with good mechanism and inexpensive finish is satisfactory in houses of small or moderate cost.

Interior door hinges or butts, as they are known in the trade, need not be of solid brass, but may be of iron or steel which can be painted the same color as the doors. These iron butts are well made and quite inexpensive and, in the opinion of some authorities, look even better than the more conspicuous brass ones.

For interior doors there are lock sets that require no keys, and while these are slightly more expensive than the ordinary type, they require less labor to install, and where skilled labor is high they are no more expensive in place than the usual type locks. They can be locked and unlocked by pressing a button in the center of the handle.

Door knobs, if possible, should be of solid brass, or glass or china. The plated knobs, while they make a good appearance, are apt to get shabby with long use. China knobs are quite inexpensive and easily kept clean.

Outside hardware should be of noncorrosive metal, as it must stand the weather, and if rust sets in, the wood to which it is fastened will be badly discolored.

OUTSIDE METER SAVES BOTHER OF INSPECTION

In wiring a new home or rewiring a home already erected, the selection of the most advantageous location for the electric meter is often quite a problem, due to the housekeeper's desire to keep it out of the habitable rooms and yet have it accessible so that the meter-reader may reach it without difficulty.

Electrical manufacturers and the power companies have come to the aid of architects and housewives by introducing waterproof meters which may be exposed to the weather and attached to an outside wall of the house in a nonconspicuous location. They operate satisfactorily in such a location and are more convenient for the meter-reader, saving him time if the occupants are not at home and at the same time relieve the housewife of his periodic journeys through the interior of the house in order that the meter may be read.

WHAT OUR CUSTOMERS SAY:

Joseph E. Burger, President

The Maitre D'Hotel at the Hotel Statler writes:

"I brought my Chevrolet into your shop thinking I needed a valve grind job. Your service manager, Mr. Ross Edwards, made a minor adjustment and charged me nothing for it and my troubles were all over. I don't know of any group of men I would rather do business with than your service organization. They are all so courteous and dependable."

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN.

On account of the steady progress and growth of our company we are in a position to take on a few additional men from time to time; the requirements for these positions are quite reasonable so that the average man of good habits and clean-cut appearance will stand a fair chance of being employed.

This company has been uniquely successful throughout this depression, in fact 1936 was our seventh successive record sales year. In line with our steady gains in business, the earnings of our men are higher; not only are more men earning $50 and $75 a week, but in recent months we have issued many weekly pay checks running between $100 and $250, throughout the entire country. These earnings, of course, are generally made by more experienced men, but there are exceptions where new men have quickly advanced themselves to the higher incomes.

Similar positions are available in our local office to a few more men who are qualified to learn this work and who would be satisfied with earnings of $125.00 monthly while learning, provided they saw opportunities for increases with experience; the men accepted for these positions will be given a very thorough course of training free of charge.

For personal interview, call at Suite 512, Paul Brown Bldg., Ninth and Olive sts., Monday, between 9:15 a. m. and 1:15 p. m. only.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA WOMEN'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE RADIO

PART FIVE ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 14, 1937. PAGES 1—10G

In the HOLLYWOOD WHIRL

Margaret Post Niemeyer

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.

THE return to Hollywood and the studios of Gloria Swanson was one of the most interesting events of the week here in the film capital. Too, there was the big ball of the Screen Actors' Guild, the great cinema social event of the year, to be held tonight, but since it will be after midnight back in St. Louis before the ball even gets started, there is not much to tell about it now, of course.

GLORIA SWANSON

Miss Swanson, always looking as though she was on her way to some important dressy function—even when she just leaves home to drive her children to school—is pretty live copy after her five years' absence from the screen.

For one thing, Gloria's tremendous romance with Herbert Marshall, an affair of long standing, seems to be entirely off. Marshall went home to London awhile back amid published reports that he would fix up a divorce with his estranged wife, the lovely English actress, Edna Best, and return and become the fifth Mr. Swanson. Just what happened nobody knows but there was no divorce. He came back to America, began to squire another movie girl—who is not of star rating—around to previews and dinners and things, and Miss Swanson is back in pictures. She is to be starred by M-G-M in a piece called "Mazie Kenyon," in which she will play a night club hostess. This will give her a chance to wear a lot of dashing clothes, something she does best of all.

● PROBABLY the most pleased person over the return of Gloria to the screens is Adrian, Metro's designer. When he can make dresses for anyone who wears them as well as Miss Swanson, he feels that he is really doing something. I met her at the studio the other day just after she had come from her first "dress conference" with Adrian. Gloria goes dramatic in her personal wardrobe as well as before the camera, and when I saw her she was running true to form. In fact she had almost outdone herself, we would say.

—o—o—

Last Sunday a rather mud-spattered station wagon passed along Wilkshire boulevard and few people took the trouble to look at it—or its occupants. But as I happened to glance up, there at the wheel sat Clark Gable in his muttonchop whiskers grown for the picture "Parnell." And equally as sedate at his side sat Carole Lombard. Only a few days before I had seen them driving down Hollywood boulevard in Clark's modest little cream-colored, silver-plated Deusenberg, fairly screaming for attention and getting it.

—o—o—

MARY GARDEN has opened a voice studio here and I saw her the other day lunching with one of her proteges, good-looking young Stanley Morner. Mary's now golden tresses escaped in curls from under her violet hat, and jade earrings adorned her ears. With total unconcern she walked from the restaurant with her gray tweed coat slung over her shoulders in anything but a metropolitan opera house manner.

● BETTY FURNESS, who is, as they say out here, "between pictures," is having a lot of fun during her vacation stepping out to night clubs and restaurants. We met her at the Cocoanut Grove the other night with John Greer, so evidently she does not confine herself to the attentions of Caesar Romero exclusively. This particular night Betty was in a black velvet gown which had a long and exceptionally full skirt, it being more than a full circle, godets having been inserted in it. Over the skirt went a demure little bodice fastening primly all the way up the front to its collar with small velvet buttons, and having short puffed sleeves and a slightly flared peplum. Betty designed this gown as she does so many of her things.

Have you ever had a macaroni papoose? Take it from Bette Davis, the dish is worth trying. It is simple to make, too. Cook a package of macaroni, broken into four-inch lengths, until it is tender. Drain it and spread it out on thin slices of raw, smoked ham. Sprinkle with plenty of horseradish and cheese. Bell the slices and skewer or tie them together. Place the papooses in a shallow baking dish and dampen them with a third of a cup of milk. Bake in a moderate oven for a little more than a half hour. Serve hot with a side dish of crushed pineapple which is delicious sprinkled over the ham.

—o—o—

OF COURSE UNA MERKEL is attractive and cute any time, but when I went to see her one day this week and she came down stairs wearing a new Chinese lounging costume which had just been given to her by Anna May Wong, she was superlative. The suit was made of heavy Chinese silk and the blue background was lavishly embroidered by hand in small figures of green, white, apricot and rose. The trousers were straight and wide and the long coat fastened high across the shoulder on the left and on all the way down to the hem. There were slits in the hem at each side, which, like the upstanding collar and coat edges, were finished with bands of shaded blues and white. But what I had really stopped in for was to see some jewelry which Una's husband had given her recently and which Una had told me she didn't see how she had ever managed to get along without it all the time gone by. It just seemed to fit in with almost everything she wore. There were

MIRACLE MAID of BROADWAY

CANDID CAMERA PICTURES OF MISS MERMAN SINGING A SONG.

By Virginia Irwin

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.

IF anybody with a sour outlook on life tries to tell you that America is no longer the land of opportunity, the answer is not "Oh, yeah?" It is "Look at Ethel Merman." Ethel is the ex-stenographer who started out in life pursued by nothing more than an ambition to go on the stage and ended up on Broadway pursued by nothing less than three theatrical producers, a couple of movie magnates, and nine men who wanted to give her a wedding ring and a little home in the Bronx. Ethel didn't have much to begin with, either, if that's what you're thinking. She was no beauty and her clothes looked as if she had inherited them from a country cousin. But try and tell that to the customers who pack the Alvin Theater to see Ethel in the current hit, "Red, Hot and Blue."

"Life is simply de-lovely," purred Miss Merman over the breakfast table in her seventeenth floor apartment on Central Park West. "Look, I get such a kick out of living that I don't even mind giving half my money to the Government. Have another glass of milk."

I balked on the second glass of milk, but Ethel polished off her breakfast with at least a quart more while we gossiped about her success since the day she put the last pothook in her stenographer's notebook and trimmed the "Zim" off of Zimmerman to become Ethel Merman. And during the conversation I discovered that Ethel's greatest charm is the way she looks at her own accomplishments. She isn't one to invite you to throttle her for saying, "Oh, I'm not really so famous." She knows that she has had Broadway practically gaga for five or six years and as far as she's concerned, it's swell. The clothes, and furs, and diamonds, that go with success are all right, too.

"But look," she stopped abruptly in the middle of a sentence, "don't let's give me all the credit. Every show I've been in has had a couple of sock songs. Take 'Red, Hot and Blue' for instance. What more could anybody ask than Cole Portor's 'De-Lovely?' And remember 'I Got Rhythm' from 'Girl Crazy?' That's the song that made me."

When Ethel sings "It's De-Lovely" in scene two of act one of "Red, Hot and Blue," the house doctor runs up and down the aisle with a bottle of smelling salts to revive people who have swooned, and along Broadway where the gossipy boys sit around a bottle of Scotch instead of the cracker barrel, the odds rise each night against ever finding another bet like Merman. But she is unconscious of the fact that she has it-plus and that she makes Dietrich look like a siren suffering from pernicious anemia.

"Gee, it's swell to be alive," says Miss Merman and whether she knows it or not, that's the idea she gets over to the audience. After an evening of watching her, the graybeards feel 10 years younger and their wives feel like choking Ethel.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman still pinch themselves to be sure they're not dreaming that their little girl is the veteran of four or five successful musical comedies and the miracle maid of Broadway. Certainly when little Ethel turned up in a crib in their Astoria home just 26 years ago, they had no idea that she'd ever turn out to be the tonic that doctors prescribe for tired business men. But they reckoned without Ethel and her energy.

ASTORIA, N. Y., woke up to the fact that the Zimmerman girl was a natural born entertainer one night about 21 years ago when she wowed the customers at a charity benefit with a rendition of "How You Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm." During the war, Ethel did her bit by entertaining the soldiers at Camp Mills and Yaphank with "Over There" and "Pack Up Your Troubles" and by the time she was through school she had gathered enough nerve to charge $10 for singing at political powwows and weddings, but Astoria wasn't excited enough about her to pay her not to move to Manhattan.

"I got a job as stenographer at a wheel brake concern so I'd be sure of an income and then hunted singing engagements at night," Ethel said. "That meant losing lots of sleep, but I made up for it by sleeping on my typewriter during the day. Until you've tried sleeping on a typewriter, you'll never appreciate a pillow."

Ethel's boss happened to be a millionaire sportsman who knew a lot of theater folks and one of her duties was ordering flowers for the boss' pals. Ethel was about to decide that sending flowers to actresses was the nearest she would ever come to the stage when she got the bright idea of asking her employer for a letter to George White of Scandals fame.

"Sure," said the boss. "You write the letter and I'll sign it."

And Ethel did. She made it clear that there was nobody in the world who could sing a song in just quite the way that Ethel Zimmerman did and that Mr. White would be a smart guy if he hired her.

Mr. White looked at Ethel and not at the letter and asked wearily: "What do you do, girlie?"

"I sing," Ethel managed to croak.

"How about a job in the chorus?" countered White, and Ethel flounced out and went back to her typewriter. No chorus girl job for her.

About this time she connected with a job at Little Russia, where long-haired young men wept into their wine over the state of the world and seldom listened to the dark-haired girl singing songs so hot they would sizzle your grandfather's beard. But one man did listen—a widely-known theatrical agent. So Ethel delivered herself into his hands, let him chop the "Zim" off of Zimmerman, and woke up one morning to find a contract from Warner Brothers under her pillow. What Warner Brothers had in mind has never been explained, for the nearest Ethel got to the movies was collecting her dough every week. The contract forbade her to dance, sing, type, cook or scrub for anybody else and so there

Is Hollywood Mere Suburb Of New York?

By Lucius Beebe

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.

THE sun is proverbially reputed never to set on the possessions of the British Commonwealth, and nowadays, when it declines over Hollywood it at least gives three hours of additional daylight to suburban New York. For Hollywood is in many ways closer to Manhattan than Pelham Manor, and there are indications that Sunset boulevard is little more than a continuation of Park avenue.

The place this winter is simply awash with Gothamites wafted to town amidst welcome blizzards of currency, and the spending, whoopsing and general carnival turilee and tantivy that rages between the Santa Anita racetrack and the Victor Hugo, presided over by that soigne waiter captain, John Steinberg, once of Billy Rose' Casino de Paree, is, in a word, something.

ALFRED VANDERBILT, who never drinks, has been here for more than a fortnight now, and has had just an even 28 luncheon and dinner partners, never the same one twice. Jock Whitney and his cousin, C. V. Whitney, and the soi-disant refugee from Fifth avenue, Neely Vanderbilt, are regulars at the Turf Club's magnificent rooms over the grandstand at Santa Anita five afternoons a week. Fred Wildman of Bellows & Co., is doing the night spots with Joel Savre and Nunnally Johnson, while Alva Johnston is at the Beverly Wilshire, getting material for a new Saturday Evening Post series.

You can see all the same hats along the wall tables at the Vendome you saw last week in the lounge of the Ritz and The Chief. The Union Pacific's new streamliners are racing out with drawing rooms full of the regulars on first nights and the clientele of the back room of the Plaza. Oliver Messel, wag of the Elsa Maxwell set, is having what the fashionable French would call a success foolish. All the place needs is Clara Bell Walsh, Odd McIntyre and John Perona to be New York in its entirety, so far as Gotham celebrities are concerned. Native Wilshire and Sunset folk feel that their noses are a little out of joint because three-quarters of the names that make news here are Eastern names.

MY OPINION

Martha Carr

My dear Martha Carr:

I "DEDICATE" my lines to "Mrs. J. B.," who assailed "I Envy You" on the question of caring for children. Work always becomes a task when it is distasteful to us. But perhaps "I Envy You" would not take the many demands of children in the same way; but would feel that youngsters are a happy pleasure. Her sentiments are worthy.

I couldn't help being amused at "Mrs. J. B.'s" attempt to "teach them prayers" and "how to be unselfish," while her heart condemned a Providence who bound her as a slave to those duties. A living prayer—a life influenced by unselfish, loving care, interest, gratitude for them, would do more than to demand phrases uttered by little lips.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

As to ambition—the highest a mother can have for her child is that it be honest, brave, independent and ambitious; instead of wanting them to have gold spoons handed to them on a tray.

H. B.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

DUE TO CIRCUMSTANCES, I left high school a year ago and am now returning. Could you please tell me if there is a summer high school, where I may make up some of the time I lost? How many subjects may I take?

Thanking you, I remain, M. D.

The principal of your school or the information department of the Board of Education would be able to give you this information in more detail than I could use in the space I have. You can telephone the office of the Board of Education, if you do not care to ask your own principal.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I SHOULD LIKE TO SAY to "Not At All Old-Fashioned": Never laugh at a boy's high ambitions; because behind every great man's ambitions is a woman. If a fellow seems ambitious, don't laugh; maybe you're the woman.

The fulfilling of men's ambitions is what made this modern world. A fellow needs no ambition to live for himself; $10 a week will keep him. But to take care of a wife and family he needs ambition to place himself and family in the sun.

WILLIAM B.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM A YOUNG GIRL and a student in my first year of high school. I am deliberating on the career that I should choose for my future. My parents wish me to take a business course and pursue that line of work. I, however, am very much interested in writing; by that I mean poems, stories, etc., and would like to take a course in journalism.

Would you please help me decide whether it would be worth while for me to study journalism? Can you suggest a school of journalism to me where I might study in the summer months?

Gratefully yours, PERPLEXED 14.

You are quite young to make a decision about this, especially since you need more English, perhaps, as part of your study for either line of work. A special effort in this study and in composition, while you are pursuing your high school course, would be valuable equipment.

Inquire at Washington University for a bulletin of summer courses and write to Missouri University, also. Washington U. has both day and evening classes in this work, during the regular school year. It would be well for you to ask at some colleges for suggestions about preparation and requirements for either line of work and perhaps then this would enable you later to be more certain about your choice. You might take a correspondence course.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● WOULD YOU BE SO KIND as to ask your readers if they have, or know where I could get, a reading, "The White Sox?" I do not know the author, but it tells of a young lady who goes to a game of the "White Sox" wearing white stockings, and she takes everything yelled at the ball players to herself. I heard this several years ago at Chautauqua. Another reading I would like to find is "Because I'm a Red Head." If any of your readers can give me any information about these pieces, I shall be thankful. MRS. O. V. C.

"The White Sox" sounds as if it might be a piece by the late Ring Lardner. Perhaps some of the readers of this column will know definitely.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I WANT TO ASK YOU to solve two problems for me. My boy-friend comes to see me every Saturday night and sometimes on Wednesday. We usually go to town to a picture show. Well, the trouble is, my girl friend always wants to go with us. For a while she would ask to go, but now she just gets ready and goes without being asked. Then when we get to town she wants to drive around and find herself a boy-friend. If she doesn't find any, then my friend has to pay her way. We just get tired of this.

Well, the other problem is this: The weather is cold now and when my boy-friend comes out on Sunday we all stay in the living room and play cards. About 10 o'clock everyone goes to bed but my mother. She sits right there in the room and listens to everything we say. He feels like he isn't wanted and only stays until about 10:30. Don't you think my mother should go to bed? Or am I wrong? WONDERING.

Why can't you have your friend drive around the block or down the lane, whichever it is, and wait behind a house or a tree? Then you can slip out the kitchen door, or whatever kind the back one is, down the alley, over the fence or under the henhouse and meet your friend—and drive off without looking around. In other words, "give her the slip."

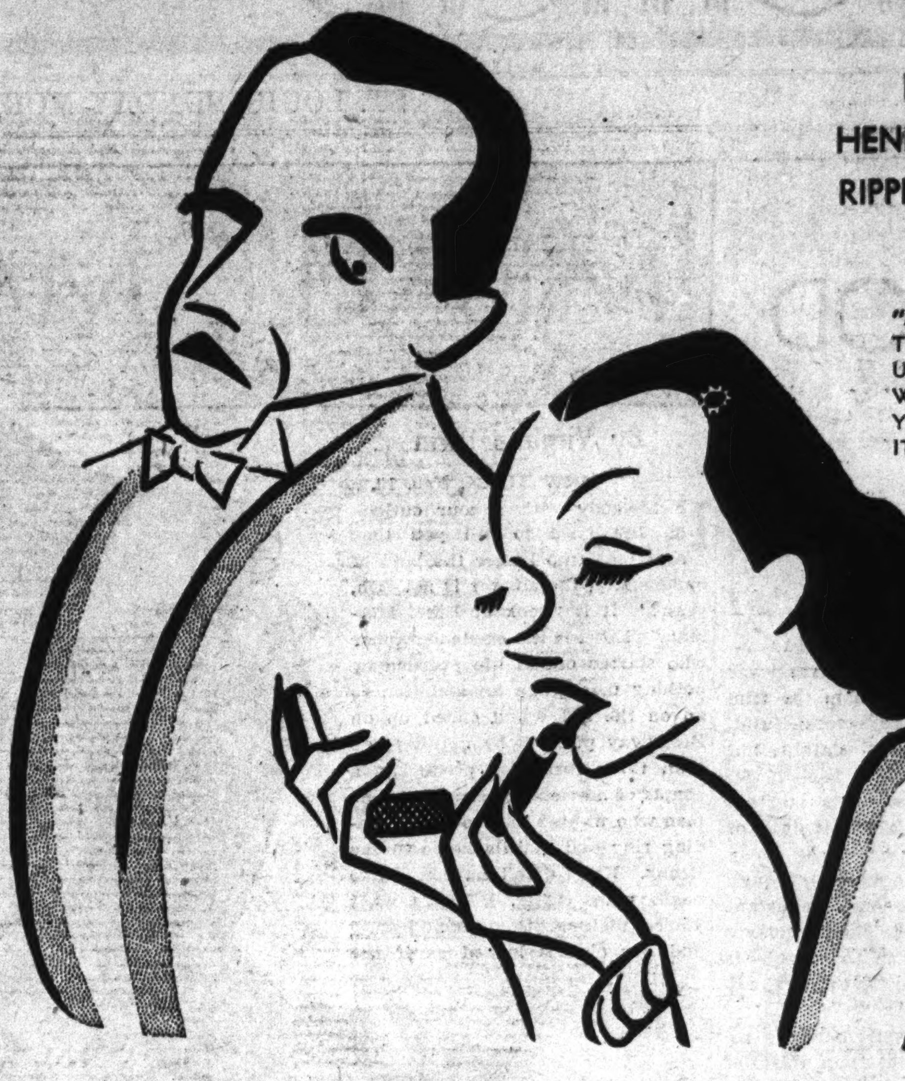
While you should really be more resourceful than this, in removing the clutches of the girl-friend, probably her sensibilities (or lack of them) are such that only physical means will serve. I would suggest that finding a boy-friend for her might be a good idea; but probably her tactics would scare him off in a short time.

Second Obstruction—While it is better taste for your mother to remain up, it seems to me she might find occupation somewhere out of earshot, both because it would make you two easier and happier, and because—well, why should she tax her own endurance in this Spartan manner?

CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

AN ANSWER TO MR. NATHAN

BY HENRIETTA RIPPERGER



"A GIRL'S ATTITUDE ON MAKE-UP IS: 'I'LL WEAR IT AND YOU CAN LIKE IT'."

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, New York's famous bachelor — Mr. Nathan to me—in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch Women's Magazine, let himself go on the subject of women's makeup. Do they think the way they do it pleases men? That's what he wants to know. He then goes on to tell us what he hates about it.

Passing over the fact that Mr. Nathan assumes that at 65 women stop caring about men (we wonder how he got that answer; it's different in the back of the book!) we go on to another—that makeup gets a decided reaction from him.

This probably proves something. Once in a while we go to an exhibition of very modern paintings. They seem a little mad to us; the figures don't tell a story, the objects are unrelated, a banana for instance, floats in midair by a plaid cloth as if somebody had tried to lay it on a table and missed; the colors bother us. We get angry. We boil over, and say what we think, with the owner, or maybe even the artist, right there in the room.

Does this insult 'em? Not a bit of it. They're delighted. "You see?" they say. "The picture gets a reaction. It must be good." Purple eye shadow, orange-colored lips and cerise nails are just as wild. But on the same grounds, if makeup gets a reaction it has something.

But Mr. Nathan misses entirely what it has.

He regards it as a technique for creating glamor. (We are sick of that word, too, but it means what he means.) He thinks glamor must be carefully turned to time and place. You get up in the morning feeling awful. If we understand him aright, Mr. Nathan's comment would be: "Good, you look awful, and that's appropriate to this hour of day." Later, he would allow you a bit of rouge and later still, still more, until come candlelight and caviar-time, and that gives you an idea of the bachelor's life—you can pull out the stops and turn on the full rainbow of color.

You not only makeup in "ascending scale" as the evening wears on, but you take into account the lighting of the particular theater to which you hope to go. This would seem to us to be risky. Fancy, for example, the plight of the lady making up for the romantic gloom of the old Belasco only to be told her escort has tickets to the New Amsterdam instead. "You told me different, George," you can hear her saying. "I'll have to change my makeup. You wait in the lobby. I won't he an hour." Or if they go to the Belasco after all, he takes her somewhere afterward and there is no guarantee as to whether the lighting will be bluish, "rosy," incandescently white, or what have you!

Not only are the man's theories too complicated for real life, but his premises about women are wrong. He assumes girls care what a man thinks about the amount of makeup they use. They don't. Try telling one of them, and see what you get. Hundreds of men have. "Dear," they begin, "you've got on much too much lipstick (eye-shadow, etc.)" All they get is a pitying smile.

"MORNING TO A WOMAN IS A PRELUDE TO A LONG, HARD DAY; WITHOUT A LIPSTICK SHE COULDN'T MAKE IT."

His second assumption (wrong again) is that they are considerate. If they only realized the stuff came off on the lapels of his coat they wouldn't use it. This does credit to Mr. Nathan's opinion of women. But they aren't like that. They don't any more care what happens to the lapels of his coat than a child cares whether you fall over the blocks he left on the floor. Mr. Nathan's Victorian portrait of a lady tremendously anxious to please her escort and deeply unwilling to cause him inconvenience is touching, but far from reality. A girl's attitude, on hats, dresses, or makeup is, "I'll wear it and you can like it!"

Makeup, Mr. Nathan, satisfies an inner need. It amuses women. It helps to carry out a sudden wish to be somebody different. It accents personality. And it indicates spirit. Sometimes, likely enough, it may be just a sign of gaiety, like a banner floating over a parade. It may be a symbol of courage, like a flag held by a dying hand. In either case, it is part of a brave front toward life. Wise people know this, and don't care how it looks as long as it makes the right feeling. The head of a shelter for women told us last year that 10-cent lipsticks were given to all women in the house as means of restoring their morale.

For lipstick and its aids is to woman what a shot of whisky is to a man, or a cup of tea to the old.

MAKEUP AS AN ART

WE AGREE with male critics of feminine makeup that it is sometimes very bad art. But it is art all the same and it makes life more exciting. Like the new discordant music it can irritate you, but after you've heard it enough, the new music makes the old seem tame. It can offend your taste like many modern pictures; but they, too, spoil the old ones for us, for after we've seen enough of them the others begin to look tame. Once you've grown used to seeing makeup, you react the same way. You may not like it or approve of it; it may annoy you, but without it the average woman looks a bit drab; and that is simply that.

H. R.

HAS Mr. Nathan never known a man who got up and said to himself, "I feel terrible," then finding he had a sympathetic listener in himself, gone on to ask, "How about a short one?" and then pours himself a pick-me-up? Under such circumstances has Mr. Nathan, we wonder, advanced arguments similar to those he gives to women? Has he said:

"You use too much of that stuff?" Or, if you knew how I hated the aftermath of used glasses, stale whisky in the air, etc., you would desist?" And if so, where did that get him?

Women take their pick-me-ups in the form of cosmetics, a harmless, amusing and effective way. Comes the dawn cold and gray, it is not only the morning after the night before, but the prelude to another long hard day. Most women couldn't make it without a lipstick. And no one would seriously want them to. Has Mr. Nathan ever considered the morning crowd in the subway? (Or is he like the woman who said, "I can't see why anyone cares to travel by subway when there are cars!") And has he ever thought what that crowd would be like if women were natural, unaffected and simple, with grayish skins and bluish lips; in short, if they looked the way men do?

Mr. Nathan has overlooked the one point on which women are vulnerable, and that is their habit of making up in public. Even here, he can't hope to influence them. As we heard a man say: "Girls rouge in where angels fear to tread."

Interpreting Trends

The surrealist movement is putting its stamp on women's fashions. Color cards which show the accepted color combinations are appearing, as are many new prints which interpret style trends in a novel manner. A recent exhibition of surrealist paintings in New York prompted the preparation of the color charts which pick up the shades dominant in the showing. Odd tones of yellow, red and green are used together to produce the brightest alliances, while orchid, blue and lilac tints supply a milder union.

Costume Frills

Lamb chop frills are the perkiest trimmings you can get for a costume. They're usually made of pique because it has that certain crispness which the title suggests, but linen and organdie also are called into service.

A cleverly-styled costume which illustrates the vogue of these frills has a bolero jacket edged with white pleated pique. The three-quarter length sleeves are trimmed in the same fresh manner. Incidentally the edging is merely tacked in place so that it may be removed for laundering.

was nothing for her to do but sit down and wait until she was free to get back into circulation. At the end of six months she had a good rest, but no movie experience, and joined Jimmy Durante at the Ambassador's Club.

"I was going fine until my tonsils balked," she giggled. "But after having some very fine needlework done on them, I was able to go to the Roman Pools Casino in Miami Beach where I got $300 a week and a lot of sunshine and after that the feathers flew. I came back to New York to the Richman club, played Brooklyn Paramount with Paul Ash, sang with Guy Lombardo at a swank club in Valley Stream, L. I., and then along came Vincent Freedley with an offer of a part in "Girl Crazy"—just at the time I had made the Palace. You know they say if you play the Palace you can play anywhere in the world and I guess there's something to it."

After the show at the Palace each night Ethel went to rehearsals for "Girl Crazy." She worked herself practically into a decline but the first night she sang "I Got Rythm" she had Broadway by the neck and contracts by the sackful. "Girl Crazy" ran for eight and one-half months and then Ethel went to the Central Park Casino, made eight shorts for Paramount, played picture houses, and then joined George White's Scandals—this time at Mr. White's request. There was a song in White's show that year that Ethel wrapped up and took home just as she did "I Got Rythm" in "Girl Crazy." It was "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries" and it cinched the amazing Merman's claim to being the miracle maid of Broadway. After the Scandals she went into radio and then did "Take a Chance," which contained that song "Edie Was a Lady," so suited to her blues-soprano voice.

"Then came the pictures." She smiled, remembering how they'd left her sitting the first time. "I made "We're Not Dressing," with Bing Crosby and "Kid Millions" with Eddie Cantor. Came back to New York for "Anything Goes" and then made the picture version of "Strike Me Pink." Now we're up to "Red, Hot and Blue."

—o-o—

IN "Red, Hot and Blue" as "Nails" O'Reilly Duquesne, Miss Merman makes the customers forget the rather creaky plot and remember mostly her singing of "It's d'Lovely" and "Down in the Depths (On the Nineteenth Floor.)" And when "Red, Hot and Blue" closes she wants to go to Honolulu for a vacation.

"I'm just a kid," she confessed. "If you've got money, I think the thing to do is spend it and I'm going to spend some of mine on a trip to Honolulu."

Ethel never forgets that she was once a stenographer at $30 per and still can't get used to being pointed out wherever she goes. Her wardrobe now makes up for the days when she had one good dress on which she switched collars to provide a change, and she has a chauffeur to make up for the days when she hung on a strap in the subway. Her favorite indoor sport is collecting press clippings and the only thing she ever does around the house is make tea—by putting a tea ball in a cup of hot water. She never has to diet to keep her chassis down to a size 14 dress and she is the only actress I have ever seen who is better looking off-stage than on.

Those Bounding Waves

-X-

By MARJORIE HILLIS

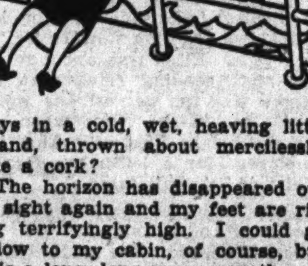
AT SEA.

MY deck chair rises, falls and lurches with anything but rhythm. The horizon, across that cold gray stretch of heaving water, disappears below the rail, then rises and climbs out of sight. The ship begins to climb, too, to an unbelievable height, the wind roars and a sheet of spray blots out the sea altogether.

I wish it would stop. It does stop. The ship drops shudderingly into a pool far below and there is an ominous quiet. Something must be wrong; I wish it would all begin again. It does.

I wonder how I ever came to leave my snug apartment at home. It was such a nice little place, warm and dry and comfortable. And New York was such a nice city, calm and stationary. It seems a long way off—three days ahead, with great billowing troughs and a roaring sea between. Between me and any place, for that matter. (Ugh—did the bow go completely under, and will it ever come up again?) My relatives seem even nicer than usual, too; it would be comforting to have one of them around if I must come to a watery grave.

I won't think of that, but I do feel pretty sorry for myself, alone on this great, unfriendly ocean. (The several hundred other passengers and the fact that coming was my own idea escape me for the moment.) I remember with amazement that only the day before yesterday I had dreamed of going to the Durbar. It is obviously a ridiculous idea. Any idea is ridiculous that involves crossing an ocean, and alone, too. Why should one spend days in a cold, wet, heaving little island, thrown about mercilessly, like a cork?



The horizon has disappeared out of sight again and my feet are rising terrifyingly high. I could go below to my cabin, of course, but it is a long, long way, even though the ropes have been put up, for me to hold on to. An optimistic steward comes along with tea, which nobody takes. I wonder if the heat would help that curious, uncertain feeling inside me. Then some one catapults himself across the deck and clings to the rail. I decide against tea.

The deck is almost empty now. There are a few men left, two or three of them unbecomingly asleep in their chairs, the rest hardy souls and proud of it. They seem to be enjoying it all, and I think indignantly that they have no imagination. They are dull, stupid creatures, I decide.

Then it occurs to me that perhaps their courage is wiser than my fear. If the sea were a shade more calm, I would have faith—and with no more knowledge; I would take for granted the skill of the men who designed and built the ship, and the men who charted the course and invented the instruments that make it possible to follow it, and the man on the bridge who will—I still hope—steer us to safety.

It is a comforting thought. I am not afraid any more—but I am still a little seasick.

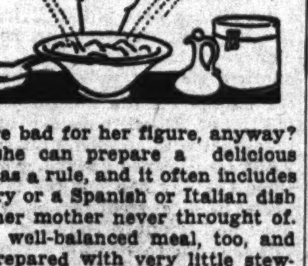
"DEAR MISS HILLIS: It's all very well to extol the virtues of living alone—but what about the food problem? Suppose you go to business and have no maid and get sick to death of restaurants. What do you do then? You can't expect a lone female to get a well-balanced meal for herself alone! H. W."

Dear H. W.: But I do expect just that. And, what's more, I know of quite a number of girls and women who do. Not always just for themselves—they often ask a friend in. (Which doesn't double the cost, because the friend asks them back.)

A well-balanced meal isn't such a difficult achievement, in these days when so much that one can buy is really well prepared. At least, many of the women I know don't seem to find it so. Incidentally, I think the average working girl is much more domestic than she gets credit for being. The fact that she has to eat around in restaurants at noon, and sometimes at night, makes her more sophisticated about food than the average young woman who lives at home. And the fact that she is trained in independence seems to make her more enterprising about experimenting. Of course, she doesn't make the biscuits that mother used to make. Why should she, when she can buy such excellent ones and when she knows they're bad for her figure, anyway? But she can prepare a delicious meal, as a rule, and it often includes a curry or a Spanish or Italian dish that her mother never throught of. It's a well-balanced meal, too, and it's prepared with very little stewing on her part, and after office hours.



The nights when you're alone are the nights to do the experimenting. That needn't be as extravagant or as difficult as it sounds, for a main dish and a green salad or a green vegetable make up a very good meal, indeed, with a simple sweet for dessert. It's a good idea to make enough French dressing to last the week out, over the weekend, and to keep it in the ice-box.

Another good idea is to concentrate on two or three dishes—such as a Spanish omelet, and a cheese souffle, and an Italian spaghetti, till you're so expert that they don't seem like great undertakings. Consider them as specialties of the house, and learn to make them so well that you're famous for them among your friends. It's not much trouble and it's one more way to add to your popularity.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

WITH society still scandalis at the accounts of the fabulous sums spent on Philadelphia debutantes, we thought this a good time for us to dig out the truth about the local situation. We got so fascinated we decided to carry the investigation a little farther.

We wanted figures on what it costs a prominent father to groom his fair-haired daughter to be a debutante, and, assuming that risk is successful, to marry her off in style. Maybe you'll think some of the following figures exorbitant, but we assure you the grand total is a minimum estimate, because no one appears to have kept accurate account of the "extras" along the way—things like bread and butter on week-days.

Furthermore, no father is going to admit that he continued to serve His Majesty the Veiled Prophet for a fancy membership fee, just so his daughter could be a maid, maybe a special one, or queen. You could probably add several thousand dollars he put into a country club, too, in order to reserve a date for her debut ball 15 years ahead of time.

There are plenty of mothers too, whose motives in keeping up with their clubs are suspect. Lots of log-rolling goes on at those meetings, from which daughter ultimately benefits.

Warned about these undercurrents, which can't be traced to their source, you can get on into the story now.

—o-o—

ALL RIGHT, suppose we put our hypothetical girl in one of the city's private preparatory schools. She enters kindergarten and goes straight through senior year. That's 13 years in all, with tuition growing as she does. Figuring close, she could get through that much schooling on $7000. Junior and senior prom dues, chemistry laboratory fee, required books, senior picture, and such other incidentals, will "up" the final figure considerably.

A fashionable girls' camp for at least one summer would "up" it at least $500 more. We've purposely skipped dancing and piano lessons. Wise parents don't.

There she is, this sweet girl graduate, just 17, too young to come out the next fall, and not of a mind to waste four years on a college campus. Boarding school for two years is the simplest solution. There she will be exposed to all sorts of advantages. She may, if she knows her feathers, cultivate acquaintance with some of the princesses of the East with whom she can later exchange visits. And what does exposure to such advantages cost her family? One mother conservatively estimated, only $3000 per annum. Tuition may be under $2000 but someone has to foot the bills for books (not too staggering), laundry, prom, football, and house party week-ends, clothes for said week-ends (they may wear uniforms to classes) and railroad fare for miles and miles. One of the two years at finishing school our child is entitled to a trip to Bermuda, included in our $6000 budget.

THUS "FINISHED," she is now only one step removed from a debut. She must have a trip abroad under the chaperonage which automatically puts the social cachet on any prospective debutante. That can cost what the four girls in the party—the accepted number—make it, depending on itinerary and length of stay. They always cross first-class and they seldom stop at hotels where they can't have a sitting room for evenings when they are not inclined to dress for dinner below. That all costs, my pretties, most likely $3000 at the inside. But it has been proved a wise investment in poise and prestige.

Now for the presentation to society. It's to be a bang-up affair at the country club—and in this city that means the St. Louis Country Club—for 500 guests, most of whom the debutante already knows, or won't know any better after the ball is over, or doesn't care about knowing anyway.

The club is to be transformed into something or other for the occasion. A cold buffet will operate, along with the bar, all night long. Supper will be served at midnight, breakfast at 4 a. m., and the music will be practically continuous. The price? In the neighborhood of $12,000.

Certainly it can be done for less, if you serve chicken instead of squab, cut out champagne altogether, use the decorations already up in the club, and are content with a local orchestra. But if you go to the other extreme and import a nationally famous band by airplane, as was done this last season, you may get a bill for $6000 for music alone. It can't happen here? Well, it has. Let's leave the figure at $12,000, a tidy sum. It breaks down this way: supper, $1000; breakfast, $250; liquor (champagne, whisky and incidentals), $1950; music, $5000; decorations, $4000 (they have

MAN About MANHATTAN

By George Tucker

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.

THIS has been one of those horrific afternoons that remain inexpurgable in a reporter's memory—a series of those cruelly embarrassing occurences that bob up in spite of anything that can be done.

And it all began so pleasantly. I was to see James Melton about a magazine article, and he was to provide certain items of information as well as a number of unpublished informal photographs of himself hunting and fishing.

JAMES MELTON

When time for the appointment came I was told that Melton had not returned from Chicago, but his wife, a charming person from Ohio, graciously consented to pinch-hit for Jimmy, and I was to be there at about 5:30.

That left just half an hour to get a shave. However, a folder of matches exploded in my hand, and after the doctor got through with me there remained just time to get there in a cab. So, looking more like a brigand than anything else, I rang the bell and was admitted to the apartment house by a brace of haughty doormen, who scrutinize everybody before granting permission to enter. A telephone call upstairs convinced these Grand Dukes that I was expected, in spite of doubts raised by so unkempt an appearance, and I went up to one of the pleasantest apartments in New York.

● IT WAS THEN THAT MISHAPS began to pile upon me. While waiting for Mrs. Melton I reached for an expensive glass ash tray, and broke it. Hastily gathering up the fragments, I tossed them into a basket and turned just in time to greet my hostess. She is such a coolly refreshing person that the accident was soon forgotten, and presently I was taking notes as fast as I am able in a laborious, longhand fashion. Suddenly becoming all fingers, the pencil flew behind the divan—one of those low-slung deep-cushioned ones that are heavy and can be moved only by a couple of strong-armed pier-hands.

I finally discovered it just out of reach, and after an extremely awkward scramble the pencil was retrieved. By this time I was being threatened with vertigo, with blurs and dots before my eyes. I dropped a sandwich on the carpet which the dog promptly gobbled, and then I dropped my notes.

—o—o—

Mrs. Melton, charitable creature, chatted gaily as if nothing was amiss, and I am sure she will be rewarded in heaven for taking everything so casually in stride. We discussed Jim's singing, his guns, and his boats. Backing out, I bowed, smiled—and tripped over a small settee, sprawling full length on the floor. Don't ask me what was said, or how the exit was finally managed. Later, some 20 minutes or so, I got out of a cab and found myself back at the office, where a peep into a mirror proved that my face wasn't red at all. Oh, no, it wasn't red. It was green!

—o—o—

● AT THE MOMENT, 28 or 30 plays are on Broadway, and this is about the average for a season that has been fat on production but slim on hits. The largest number ever current at one time was 48, and this was during the heydey just before the crash. On the other hand, the lowest number of shows ever on Broadway was a total of one. This was during the actors' strike in 1919, when every production in town was closed except "John Ferguson," a product of the Theater Guild. It was this break that made the Guild, then in its swaddling clothes, financially independent.

If one were to poll the critics for the best performances by actors on Broadway in the last two decades, their selections would be something like this:

Frank Craven in "Bought and Paid For"; Alfred Lunt in "Outward Bound"; Walter Huston in "Desire Under the Elms" (or "Dodsworth"); Louis Wolheim in "What Price Glory?"; Charles Gilpin in "The Emperor Jones"; Lionel Barrymore in "The Copperhead"; Frank Bacon in "Lighnin' "; Richard B. Harrison in "The Green Pastures"; Nat Goodwin in "Oliver Twist," and George M. Cohan in "The Song and Dance Man."

—o—o—

Not all slogans or signs mean anything, but there is one noticed in a restaurant where the service isn't particularly good. It says: "To waiters: when you meet your patron, say, 'Have you ordered, sir?' And when you have returned his check, say, 'Thank you, sir.' Thank you, sir, is a manly statement. Saying it proudly marks you as a gentleman and tends to remove any annoyance which quick service might cause."

Well and good, but I've a hunch the waiters in this particular restaurant can't read.

—o—o—

● A DOZEN NEW MAGAZINES have appeared on the stands since Dec. 1, and at least seven more will make their appearance this month. . . . A charwoman in Houston street has a daughter in an expensive finishing school. . . . Most of the patrons in the chop suey restaurants at noon are shop girls. Chinese cafe owners say that chop suey addicts crave it about once each week. More than that dulls the appetite.

A hotel impresario writes such voluminous diaries that in five years he has filled 27 tomes. . . . An average daily entry will amount to several thousand words.

Zane Grey has been invited by the Australian Government to explore 13,000 miles of hitherto unfished waters. . . . His greatest catch is a world-record tiger shark weighing more than 1000 pounds.

—o—o—

MORE PERSONAL NOTES off a New Yorker's cuff: City Hall Park will soon be flaming with multi-colored tulips. . . . A motorman on a First avenue bus amuses his customers with snatches of "Aida," in a fine tenor voice. . . . Most Gypsy restaurants entertain their patrons with string ensembles. . . . A criminal courts reporter runs a book shop on the side. . . . And at least three famous Broadway columnists began their careers as ham actors.

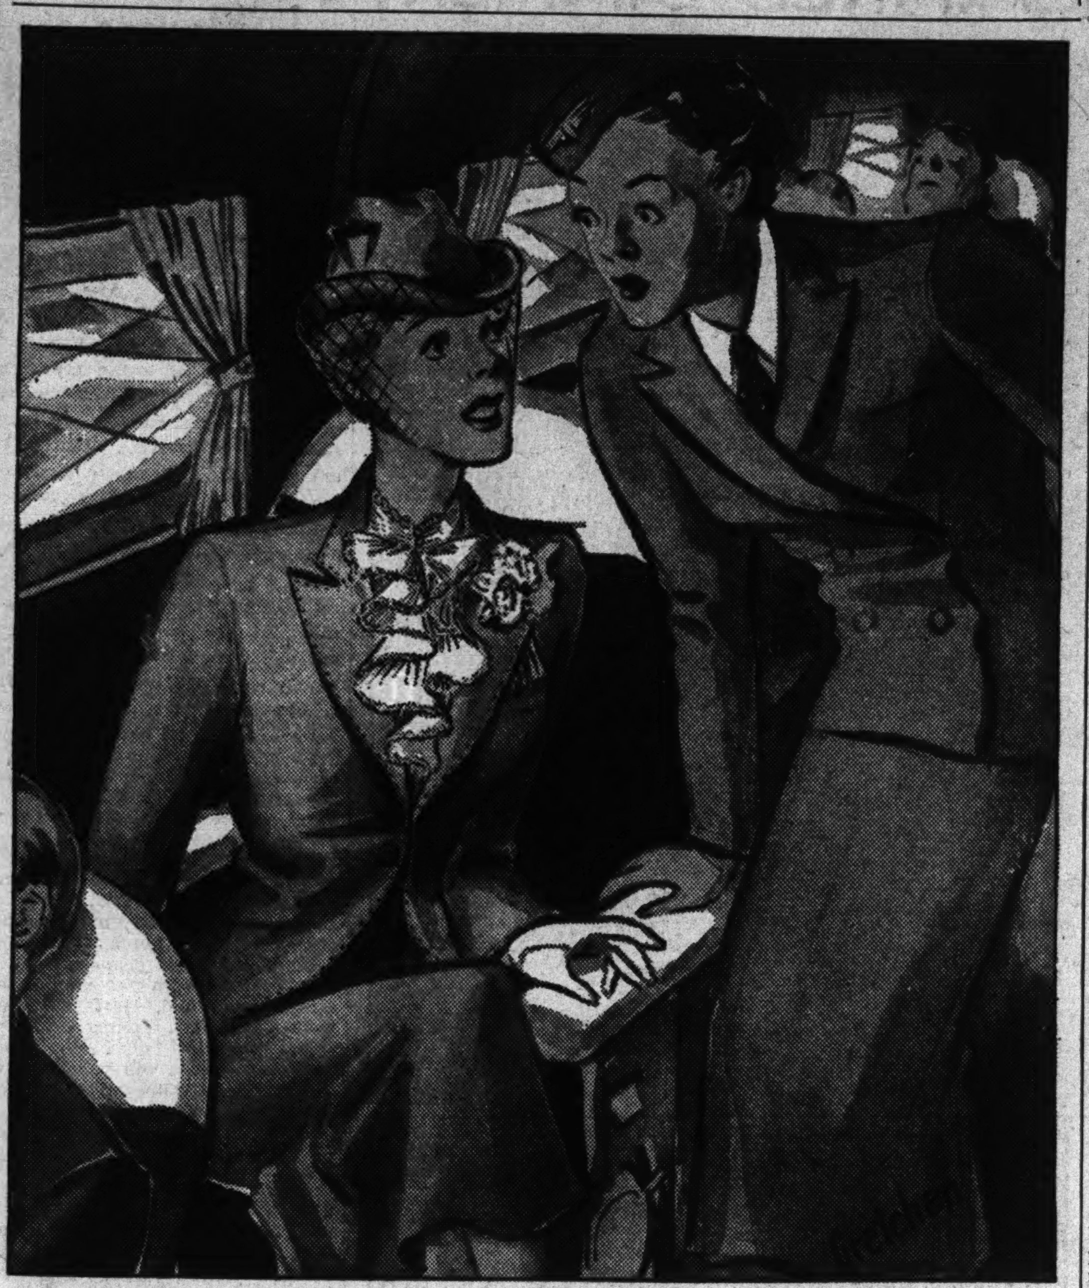
PEGGY FEARS

Peggy Fears has the most luxurious wardrobe of fur coats in town. . . . Sixth avenue in the 40's is so crowded at lunch time that hundreds of pedestrians are forced to walk in the street. . . . A favorite lunching place for publishers is a Hungarian restaurant near Sheridan Square. . . . At German beer gardens in Yorkville waiters and patrons frequently form quartets. . . . Herbert Asbury, whose writings are mainly devoted to the sinful sectors of large cities, is the son of a preacher.

Madison avenue shop windows are filled with costumes for tropical beaches, while outside on the street pedestrians are chin-deep in mufflers and overcoats. . . . At an auction of antiques the portrait of a noted actress didn't get a single offer. . . . There are pay-telephones in the hallways of at least 10,000 apartment houses and homes in New York. . . . A Jersey casket maker takes the tube to Times Square at noon every day. He likes to have lunch in a restaurant frequented by theatrical celebrities.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

STYLE-SMILES -o- By GRETCHEN



"Would you mind turning back?—I left my compact in Cleveland or Kansas City."

For that 35 pound wardrobe we give you the man-tailored suit. We consider it one of the "importants" of the new season. It may be of men's wear flannel, of twill, or worsted, but it must be scrupulously tailored.

In town you go delectably feminine as to accessories. A "sissy" blouse, the frillier and fussier the better; and boutonnieres, great, bushy ones, (or, if you prefer, a jeweled clip incorporating any strange animal you may fancy; for instance, a lizard, a panther, a crab or the like.) Aloft, the spectacular little Homburg, complete with a shaving brush feather, and replete with a coarse mesh veil tied snugly over your new spring makeup.

In the country, a plaid skirt, slouch hat, tailored shirt, your brogues and pigskins.

Last, but certainly not least—(if you've an eye to the future) you'll have your husband's tailor make you a pair of impeccable slacks. Hollywood and Palm Beach say you'll wear them from morning into the wee hours.

GIRLS, GROOMING, AND JOBS By Helen Jameson

BOSSES have eyes in their heads and if they're worth anything as individuals they have sound judgment. They listen to what the applicant for the job has to say, size her up. They don't know whether she is capable. Only time will settle that matter. What they're interested in is making an estimate of the young woman. Will she fit in with the office force, do her work quietly and efficiently or will she be the monkey wrench that throws the machinery out of order, as sometimes happens?

If she goes into the boss' office on high heels that make a clatter her chances are nil. It is surprising how many fobias men have. The clatter of heels is distracting, like the noise of a vacuum cleaner. The boss thinks he could never bear it. So he'll let her "hear from him later"—maybe. And that's the end of that job trail.

Men are observing of women's hair. They notice stray whispy strung-out curls, and don't like' em. An untidy head will probably mean an untidy desk and fingernails of uncertain grooming, about which, more later.

THERE IS the matter of the voice. A pleasing voice, low pitched and business-like, is worth a lot to the job hunter. It is a recommendation. A girl with a harsh, strident voice is usually one who lacks poise. She lacks good sense and fastidiousness because a strident voice is one that is not modulated. She offends the human ear.

The applicant for a job should be well groomed and look her best, and not look as if she were conscious of looking well. That is not the day to try out a new coiffure or to have a facial with a grand flourish of makeup. Business men expect that the complexion will be treated with powder, that the lips will be tinted, but they fight shy of rouged cheeks, penciled eyebrows, mascara touched lashes. So much synthetic beauty passes, and no more.

GOOD POSTURE! That's another point. The woman who is no longer young must be keen about it, since the way the figure is carried has more to do with fortunate birthday guessing than gray hair or wrinkles. Let the shoulders stoop, head plunge forward, the back lose snap, and you're old, no matter if you're traveling in your thirties.

Don't show signs of nervousness. If you don't get the job, you're no worse off than you were before applying. Don't ask the boss a lot of questions. Let him ask 'em. And keep a bright look on your face even though you're scared out of your boots.

NOW ABOUT HANDS. Shabby looking hands are self-conscious. If the skin is rough and red through lack of cosmetic attentions, hands hide themselves. Hands are at their worst this season of the year. They need lotions, lubricants and loving care. The best and blandest soap is not too good for them. An occasional scrubbing with cornmeal puts them in good condition. Add a little soapsuds to the meal, grind it into the knuckles.

We judge people by their hands. The fussy, nervous woman keeps her fingers jigging, doesn't know what to do with them. No repose. The woman with poise has control of her hands. If hands are not beautifully molded, it is necessary to cultivate beautiful movements, have them eloquent. Be sure, above all things, to have well-groomed hands when seeking a job, and after getting it, too, for there is nothing an executive notices quicker than ugly hands in the office—unless it is noisy gum-chewing. Both are OUT.

"I'D GO TO THE ENDS OF THE EARTH WITH YOU!"
"LET'S LEAVE NOW—AND MAYBE STOP AT A NIGHT CLUB ON THE WAY—"

Tailored Frocks

Trim little tailored frocks which resemble suits or coats promise to be important fashion news this spring. Some of them are made of old-fashioned twill materials, or of soft kasha fabrics, while others are created of a synthetic material resembling burlap in the coarseness of the weave. They follow the straight line silhouette, the regulation coat style being buttoned up the front from hemline to V neckline, with the lower button left unfastened so that the skirt adds a slight swing. The jacket model is a tricky little affair which looks as much like a suit as it does like a two-piece dress. A printed scarf at the neckline, a novelty belt and a bright kerchief are the usual tailored accessories.

Right Neckline Decoration an Aid to Frock

Necklace, Clip or Bright Collar Gives New Emphasis to Costume.

THE old black frock which is a between-season stand-by will do service for a few more weeks if you treat it to the right sort of neckline decoration. A necklace, a clip or a collar which smacks of the springtime detracts from the frock and gives a new emphasis to the costume.

Instead of the pearls you've been wearing all winter, why not add a choker of gleaming crystal? The transparent beads, elaborately cut and highly polished are newer than pearls or gold beads and they supply that same crisp note to a costume that is attained by lingerie touches. Some crystal necklaces that are extremely elaborate are appearing in the shops. There is one six-strand choker, for example, that is clasped with real diamonds and is as handsome an accessory as you could find. Less expensive necklaces of single, two or four strands look exceedingly attractive on a black or navy blue frock.

CORAL CONTINUES to offer a striking contrast with black, and also is worn successfully with navy blue. There is one style of coral necklace that is designed with a flat floral motif and has a medallion front. This lies close to the fabric of the frock and is much more flattering than the heavy coral beads which have been on display for several months.

In neckwear of the lingerie type, fluted pique and pleated net frills are being worn extensively. The neckline which is rather high and draped is made higher by a standing frill of pique or may be given a dainty contrast by a very narrow edging of pleated lace. The vogue of lower necklines gives the V-shaped collar of lingerie an opportunity to become important once more as well as adding variety in the way of decorative contrasts.

run as high as $8000 at the St. Louis Country Club).

OUR MODEL is shaping up. She's definitely in the matrimonial market now. With a few smaller and less costly parties thrown in during debutante year, and a cruise for recuperation after, she can rest on her oars until the right man comes along. Should she lag a little, letting her contemporaries beat her to the altar, then she'll be asked to serve as bridesmaid not once, but several times, at no less than $200 a wedding, at least so one father reported. He was allowing for a dress, probably never worn again; an especially nice wedding gift, and a party for the bridal attendants—the minimum budget.

That expense is picayunish compared to the cost of our protege's own fashionable wedding. Let's give her a church ceremony, with 500 in the audience, followed by a reception for 300 guests, at home. The capacity of "home" has been doubled by the construction of a marquee, which can, and has, cost recently, right here in St. Louis, $5000. That's probably the biggest single item. The church can be decorated passably with Easter or calla lilies, plenty of potted palms and candles, for $500. Which is not to say you couldn't do it for a good deal more, as much as $2000, in fact. Decorations at home will come to about $300. If you serve the $4 special blueplate supper to your 300 guests, you have a bill for $1200. Champagne for everybody will run about $750, and Scotch for everybody else depends on how long you continue to serve it after the bride and bridegroom have fled.

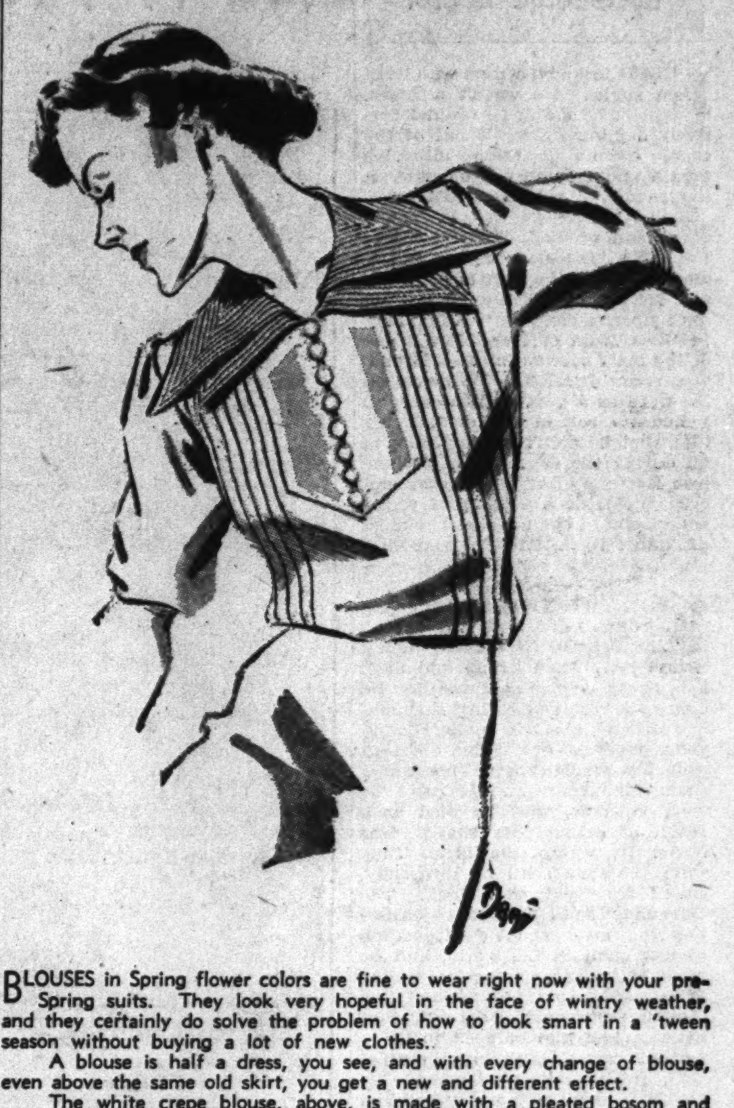
WE HAVEN'T counted on the fee to the church (quite separate from the bridegroom's obligation to the minister); the engraving of invitations and announcements; the incidental music for the reception; optional use of a vested choir at church (some places that costs $5 per vested chorister); the bride's gifts to her attendants (unless you have more than six now you cut no figure at all), and the wedding gown.

One of our most widely known designers says he can turn out a smart costume of finest quality satin, complete with lace-trimmed slip, and tulle veil, for $150. You've heard about the ones that cost several thousands.

As for personal dowry—that's up to the bride's father. We do know, however, that a local linen house with a national reputation can assemble an adequate trousseau for $6000. This includes bedroom, bath, table and kitchen linens, and such miscellaneous but indispensable items as cocktail napkins and finger bowl doilies—gaps to be filled in by relatives.

Now what have we? A young society matron, with an impeccable history, cut precisely to the pattern. And she represents, in computable round numbers, at the very least, an investment of $40,000.

PRE-SPRING BLOUSE



BLOUSES in Spring flower colors are fine to wear right now with your pre-Spring suits. They look very hopeful in the face of wintry weather, and they certainly do solve the problem of how to look smart in a 'tween season without buying a lot of new clothes.

A blouse is half a dress, you see, and with every change of blouse, even above the same old skirt, you get a new and different effect.

"St. Valentine's Day Is for Acts of Innocent Affection"

By Angelo Patri

THERE is a story that tells how a good old man who loved children used to hang bunches of flowers on the doors of their homes on a certain spring morning. That was St. Valentine, and his loving service to little children has become our St. Valentine's day.

We have celebrated this day by sending pretty cards to those we love. Children to their mothers, young things to their sweethearts. The love in the message is what makes it distinctive, the love that is between two people and that is so difficult to express by any other means than the shy offering of an anonymous gift of colorful beautiful triviality.

This can be a very happy expression of little children for their love of companions and friends. Left to the children, unspoiled by adult interference, it stays the lovely innocent thing it was in the beginning. Too often we find it marred by the selfishness of adults who have never truly grown up and who have carried over into maturity the unsatisfied longings of childhood.

"Dear teacher: Please see that these valentines are delivered to Rose Marie tomorrow morning. I want her to get the most valentines of any child in the room. If you think anybody else will get more please let me know and I will send some more. Don't overlook this. Sincerely,

"HER MOTHER"

An there were exactly 40 valentines in the package.

That is an act of innocent affection transformed into selfishness, envy, greed, falsity. Could mistaken affection go further astray than that? The day that might have been made a day of grudging and envy and jealousy and heartburning, not by the children, but by those who loved them. Let's not have that.

Some coarse souled individual thought that St. Valentine's day could best be celebrated by sending out ugly, insulting messages attached to vulgar pictures. Not daring to insult those he disliked to their faces he took this way of doing it, St. Valentine's day becomes a day of humiliation and pain for some unoffending and helpless people. Ugliness takes the place of beauty and the human spirit is affronted.

Give the day to the young people. Let them send their shy greeting of affection to each other without interference from us who have passed the time when shy greetings filled our hearts with a feeling warm as spring sunshine, tender as its blooms, lovely as its magic. Don't ask too many questions and don't lay violent hands upon so tender a thing as a youthful Valentine.

There is not so much beauty in the lives of young people today that we can afford to lose any opportunity for its creation and continuance. Let us have the spirit of old St. Valentine alive in the land this day. Let us keep it for what it was meant to be, a shy expression of tender affection.

Rector's Own Dishes

By George Rector

I USED to know a man who lived on snails. He wasn't a freak, either; he didn't go around furtively digging up snails out of the sand, cramming them into his mouth and darting out of sight at the sound of a human footstep.

By no means—he was, in fact, a gentleman of distinction. He was Dan Daly, Broadway's famous comedian during the days of pug dogs and the wasplike figure. He starred once upon a time with Edna May in "The Belle of New York," one of the most successful of all Broadway record-breakers. He swore on his word as a gentleman-actor, and I had no reason for disbelieving him, that he didn't eat anything at all during the day; and he'd come into Rector's after the theater and order up a double order of snails with a pint of champagne. The meal did him service until the next midnight.

● FOR TWO YEARS during this extraordinary diet Dan was playing in "The Belle of New York," doing a fine job. Then he up and died. I've never determined whether he died as a result of eating, I should say offhand, about 20 snails, though your modern scientific dietitian probably wouldn't give me much room for argument. It can't be true, however, that he died as a result of eating poor snails. For our snails were of the finest. They were the true snail of Burgundy, raised from patrician stock. The Burgundy snail (I'm not joking) has the most equable disposition of any snail in the world, and he feeds exclusively on the leaf of the Burgundy grape. We treated him like the extra-special delicacy that he was, had him shipped to us in padded crates, each crate stuffed with fresh grapevine leaves. We cooked him lovingly and served him smiling.

● I'M NOT GOING to bother to mention a recipe for snails because even after this bit of snail reminiscence the chances are you wouldn't be interested. To many people's way of thinking, snails belong in that great borderland of dubious food culture which, just a generation ago, included tripe and calves' brains.

There's the celebrated case of diamond-back terrapin which used to be fed to the slaves in the South in such quantities that some of the slave owners' contracts carried clauses which forbade feeding terrapin to the Negro boys oftener than twice a week. You can't get terrapin now save in the hoitiest places and you'll be lucky to get it under $5 a portion. Sweetbreads came under this same category, though sweetbreads have never, I'm glad to say, become as ridiculously exclusive as terrapin. You probably haven't thought of serving braised sweetbreads to the family—but why not?

● SOAK ONE PAIR of sweetbreads in cold water for one hour. Then duck them into a quart of boiling water, into which you've first put one tablespoon of vinegar and one teaspoon of salt. Then simmer them for 15 minutes, drain them, and give them another dousing with cold water so that they're good and firm. Next give the sweetbreads a good going-over, taking out any stray bits of windpipe or membrane, then press them under a light weight. Dot them with butter and lay them out in a shallow casserole and stick the casserole into a moderate oven.

In five minutes baste them with some melted butter; at the same time lightly brush each sweetbread with beef extract. The best way to do this is put one teaspoon of beef extract in a small cup and put the cup handily by you on the stove. Put the sweetbreads back into the oven and bake them for five minutes longer. Then baste them again and season lightly with salt and pepper. When you've got the sweetbreads on a hot platter pour the rest of the butter and extract sauce which is in the casserole over them. Garnish the platter with green peas and sprigs of parsley.

● THERE'S A CHANCE that frogs' legs will appeal to you. Here they are—Saute Meuniere:

After washing and drying, season the frogs' legs with salt and pepper, then dip them in flour and fry them in hot butter until they're golden brown. Take them out and brown a piece of butter in the same pan. Pour the butter over the frogs' legs that are now on a platter that you've lightly rubbed with clove of garlic. Garnish the dish with quartered lemon.

WHY NOT Serve PLANKED DINNER?

Preparation of This Palatable Meal Eliminates Clutter in Kitchen

PLANKED SUNDAY BREAKFAST FEATURING EGGS AND SAUSAGE IN HOMINY NESTS.

By Clementine Paddleford

THE planked dinner is a de luxe edition of the one-dish meal. It has all the humble virtues of convenience that have popularized the casserole combining meat with vegetables, yet none of the latter's plebeian ways. When the meat or fish is ringed around with vegetables neatly arranged in individual portions, the whole framed with a border of Duchess potatoes, boiled rice, noodles or hominy, the nicely assembled plank meal is truly a good-to-eat picture; a "still life" of opulence.

Yet its eye arresting, palate clutching qualities are only half the planked meal's charm. The manner in which it definitely eliminates kitchen clutter is a virtue not to be overlooked. Dishes which have a way of piling up with amazing rapidity during the process of the average meal, by it are reduced by at least a third. The planked meal necessitates no serving dishes with their extra serving spoons, no dishes for creamy foods—these are served in natural holders—mashed potato nests, peppers, hollowed tomatoes and onion cups. The entire main course and sometimes the salad as well are served direct from pank to dinner plates.

The planked dinner eliminates all last-minute scurry of dishing up. For the food is planked in advance and in perfect safety may be left in a slow oven for that last 15 or 20 minutes before "dinner is served"—time to allow the maidless hostess a few minutes out of the kitchen in which to powder her nose, shake up a cocktail and serve it herself in the living room—all with the calm assurance that dinner is taking good care of itself. At serving time she lifts the plank from oven to shining tray of silver or chromium and carries it steaming to the table, each serving complete and ready for a faultless appearance on the individual plate.

Dinner on a plank may feature almost any one of the meats which are ordinarily broiled or baked. Steak, of course! There are few things in life that offer more temporary satisfaction than a planked porterhouse dressed with plenty of butter and seasoned as it should be at the last moment of broiling—lightly, with salt and pepper. Ham, veal, chops of any kind, hamburger and corned beef, each behaves with aplomb when cooked plank style. Chicken and fish, like steak, are at their best. In fact there's no limit to the appetizing meals one may contrive with the aid of a plank. Veal birds, for instance, and mock drumsticks, eggs and oysters, even creamed dishes served in good-to-eat holders find a plank complements their perfection.

Raw salmon planked is no novelty, but canned salmon—did you ever think of planking that? Mix the contents of a can of salmon, flaked, with an equal amount of mashed potatoes, season with salt and pepper and one-fourth cup of melted butter. Place the mixture in the center of a well-greased and heated plank and warm under a low broiler flame for 20 minutes. Easy as that to make and so good! Garnish with cress and flank with cooked vegetables.

The casserole dish may be cooked and served on a plank. Logically, this takes center position, the sides of the container hidden by a parsley wreath. The cooked and seasoned vegetables are arranged like wheel spokes around this hub of the meal.

CHOOSE vegetables that will look alluring and can be transferred with ease from plank to plate. For instance, asparagus tips laid in small bundles—each bundle inserted through a ring of lemon, pimiento or green pepper. Carrots, cut in julienne strips and string beans, julienne style. These latter may be prepared from fresh vegetables, or may be commandeered from a can. Several available brands of canned products feature these vegetables cut in long, slender sticks. Then there are canned beets fashioned like jack straws. Carrot sticks in candied orange rings brighten up the plank. So do green beans bound with rings of candied lemon.

Creamed vegetables are delicious but are not designed for the plank. They belong in croustades, timbales or in good-to-eat vegetable holders. A few of the latter "naturals" are: hollowed out tomatoes, green peppers, beets, turnips, large onions, potato shells. Spinach can be formed into a delicious nest for creamed carrots. Other nest possibilities are: hominy, spaghetti, macaroni and mashed potatoes. If not assigned the role of vegetable container, any of the last named five may, and usually does, appear on the plank as the outer border. In this case the border is added first, then backed by nests or pockets to steam the flow of vegetables or gravy.

PLANKED LUNCHEON IN WHICH LAMB CHOPS ARE USED.

Salad may be a separate course or served on the plank in the form of a garnish—carrot and cucumber straws, for instance, or bouquets of watercress, radish roses, olives, quarters of tomato or celery curls.

If you choose a plank with a tray that has a wide, flat rim, small individual salads, stuffed into hollowed-out tomato, cucumber boats, celery or endive stalks or lettuce cups, may be placed on the outside edge. A two-bite salad is sometimes pyramided on a slice of tomato or on a cucumber ring. A circle of apple, orange, pear or pineapple carries a bit of salad with obliging ease. If the salad is served as a separate course, curls of parsley, quarters of lemon or tomato are almost essential to add freshness and color to the picture.

Those small one-ounce paper cups when filled with relish, jelly, mayonnaise or a sauce lend a festive air to the plank. Neat and handy, too.

At this point, it may be well to recall an invariable rule or two governing the planked meal. Almost always the meat takes the center of the picture and the vegetables rally 'round. Alternate the vegetables for interesting color effects. Nests holding creamed foods may form the border and with the aid of noodles, rice, potatoes or hominy this border may be brought to the very edge of the plank.

FOR example, a menu that offers interesting variety in color notes would be planked chicken served with potato puff in half shells, paprika crested. These surround the chicken, alternating with the green of the broiled artichokes. Golden glazed carrot sticks fill in the extra spaces. On the rim of the tray serve individual aspic salads in lettuce cups, garnishing these with pimento strips. Chocolate frosted eclairs, filled with ice cream, would make an appropriate dessert. To introduce the meal there is nothing more cheerful than cranberry juice cocktail companioned by savory puff paste turnover made cocktail style.

Success in appearance depends upon simplicity in treatment. Planks are usually of oak or hickory, the two woods that give the sweetest flavor to the uncooked meat—ask any outdoor cook! The planks may be oblong, oval or round, and in size vary from an individual size plank made to fit neatly into a dinner plate, to a great feast-day sort of thing that will serve as many as 15 guests. In selecting one for your family, remember that practically a whole meal must be placed upon the plank. So don't be penny wise and pound foolish and choose one too small, that will be forever inconvenient. If you feel a complete set of plank, and tray is too expensive for the moment, buy the plank and use it on any metal platter or holder that will keep the hot plank from too close contact with the table.

SWEET PEA PLANTING TIME

By HARRIET W. CHANDLER

TODAY, Valentine's day, is important in the gardener's calendar. It is the day to thrust seeds of the sweet pea into the ground for bloom out of doors next summer. There is an old saying, "Sweet peas should be sown on Good Friday," but in this part of the country St. Valentine's day is better.

These are the first seeds to be planted every year, long before the frost has departed. In fact, the frost helps to break the hard coats of the dried peas and thus frees the kernels to germinate. The approved practice is to dig trenches six or eight inches deep, filling in the bottom with a layer of well rotted manure or compost of any sort. Cover this with a layer of top soil, and into the remaining sub-soil incorporate bonemeal to further enrich it. The seeds will be slow to germinate. They require 15 to 20 days in a greenhouse, and probably six weeks outdoors now, depending on the weather.

As spring days become mild the sprouts will appear as a long row of sturdy little stalks of pale green, each with two leaves clasped together over its head. When these are two inches high begin to draw the soil, into which the bonemeal has been mixed, down from the sides of the trench, filling in around and all but smothering the line of plantlets. But up they will push toward the light.

If your garden is visited by rabbits, cover the plants lightly with excelsior. When they have risen another two inches, fill the earth in about them again. And so you should proceed, step by step, until the plants are not only up to the surface and packed in tight, but have risen above and have earth mounded up about them along a ridge six inches high. The little plants can then be thinned out to stand six inches apart. The result of this method of planting will be that the vines will be supported and fed by stalks 10 or 12 inches long within the earth and roots deep below the heat of June sun.

In sweet pea culture the thing to remember is that the roots must be kept cool while the tops need plenty of sunlight. To keep the sweet peas growing and flowering well, give them a good soaking with a fine spray at least twice a week, being careful to get under the leaves so as to keep the red spider away.

The daintiness of the sweet pea in no way suggests the grossness of the plant's appetite. These little beauties are voracious feeders. When they start to flower they will ask for even more fertilization than has already been dug about their roots, to carry them through the season. When the first buds appear, feedings of liquid manure should be given at short intervals.

The secret of getting profuse bloom from your sweet pea vines is to keep them growing from the time they appear above the ground. To do this requires regular care.

The old type of grandiflora sweet pea, though having smaller flowers and shorter stems, has fragrance and vitality and in many places can be more easily grown than the Spencer varieties, which are large and orchid-flowering. But the beauty and coloring of the newer sorts are worth the extra care.

New Features In Houses at Miami Beach

Many of Them Could Be Incorporated in St. Louis Homes.

By Josephine Walter

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 13.

AT the risk of losing my "constant readers," who are smoke-bound, if not snow-bound, in St. Louis at the present moment, I am going to write about some of the glories of Miami Beach, where I am at the moment. And if I occasionally wax lyrical, it's not because I am being subsidized by a railroad or the publicity department of the city, but because Miami Beach is truly one of the beauty spots of America. And its architecture and decoration have kept pace with its natural beauties.

However, don't imagine that descriptions and details of the houses, both exterior and interior, down here are merely artistically interesting, and that they have no practical value. There are any number of new features to be seen in these houses that could, most successfully and effectively, be incorporated into the St. Louis scene.

In addition, the shops are filled with exciting furniture and decorative objects and, just as with women's clothes, many of the things that are displayed down here this winter will be shown in the St. Louis shops this coming spring and summer.

THE ERA of the Spanish villa, the Moorish Mosque and the medieval castle is past in Florida architecture. Most of the homes built down here at present are distinguished for their clear-cut lines, their practical lay-out and their extreme livability. Modern, of course, is in high favor and fits particularly well into this bright sunshiny background, but much of this type of architecture is a modernization of the traditional styles which would prove as suitable for St. Louis as it is for Miami.

To me, one of the most interesting and attractive features of the houses down here, is the way in which the landscaping has been planned as an integral part of the exterior. Granted that the tropical vegetation lends an exotic touch, impossible to obtain in our climate, it is still possible for us to get many excellent ideas from the method in which the planting is done.

In the first place, the planting is most carefully planned both as to color and contour. The massing of the vegetation is artfully arranged to accentuate the lines of the building. But, most effective of all, are the innumerable little wall gardens which are built as part of the house. These little troughs are built up against the face of the house, usually two to four feet from the ground, and they are planted at the top, much in the manner of window boxes. The beauty of this type of planting is that the greenery is silhouetted against the wall of the house, which is usually white, and seems as much a part of the house as the windows and doors.

COLOR IS another thing that the architects down here have learned to use most adroitly. About 90 per cent of these houses are white and color is used as an accenting note. St. Louis, too, has learned the charm and beauty of white houses, but it has still something to learn in the way of using color to add interest to the details.

Here, shutters, window frames and doors all add a note of color to the exterior and frequently there are even bandings of color around the house or at the corners. While turquoise and a deep bright blue seem the most favored colors, such tones as coral, sea green, yellow, gray and even lavender are frequently seen.

Another feature that is most interesting and one that might well be studied by St. Louisans who expect to build in the near future, is the layout of the houses down here. Of course, with the open air life that is led in this sunny climate, every house is planned around an outside patio, and with the many months of warm weather that we have in St. Louis, some such type of outdoor living room should prove equally practical for our houses.

A startling innovation in the placing of rooms has been introduced here with marked success. In many homes the living room is being placed on the second floor, the object being, in most instances, to take advantage of an ocean view. But I have often wondered why we haven't placed our bedrooms on the ground floor, which is always much cooler in summer, so that it would at least be possible to sleep at night.

To remove stains from white material rub the spot with lemon juice and salt, then place the fabric in strong sunlight. Repeat the process several times if necessary.

CHILD'S ROOM

IT'S quite right and proper for a mother with her first baby to have a bassinette frothy with lace and satin bows. But later when she really gets deeper into this business of making a pleasant home, she won't have time to keep all those ruffles crisp and fresh. From then on she will be watching for things that look as nice but demand less in the way of upkeep. Today we're going to describe some children's rooms of this type that we've visited lately and liked.

There was Jay's room. He was the second baby in the family so by that time his mother was ready to get down to brass tacks. She had his room papered in a fresh plaid wall paper—white with blue and red. This went all over the side walls and on the ceiling which sloped here and there since it was under the roof. About two feet up from the floor a moulding ran around the room. Above this went a wall paper border in red and blue on white and between this and the baseboard the space was painted blue. The plain and white panel end crib had the same wall paper border outlining the panels. A clothes cupboard, painted white to match, also was finished with wall paper borders. A studio couch cover of blue with white fringe, a little toy chest in red, starched white curtains, some blue rag rugs, and Jay's room was finished to a T. It looked as fresh as a daisy and had a clean crisp charm about it. And the beauty of it, to a busy woman, is that it would be no trouble at all to keep that way.

And we liked Bruce's room, too. Bruce is 11 and has a tiny attic room to himself, just big enough for a single bed, a chest of drawers and a desk, all of maple. Beside his bed he placed a radio of his own (bought with money he earned selling vegetables he raised last summer) with some book shelves near by. A plaid woven coverlet in dark blue and white does beautifully for the bedspread, while the dresser scarf is a bright length of Scotch plaid . . . the Bruce plaid by the way. But the thing that really delighted us in Bruce's room was the wall decoration. He had covered the walls with pictures of his own choosing and they ran all the way from a large locomotive to an autographed picture of President Roosevelt. After all, it was his room, so why shouldn't he have what he liked?

Kate has had a hand in the decorations of her room, also. It is painted in pale pink enamel, quite a sweet little girl shade. But a good washable enamel. The curtains are light blue and white checked gingham and so is the bedspread, so they can go right through the electric washer and ironer. The walls, being washable, are left to Katie's discretion. Usually they have large paper dolls pasted around them, though sometimes she draws crayon balloons or umbrellas or daisies there. And sometimes she gets a roll of wall paper with children's designs—the motifs she cuts out and pastes up to her own taste.

In selecting furniture for a child's room, keep in mind, of course, the fact that it should grow up with him. If you feel you must have real nursery furniture, then you can plan to paint it later, because with the exception of the crib the other pieces can be made to last a good many years. As a rule, the most practical way is to buy a separate crib, then a chest and whatever else you may have room for. Maple is our favorite wood for a child's room because it can take a lot of rough and tumble.

Bath Accessories

While rumors are floating about that color is playing a less important role in bathroom decoration, along comes a designer who introduces such a gay array of sponges, bath mats and other bath accessories that all of the previous shades become secondary. Such brilliant tones as orange, butter yellow, rust and bright green are used alone or together and there are mats and bath towels to match.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.

REPORTS reach me from the famous corner of Thirty-ninth street and Broadway where tands the world famed Metropolian Opera, that a first-rate rivalry as now broken out among the ostly larks who inhabit that great aviary.

Not that the girls are rushing ut pulling hair and scratching yes—dear, no, nothing so vulgar! t is simply that the adorers, cheering sections and downright doters of the two leading soprano stars have at last become very vocal about their favorites. The singers in question are those Titans f the trill, Mmes. Kirsten Flagtad and Lotte Lehmann.

And both wondrous singers, too ne Scandinavian, one Teutonic and both absolutely aces in the aster works of the latter school. The Dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt would seem to be a Lehmannite—t least, she led the entire Diamond Horseshoe in vociferous yet well-bred applause after a recent performance.

● OLD TIME opera-goers tell me this current rivalry brings back memories of the days when Nellie Melba and Emma Eames occupied relatively the same positions at the Met, and while their crowds of adherents didn't actually come to blows, I always understood they did give each other some pretty mean looks. Personally, I'm all for the Flagstad-Lehmann thing. At least it shows our old op'ry house sn't dying of dry rot this year. And you wouldn't think so to see t on a "Tristan" night, either. Go girls!

I suppose you heard about our terrible sky-writing scandal. It probably caused more millions more laughs than anything in our civic history. It all took place during our recent air show, when a bright young man was sent aloft to advertise it across the firament. Well, something turned our, and what he really wrote as "National Aviation Sow," Town giggled about it for days, nd was the young man mortified!

THE MOST misleading name in the world, I don't doubt, is Donna Fox. Whenever I hear it I always think of a little dark ingenue—and then I have to realize that Mr. nna Fox, is a huge figure of a usky man, and one of the greatest living bob-sledders.

I picked up a dress trick the other day from Florida, the ballroom dancer now whirling at the Waldorf, which may be useful to us shorties. She's a little girl, and says she believes that the absence of belts, or even of a arked waist line, is an excellent tunt for girls of short stature. And it does make sense, too. The upkeep of these girls is frightful, too. Florida tells me she must always have a dozen dance frocks on hand, and gets one a week.

● THE MOST EYED, courted and fussed-over girl of the winter, to date, has been little Sonja Henie, the skater turned movie actress. Whenever she appeared in public mobs trailed her, and she had a hectic time during her stay here. "Lent Is Good Time to Start Health Work"

Abstinence Is Followed by Many Persons During This Period.

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE churches took full advantage of the operation of mass psychology when they instituted Lent as a period of fasting and abstinence from the things of the world. And for those who wish to undertake a health program, it still is a favorable time to start it.

"Be good and you will be lonely," Mark Twain wrote on an inspired occasion. Reduce and you reduce alone.

But in Lent you always can get a crowd, or at least a group, to go on a diet or go on the water wagon or to quit smoking with you. You may have to go to church to find them, but even that has possibilities.

The length of the Lenten period is also about right for one of these cures. A reducing regime doesn't work unless you take three or four weeks to it. In 40 days a large group of large people should be able to lose about 20 pounds apiece—roughly, a couple of tons.

IT IS A voluntary choice now when the world is so industrialized that food is available all year round, but Lenten fasting was probably once a matter of necessity. It came at the time of year when the larder was low and the cupboard was bare. When the winter supplies had about run out, and the old people, looking at their scruffy hands, would mumble that they would be all right as soon as they could get out and pick them a mess of greens.

If Lent does nothing else but remind us of the advantage of our time over other days, it should be welcomed. It is a reminder of a social order that is passing. We are still striving with the aid—the very inadequate aid—of the social sciences to control the conduct and government of man. If success ever comes of that endeavor, all the resources of science—medical, hygienic and physical—will be concentrated and brought into play to make man's lot more endurable. Indeed, it is unthinkable to suppose that any social order can be accomplished except by the strict utilization of those resources.

The churches succeed better than the state, even now, in controlling men's conduct. It is worth while to take advantage of Lent to apply medical methods to the relief of some of our bodily and mental states at a time when the churches make our resolution stronger than at ordinary times.

Glass Shelves

Those glass window shelves which have been on the market for several years and are featured for the use of potted plants in the sunroom have a good place in the kitchen, too. When space is limited, the kitchen window can be turned into an extra "cabinet" by the addition of a shelf. Bright colored canisters, your pottery pitcher and tea pot and many other items can be kept on the shelf with artistic as well as space-saving results.

Fixing Hangers

If you have trouble with garments slipping off of the wooden hangers there are several easy methods of coaxing them into place. One is to obtain thumb tacks and insert them near the end of the hanger. Another is to use the large rubber tipped tacks which may be purchased at the hardware counter. Rubber tips also are of service if your hangers are of wire or you can wrap the edges of the wire hangers with tape until a padded protection keeps the garment from slipping.

"KITCHEN MECHANIC" is a TITLE of HONOR

A Woman Must Be Mechanical Expert to Handle Intricate Devices Now Used in Cooking.

By Caralee Stanard

IT hasn't been so long ago that the term "kitchen mechanic" brought forth an emphatic protest. A woman, whether working in her own or some other person's kitchen didn't object to being called a housekeeper, a housewife or even a domestic but once suggest that she might be a kitchen mechanic and she became as insulted as though you had said her biscuits were as hard as the sea hag's heart or her steaks as tough as Two-Gun Terry and the Beeler Boys.

But thanks to the gadget makers and all of the other inventive geniuses who keep their minds on food, the kitchen mechanic has been glorified. Who but a mechanical expert could handle all of those intricate labor-saving devices? Who could cope with those so-called time minimizers and those tricky culinary mystifiers except a woman with a natural talent for tinkering or one trained through careful apprenticeship?

According to the new order of the kitchens, there is a special device for every operation in the preparation of a meal. System and specialization have reached such a point that it wouldn't be surprising to discover any day now a new law against boiling eggs in the same kettle that has been used for potatoes or frying a chop in a skillet that has seen a strip of bacon. Everything from the kneeding of the dough to the krimping of the pie crust is a highly-tuned process calling for its own individual apparatus. Putting one's hands into anything in the kitchen from the dishwater to the cake is an offense of serious moment.

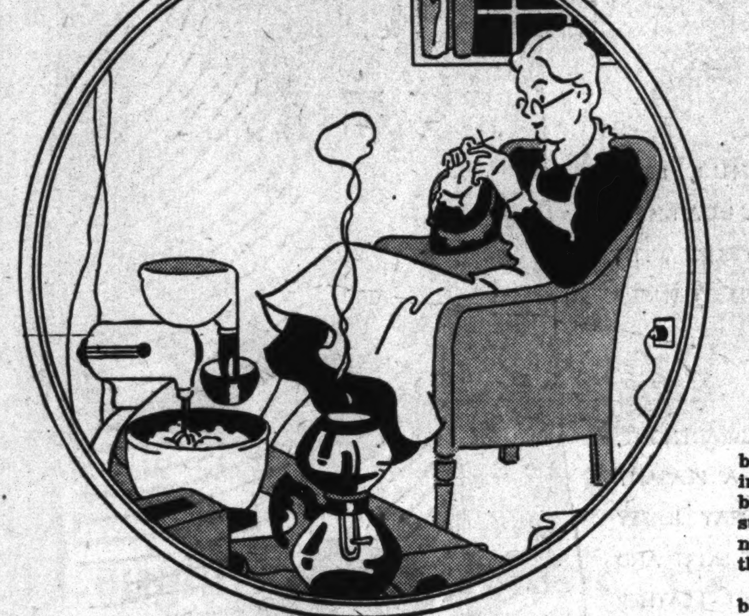
EVEN the can-opening wives no longer can be left to their fun of dispensing a meal with one sure-fire blow. There are sufficient can openers on the market to entice the most simple-minded cook into purchasing a complete ensemble, and each one seems more complicated than its neighbor. The prize type, when installed in state on the favored position in the kitchen resembles a miniature guillotine and, if manufacturers' promises come true, will chop off the heads of cans with equal precision.

Competing for honors and a favorite with those who like to perform even that trite task of preparing a canned dinner with the precision and science of the modern expert is a new gadget which looks somewhat like a doll-size ice cream freezer. It was invented to please those who dump a can of spaghetti or chile into hot water and serve the contents from the steaming container. Not only does it lift the hot can but holds it firmly while you turn a crank that cuts off the top and serves as a handle for pouring. Some rapid transition, you must admit, from the old system of openers that cut more thumbs than cans and left the container in a state of ragged dejection.

The pioneer woman who had to cook a complete meal in one old iron kettle suspended on a rod over an open wood fire had to do plenty of figuring of a sort but her problems weren't any greater than those of the modern sister who is pioneering with new-fangled notions and complicated machinery. Where difficulty of the former was in presenting variety with such meager equipment, the 1937 woman's trouble is in preparing a simple meal when she has a kitchen overflowing with tools with which to work.

Spoons now come in a multitude of sizes, shapes and metals so that there's one for sugar, another for salt and a third for measuring coffee. Knives likewise are a confusing lot and when a complete assortment "necessary" for present-day usage is assembled in a row, the exhibition is as interesting (and almost as puzzling) as a display of head knives and other sharp weapons belonging to a more primitive and perhaps more vicious era. In addition to all of the various sizes of knives used for general cutting there are those for fruit, vegetables, meat, and cake, each especially designed.



NOW MOTHER BROWN SITS BACK AND WATCHES THE WHEELS GO ROUND—A FULL-FLEDGED KITCHEN ENGINEER.

So much equipment obviously calls for storage space—and since the average kitchen is a rather small room — an engineer has to be called into service to figure out the type as well as the placing of cabinets for this and that in reference to stove and refrigerator. Once he gets everything housed according to science, blue prints are necessary to guide the housewife to her tools.

Fortunately for most housewives the revolution in the kitchen has been rather gradual. Tempting accessories in the stores have led to purchases and the scientific emphasis has come without too much turbulence.

Gifts of handsome equipment also have started women on the road to modernization. There is the case, for example, of the woman known for years as one of the best cooks in the St. Louis suburbs whose devoted son decided it was time for her kitchen to go modern. He bought the most expensive and attractive electric mixer he could find and proudly presented it to her as a Christmas gift. That was in 1935 and a year went by before Mother Brown was induced to change her methods and use the mixer. Not that she was so old-fashioned but she didn't want to take the time to assemble the parts stored in closets, attic and basement (for lack of space in the kitchen) every time the family clamored for waffles or someone wanted egg nog.

She managed to conceal her guilt until her son came home unexpectedly one day and found her wielding the old egg beater. He determined to break her of her habits of a lifetime, so this last Christmas he added a specially designed cabinet in which to keep the mixer and accessories, installed it permanently in a conspicuous place in the kitchen and destroyed the out-of-date tools. Now Mother Brown sits back and watches the wheels go round—a full-fledged kitchen engineer.

This cook's initiation into modern cookery is mild compared to the plight of Janie, the bride whose friends showered her with all of the conveniences and inconveniences of a scientific kitchen. Picture her in her little efficiency apartment, all set to prepare her first breakfast. Let's start her at her task on a Sunday morning so there's no unfair advantage or handicap, and see how she makes out.

The smart little red clock on the smart red and white shelf points to 8 a. m. as Janie steps into her cherry-red decorated kitchenette and starts her task. Her menu is simple but ample—grapefruit, an omelet, little pig sausages, toast and coffee. She opens the cabinet doors and surveys her stock, getting out one contrivance after another until all available working space is filled, including the breakfast table and a card table.

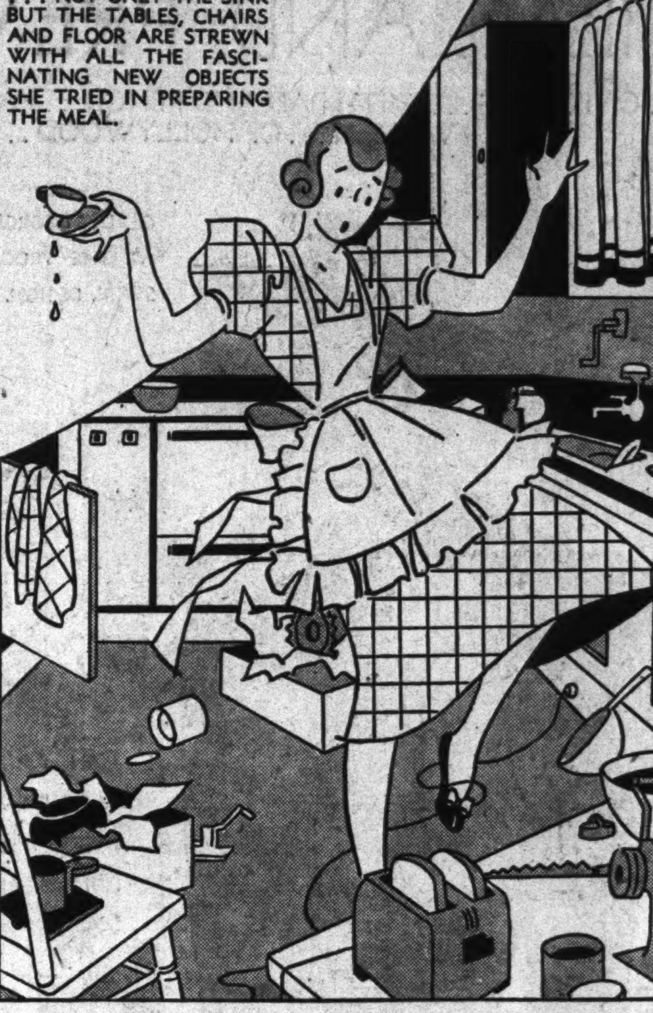
FOR the grapefruit alone she has four different tools, and while one of them might do the work of the two, she's trying them all out while learning her first lesson in kitchen mechanics. A corer, a scoop and a citrus knife are waiting their chance to prove that a grapefruit isn't baffling if you handle it right. Since this is a festive occasion, she uses the decorator, too, to supply a partified look to the top of the fruit.

It is 8:30 when she starts the main course of the meal—measuring out the coffee with the special coffee spoon, connecting up the mixer to beat the eggs, finding the skillet that's recommended for omelets, the grill that was made for sausages, and accumulating more tools as she works. The cream has been forgotten, so she opens canned milk and the new can-opener gets into service. In spite of her painstaking care, the omelet looks sad so she discards it in favor of eggs poached in those cute square poachers.

At 10 o'clock they are ready to eat—but Janie is forced to serve the breakfast on a card table in the living room, because not only the sink but the tables, chairs and floor are strewn with all of the fascinating new objects she tried in preparing the meal.



. . . NOT ONLY THE SINK BUT THE TABLES, CHAIRS AND FLOOR ARE STREWN WITH ALL THE FASCINATING NEW OBJECTS SHE TRIED IN PREPARING THE MEAL.

Breakfast completed, Janie is back in the kitchen to clean up the debris before starting on a "company dinner." Among other things, she's having green beans and there are more gadgets for handling beans than any other vegetable—slicers, cutters, peelers and twirlers getting her confused and turning the vegetables into hash before they are in their transparent bag steaming in the pot.

The steak must be whirled and trounced about with a jagged rolling pin, potatoes must be waffled with a special waffling knife. Cabbage and lettuce are chopped to a finish with a two-blade slicer, while there's another gadget to slice the eggs and beets. Fresh pineapple demands an eye snipper; apples are cored with a coring machine. Cornbread appears in the shape of an ear of corn, while a cookie may look like the man in the moon or a ballet girl—there are so many cutters from which to choose.

The bride can't begin to try all of her mechanical equipment in a day or a week, but once she has experimented with all of her specialized tools and learned their right uses and names, she, too, deserves to enter the ranks of the full-fledged kitchen mechanics.

A SUBURB OF NEW YORK?

lunch time, the Victor Hugo at dinner of the Clover Club after 2 in the morning might be a precise transcript of those in the hands of Gene, Mac Kriendler and Carino at the Colony, "21" and Morocco, respectively.

Everything is very grande lux and grand manner in the Manhattan tradition, only more so, with overtones of simply preposterous fraudulence. Nothing this side of a French farce can compare with the spurious chichi indulged by the less informed and more recently accustomed Hollywood celebrities and the local populace accepts as authentic tender a counterfeit of civilized life that is at once hysterical, juvenile and, in its way, fetching. There is nothing the management of a resort won't do for a name, no matter how dubious its implications or tarnished with obsolence, but good breeding and conservative manners of any sort simply rate no dice.

Last week a group of eminently polite and engaging citizens were lunching at an enviable table at the Vendome when a stale star of the divorce courts arrived and indicated that this particular table, with its commanding view of the envious peasants outside, was their imperial preference. Without the slightest hesitation the management informed its guests that the table had been assigned to them through error, was in fact reserved for royalty, and would they accept another situation, conveniently located in the kitchen gangway and just abaft the boys' room?

The polite young folk, infinitely embarrassed to be dispossessed with such shocking insolence and patent subservience to dubious prestige, acquiesced as gracefully as possible, except for one pert young member of the group, who remarked quite audibly that she supposed age must come before beauty and evoked an appreciative titter from the adjacent tables.

Hollywood has created its own curious scale of values, and its flunkies, like the populace, are impressed by celebrities in precisely reverse ratio to their authenticity. The more the termites have been at a notable's person and prestige, the greater the hoopla which attends his every florid fraudulence. Mike Romanoff has recently taken the town by storm.

ONE OF THE MOST hilarious commentaries on Hollywood sensibilities is the institution of double wine cards at the Vendome. All the usual champagnes, bordeaux, cognacs and such, and a very nice cellar they are, too, are chronicled in an enormous card, which is brought to patrons requesting its aid in making a selection. But if you are looking for a hock, a Mosella or a Steinwien, you simply won't find it.

When you call for a captain, he will bring you a special, modestly printed card with a couple of dozen numbers on it. None of them are later than 1929, and a footnote explains that "during the present regime" in Germany the Vendome is buying no more German wines, and that the present stock in its cellars, when exhausted, will not be renewed. It is, however, possible to get all the Rhine you want at the Vendome, and in 1931 and 1932 bottlings, too, and a cooler with a couple of bottles of Schloss Johannisberger or Bernkastel on a luncheon table is the last word in local chic.

THE TOWN'S principal gaming parlors are conveniently located in Sunset, within easy dice throw of the Trocadero, and are nightly jammed to the guards with dinner-jacketed chivalry being flooded with strong waters and amiably coerced into bankruptcy by expert croupiers behind elaborate machines of chance.

The premises are beautiful and elaborate and restricted, through the agency of persuasive guards and doormen, to the most select and solvent of clienteles. There is a handsome foyer, with a floor of black and white crystal square, illuminated from beneath; the dance floor and restaurant, dominated by a costly band, and a bar of frontier proportions, with stools so low that the bar surface is just on the level with the chins of drinkers, a device which enables many to continue to frequent its premises long after all ability has passed to raise a glass with the human hand.

The place is only vaguely illegal and is so well mannered and circumspect in its conduct, as well as possessing the entirely legitimate attractions of dancing and dining, that it is part of the regular and ordered progress through the Hollywood night.

Bridge Players And Some of Their Failings

Expert Lists Several of the Most Common Breaches in Etiquette.

LONG winter evenings mean bridge—and plenty of it — for lovers of America's favorite sitdown recreation.

Many a newcomer in a locality has established himself socially by learning to play a good game of bridge. However, equally as many a newcomer has been barred from his neighbor's bridge table because although he knows better than to trump his partner's ace, he doesn't doesn't know better than to call his bluff publicly.

One of the best-informed authorities in matters of bridge etiquette is Mrs. Ely Culbertson, who with her husband, forms the famous bridge team. When Mrs. Culbertson was asked what breaches of bridge etiquette she thought were the most common she cited these six:

Showing dissatisfaction, either by grimace or word, when your partner leads the wrong card or makes the wrong bid. Such an act is not only rude to your partner—it is unfair to your opponents, since your partner will know better than to repeat the "mistake" he has made.

Picking up your cards before the deal is completed. (That's unfair to the dealer, who is entitled to have as much time to examine his hand as anybody else has.)

Leaving the table, when you're dummy, to stand behind your partner and see how he plays the hand. The dummy should sit quietly in his seat until the hand is played out—unless he or she leaves the table for a good reason.

Holding up the game by talking about the last hand—or anything else, for that matter.

Complaining about bad luck or gloating about good luck, good play or your opponents' bad play.

Intentionally violating rules—or hesitating to pay the proper penalty when you have violated the rules unintentionally.

Other bridge players queried on the subject of bad bridge manners added the following "annoyances" to the list: Failure to arrive promptly at a bridge party. (Although an emergency fourth may be provided by the hostess the game never really gets under way until all those who are to play have arrived.)

The habit of throwing cards down—without playing out the hand—and saying, triumphantly, "The rest are all mine!"

Taking one's partner out of a bid—merely for the glory of playing the hand.

Snapping down cards—or waving a single card in mid-air in anticipation of the next play.

Calling All Dogs

By ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

THE usual idea of a watchdog is a beast which will tear to pieces any intruder, friendly or otherwise, who sets foot on his master's premises. As well define a skilled boxer as a man who swaggers down the street, slugging everyone in sight!

The ideal watchdog is one which protects his owner's home during such hours as it needs protecting, chiefly by sounding the alarm if a doubtful stranger tries to get in and (only secondarily and as a last resort) attacking such stranger.

The dog which flies murderously at every visitor, by broad daylight, is not the true watchdog. Either he has a mistaken idea of his duties or else he is showing off. The canine show-off is far more common than you may realize.

By patience and by common sense, you can train the average housedog to guard your home in the right way and at the right time, and not to become a neighborhod pest and menace.

On the other hand, think twice before you punish him severely for barking or snarling at an innocent noonday visitor. Otherwise, he may remember your stern lesson, and he may remain silent and submissive when a burglar crawls in through the window at midnight.

—o-o—

FOR CENTURIES the question has been asked, over and over again: "Why does a dog wag his tail?" Seldom has it been answered twice in the same way. Tail-wagging is not merely a form of friendliness. I have seen packs of hounds wagging their tails ecstatically in the ruthless pursuit of foxes which they yearned to kill.

I have seen pit-bull terriers wag their tails with much vehemence during the death-struggle with an enemy dog. Here is my own theory—which may be as worthless as most other guesses that have been made:

I think any keen emotion of hope or of pleasure exerts an involuntary action on the muscles which govern the motions of a dog's tail, causing it to swing to and fro. Such emotions, originally, as the zest of battle or of the chase or of wooing a mate, quite as strongly as those which now make him wag his tail when he greets his master or when he is praised or petted.

The dog is not the only tail-wagger. Wolves have been seen to do the same thing, in stress of eagerness. And I recall at least one tame fox whose furry brush used to wave in gay expectancy when I offered tidbits to him.

Features of General Interest

A Good Close-Up

By Damon Runyon

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.

A LADY of the cinema, to wit, Miss Dietrich, visited a Broadway night club this week, and on departing at 4 a. m., was well nigh mobbed by 2000 of the proletariat waiting in the street.

Let us hasten to report that there was no malice in the mobbing. It was not an uprising of the patrons of the cinema. On the contrary, many of the folks were probably ardent admirers of the lady's well known histrionic talent as presented on the screen in various colossals, and but wished to get a first-hand peek at her.

The others were merely obeying that primal urge of the average inmate of the big city which we hold is largely responsible for the constant spread of general information in New York. It is the urge to kibitz, or rubberneck, and as a resident of New York we feel no little civic pride in the fact that it can turn out 2000 kibitzers at 4 a. m.

This urge is often criticised by visitors to New York as idle, and vulgar curiosity. They do not understand that it is prompted by a thirst for knowledge. When the visitor sees a large crowd watching men dig a hole, he seldom realizes that the New Yorker wishes to inform himself as to the exact method of digging a hole. The visitor is apt to go away thinking they are watching the digging because they have nothing else to do, and thus the rumor gets abroad that we have a great many unemployed in this town.

We hold that the crowd that waited to see Miss Dietrich is a trubute to the big town's alertness. Where else in this country could you find 2000 persons awake at 4 o'clock in the morning?

And yet jealous civic rivals are likely to claim that this amazing showing is not only a slight reflection upon our sense of privacy, and restraint, but was due mainly to the fact that the kibitzers had no place to sleep.

● THEY WOULD IMPLY, we presume, that the great city of New York, one of the richest in all this world, permits some of its citizens to walk the streets all night, bedless. If you are a New Yorker, you know this cannot be true. You know that we have any number of fine hotels in this town. Our rivals are always twisting our credits into knocks.

The insatiable thirst for knowledge of the New Yorker is entirely misunderstood, and generally misconstrued by the visitor. A group of urchins with their little faces pressed against the warm window pane of a rotisserie, watching the rows of roasting fowl turning on the spits, might appear a picture of hunger to a visitor, but the New Yorker knows that the children are merely studying the cooking of chicken.

The sidewalks outside a theater on a big opening night in New York are usually jammed with men and women, some of them not too well dressed, watching the furred and diamonded ladies, and high-hatted gents unloading from their limousines and strangers sometimes get the impression that the sidewalk crowd is drawn there by idle curiosity.

—o-o—

● NOT BY ANY manner of means. The sidewalk spectators are simply studying the weird problem of why they are so threadbare, while so many persons with such peculiar faces are richly clad. Of course, they do not include in their contemplation the dramatic critics. The sidewalk spectators can always spot the dramatic critics. The dramatic critics are the ones who do not wear ermine overcoats.

We do not say this study solves the problem mentioned but their observations of the first-night throngs undoubtedly expands the knowledge of the sidewalk spectators on various other points. They can go home and instruct their children in how a lady wears her orchids. Which may be very useful instruction in case the children ever get hold of any orchids.

WHEN A CELEBRITY, like Miss Dietrich, comes to our town, our people like to get a good close-up. They do not want to miss a single detail, and in Miss Dietrich's case, we are sure we do not blame them. Miss Dietrich is said to be very soothing to the gaze, and besides, she might be wearing a knee-length gown.

There is nothing rude, or vulgar, about the curiosity of the New Yorker. We especially resent the suggestion of jealous rivals that the real reason our people like to get close to a human object of their curiosity is to get a few fingers in a convenient pocket. This, we insist, is libel.

The New Yorker has a warm, healthy interest in all that is going on around him—a dog fight, a traffic copper bowling out a motorist, a lady chasing a gentleman [illegible] street, a necktie display in a [illegible] window, a physical culture [illegible] exhibiting his muscles, a [illegible] machine, a couple of pick[illegible]cing on the sidewalk.

It [illegible] repeat, merely a normal, happy urge to acquire information, and it is not a meddling curiosity.

MADGE EVANS is bemoaning the cold weather for she is all set for sunny days by the sea, with one of the season's smartest beach coats. Fashioned from heavy red linen, the coat is printed with the names of popular resorts such as Cannes, Riviera, Palm Springs, Palm Beach, and the names are divided by summer scenes silhouetted in white. Madge showed me a large white hat of pique which she will wear with the coat.

FOR INFORMAL summer affairs Della Lind, Metro's new Viennese singing star, has selected a clever model of rust-colored seersucker printed with very modernistic Marys, accompanied by equally modernistic little lambs in snowy white. With this ensemble the blonde actress wears a large picture hat of natural straw, trimmed with rust grosgrain ribbon. The frock, with its tight waist and full skirt, is belted with a pig skin belt. Pig skin bag and other accessories complete the clever ensemble.

A CHAPEAU of Milan straw, that looks for all the world like a man's derby, was recently added to the wardrobe of Cecilia Parker. I MUST tell you about the unusual drawing room, in every sense of the word, I saw in the house of Ann Dvorak, who has made an actual indoor garden of the room. Several sections of earth have been built directly into the floor and sides. In these spots, flowers grow and bloom all the year round, different varieties being chosen by the actress to coincide with each season. To counteract the dampness induced by the presence of mother earth, Miss Dvorak has two fireplaces in the room.

ANN SOTHERN is upholding her position as the "most borrowed" leading lady of Hollywood so far this year. Miss Sothern, who was borrowed by Paramount from Columbia, then signed under long term contract at RKO in a flurry of exchanges, has so far appeared at two studios other than her own during 1937.

I SAW Olivia de Havilland at one of the professional football games all done up in antelope and one of the most enthusiastic rooters in the place. Personally we were rooting for Olivia, not only because she hasn't developed a single complex since her zoom to stardom, but also because her ensemble was so grand. With an olive green antelope skirt, flared just a mite, she wore a lemon yellow jacket buttoned up like a school boy's best. It was belted with two narrow straps of self-material which closed with tiny gold buckles in front. Her tri-cornored scarf was made of the green with discs of the yellow antelope appliqued on and her hat was overseas style in green.

Many Film Players Have Tried It With Little Success.

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.

CONSTANCE BENNETT, newly signed by Hal Roach, was talking not long ago about forming her own company. . . . Maybe she still will, but the comedy plant has options for future films after the late Thorne Smith's "Topper." . . . A star's own company is risky business, as Charles Ray, Clara Kimball Young, Gloria Swanson and others—who tried it—can testify.

Gloria is coming back, signed by Metro for a role they say is tailored to her measure. . . . Incidentally, there's a heavy out here named Jack Adair who used to work with Gloria in the Essanay days. . . . Says he was engaged to her once, and was the one who introduced her to Wallace Beery, whom she married. . . . Gloria was 17 then, in the old Sennett regime, and Wally was a Sennetter, too. . . . This is movies: Gloria was on the heights when Wally was skidding, and Wally made his comeback while Gloria slipped.

Speaking of Wally, he is on loan from Metro to 20th Century, and he had his set closed to visitors. . . . until he missed the sound of pencils scratching on note paper, and went "up front" to explain that he didn't mean the press . . . only sightseeing visitors.

BOUQUET DEPARTMENT: There isn't a brighter or more genuine face in Hollywood than little Deanna Durbin's. . . . The new stream-lined Bette Davis is an optical pleasure. . . . Hear that Ida, Kay Francis' ex-maid, is plotting stardom for Doris Nolan, her new mistress. . . . And is confident Doris, when she gets there, will stay as sweet as she is.

Scott Kolk's farm at Houghton, Me., has a railroad station but no town to go with it. . . . Neighboring South Portland has a town but no railroad station. . . . And the word is that Kolk, who acquired the station with the farm, may be approached as a public-spirited citizen, and so on. . . .

MY NIGHT — or yours if you come and get it: Bib and tucker, both shining, are donned and we sally forth through a skiddy drizzle to Victor Hugo's to dine and dance. Well, dine anyway, and maybe a dance or two. . . . Estelle and Leroy, dance team, are opening there. They're to be in "Vogues of 1938"—a title which shows how far-sighted some producers are.

The dining-room is green and gold and ferny, the music sweet and the lights soft. . . . Let's look around. . . . Can this be Hollywood: These diners all look so substantial, so uncinematic, un-everything Hollywood has a name for. . . . But look, there are some celebrities after all.

That's Karen Morley and Charles Vidor dancing . . . and Gene and Kathleen Lockhart. . . . And here comes Glenda Farrell. . . . No, I don't know the man. . . . I'll find out later. . . . But I can't, because they're soon gone, and besides the Hollywood atmosphere has come, in the person of Adolphe Menjou. . . . Adolphe is swathed in overcoat and scarf, but he's thrown these off now.

Burton Holmes' Series

Burton Holmes' new series of five travel talks will open a week from tomorrow night, Feb. 22, at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House and will continue on consecutive Monday evenings. The opening subject is, "A New Motor Tour in England, Wales and Scotland."

On March 1, Holmes will speak on "The Glories of Spain," the old country contrasted with pictures of devastation today; on March 8, "Beautiful Switzerland"; March 15, "All Over France", and March 22, "The Joys of Japan." All lectures are illustrated with color slides and motion pictures.

Oriental Song Concert

Brachah Zfirah, interpreter of music of the Near East, will appear in a recital accompanied by her husband, Nachum Nardi, at the Municipal Auditorium at 8 o'clock next Sunday night. Miss Zfirah's performance of Arabian, Hebraic, Persian and medieval Spanish songs is recognized as authentic. The concert is sponsored by the Jewish National Workers' Alliance.

Neveu Arrives in U. S.

Ginette Neveu, young French violinist, who will make her St. Louis debut in a Civic Music League concert on Tuesday, March 9, has arrived in the United States and has received her official presentation to the country by Ambassador and Mme. Laboulaye at the French Embassy in Washington. At her first American concert, in Pittsburgh, she received recognition as an artist of first rank.

CORRECT POSTURE

By Gladys Glad

BACK in the Civil War days of Scarlett O'Hara, the glamorous heroine of that best seller, "Gone With the Wind," women wore their long tresses demurely smoothed back into a heavy chignon at the nape of the neck. I've read that the average chignon, in those days, was so heavy that it forced the wearer's head back with its weight. And as a consequence, the women of that era gained a reputation for possessing proud and regal posture.

Women today, of course, don't depend upon the weight of a chignon to preserve good posture. They give it their special attention, because they realize how much it influences figure beauty. It's no longer any news that when a girl adopts a slouching posture, her shoulders droop forward, her stomach protrudes and her back curves inward in swayback fashion. As a result, her figure takes on a dumpy, thick-waisted appearance that is anything but attractive.

YOU KNOW as well as I do that protruding tummies, bulging nether extremities and sagging shoulders tend to make a woman look tired, old and dowdy. And no woman can afford to permit herself to acquire these figure defects, if she wishes to conform to the 1937 standards of figure loveliness.

In attempting to hold themselves properly, women often defeat their own efforts. They force their shoulders back and hold themselves stiffly—sort of a robot effect, as though they were made of metal instead of flesh, bone and muscle.

To maintain correct posture is just a matter of holding certain muscles of the body properly. There should be no unnatural stiffness or strain. It is a high lift of the chest that is of prime importance in the cultivation of good posture, for if the chest and head are held high, the back and shoulders will naturally fall into the proper positions.

The abdomen, too, should be h in, for the surest way to cultiva a protruding stomach is to perm the abdominal muscles to grow laxed. Keep those muscles t those abdominal organs up a back where they belong. Kee that head and chest of your raised.

In addition to giving thought t her general carriage, there are a number of exercises that a woman may practice to improve her po ture.

Standing with the feet slightly apart, toes pointing straight ahea bend your body forward from t waist, all your muscles relaxed. Then slowly straighten up, pulling in the abdominal muscles and flat tening the lower curves of you back by pulling down the rea muscles. When fully erect, retain this proper posture, clasp hands overhead and stretch upward until the body is on tiptoe. Relax and repeat.

Assume proper posture, head up, chest up, abdomen in. Place a book on your head, and a pack of cards on the book. Walk about with them both balanced in this manner. If the cards go tumbling to the floor, pick them up with a grin, because this little extra exercise will help keep the waistline trim. The need for preserving perfect balance will make your body naturally assume proper posture.

Stand erect, feet slightly apart and with knees slightly bent, lower the sitting muscles as if yo are about to sit down. Then mo the hip muscles forward and up ward in a straight position. Next, push the hips back and down, thus completing a circle of the pelvic girdle forward, upward, back and down.

Mix a solution of salt and vinegar and rub vigorously to china or crockery that has been discolored from food or looks dingy from lack of use.

Movies Mark Up Time In Case of Masterpiece

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 13.

IF "The Good Earth" is not the boxoffice hit M-G-M expects it to be, it will not be for lack of an extensive advertising and publicity campaign. Practically everything except Louis B. Mayer's Trocadero dancing shoes have been thrown into the ballyhoo of this film and among the things which are leaking out from Metro's press agent department are statements that it took four years to make "The Good Earth" at a cost of $2,000,000. As a matter of fact, when all the advertising is figured in, the total expense will likely reach that tidy sum but as to four years having been consumed in the making, well, that's a fairly long time. It is quite probable that the late Irving Thalberg began to consider making the picture four or more years ago and a camera crew was sent to China in 1934 to collect local color shots and pick up plenty of Chinese atmosphere, farming tools and native furniture. A good deal of rain fell, even in sunny California, between then and the real start of the film.

Some time during the past year actual shooting of the picture began out in the San Fernando Valley. Maybe six months was spent in taking the pictures.

Why does any picture take so long to film? That's a question which the cost experts, sent to Hollywood by various Eastern bankers from time to time, have gone into pretty thoroughly—and never been able to answer. Suppose we take a look in on one of the major studios, Paramount, say, and see just how time is really consumed.

Seven pictures were "in work" on as many stages the other day when we made the rounds and checked up on things. During the eight-hour day the cameras turned for an average of only 26 1-2 minutes. "Souls at Sea," which, when completed, will probably run about 90 minutes, only got in 4 1-2 minutes of photographing. Bing Crosby's "Waikiki Wedding" made some sort of a record by keeping the picture-takers busy for a bit over half an hour. When the "rushes" of the pictures were looked at that evening it is quite likely that the directors decided that a good part of the day's work would have to be retaken. With things moving at that pace you can see why six months can be easily used in making a screen epic.

What goes on the rest of the eight-hour day? A lot of things. Actors and extras are rehearsed and re-rehearsed with the camera lens closed. Lights, weighing about a ton apiece, are shifted all over the place until the boss camera man—he never "turns a crank" himself—thinks they are in a position to do the most good. Directors and "dialogue directors"—experts who used to be called gag men—consult on what seem to be needed changes in the original author's wordage, but do not consult the author. Even if they wanted to, which they never do, he wouldn't be available, either being out playing golf or having gone back to New York. These little matters take hours but, being finally settled, the camera makes a shot and then remakes the same thing anywhere from five to 50 times until the director is satisfied.

"Souls at Sea," the 4½ minute-a-day baby, is an important picture on the Paramount schedule. It is Gary Cooper's last drama for Paramount for one thing and we watched them shooting or, rather, getting ready to shoot, with considerable interest. Idwal Jones was on the set with us and we fell to talking about some of the steamships in other pictures. Mr. Jones, a publicity man who can, at times, be believed, is convinced that the steamship lines get all their luxury ideas from the films. The real ocean greyhounds, he says, look more and more like floating Hollywoods, with their moonlight scenes, Lubitsch staircases, butlers and passengers.

Henry Hathaway, the director, really shows up the genuine old time article in "Souls at Sea." Most of the action takes place aboard a ship plying from Liverpool to Philadelphia in the year 1842. It never reaches that latter port though. Burns and sinks in midocean, a very realistic ocean even though it is man-made on an indoor stage.

The "William Brown," which is the name of the boat, actually did exist and though the original was only an immigrant ship, of the ordinary run of of its kind as Mr. Hathaway has re-created it it offers quite some considerable swank. The steerage quarters, down among the anchor chains are not so hot but the place set aside for the cabin folks is different. An entire passenger salon, 30 feet long was built. There are cozy nooks, spindle trimmings, red plush chairs, mirrors, carpets, hanging lamps, potted palms. Such rococo elegance was matched in St. Louis at that period only by the plushier rooms, for the elite, in the old Planters' House and the first Southern Hotel.

The upper class trade on the wave, even in '42, found much solace in alcoholic fluids. That much you can guess from the six glass racks, the size of billiard tables, hanging from the ceiling. They are bored full of holes, with a glass in each hole. Special glasses for beer and every sort of wine. Even a few smaller glasses, plainly marked to avoid mistakes, for water.

It is a huge contraption, this 'tween-decks set, mounted on a web of girders, with a hydraulic toggle machine at each corner, so the whole thing will jounce, rock and pitch in the most dismaying and realistic fashion.

Gary Cooper and Frances Dee shun it like the plague every chance they get. So do the stagehands, who wobble groggily down the ladder. Odd to say, there are just three principals who didn't mind the slant at all—Henry Wilcoxon, Harry Carey and Henry Hathaway, the director.

The similarity of names doesn't explain this, of course. It is just a coincidence. But all three are bold and proper fellows, over six feet tall, and all have spent many months at sea, and have eaten their share of mulligan and hardtack.

Let's see. What was it we started out to prove before we got switched to a trip on the good ship "William Brown?" Oh yes, that it takes a long time to make a picture. Well, it does.

Moriz Rosenthal In Symphony Benefit Today

THE St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's annual pension fund concert will take place at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House at 3 o'clock this afternoon, with Moriz Rosenthal, pianist, as the featured artist. The program will be the Symphony's last in the concert hall until Feb. 26, since it leaves tomorrow on its second tour of the season.

Rosenthal will play two works with the orchestra, Chopin's Concerto No. 1 in E Minor, and Liszt's Hungarian Fantasy, and then will conclude the program with a group of solo piano works by Chopin and himself. Conductor Vladimir Golschmann will offer as orchestral features the Overture to Beethoven's "Egmont," and Liszt's Symphonic Poem No. 3, "Les Preludes."

The Chopin concerto is being played at a local concert for the first time in nine years. The work received its first performance anywhere at the Warsaw Theater, with the composer as soloist, on Oct. 11, 1830, under conditions similar to those in which it is being performed today, at a benefit concert.

Rosenthal has toured the United States nine times in his 65-year career, the last time in 1929. The 74-year-old pianist was a favorite pupil of Franz Liszt. Rosenthal made his first appearance in America in 1889 and was acclaimed one of the greatest technicians of all time.

Net receipts from the concert will be used for the aid and relief of retired members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. The program in detail:

Overture to "Egmont" — — —Beethoven
Concerto No. 1 in E Minor for piano and orchestra, Opus 11 — — —Chopin

MADELEINE CARROLL, THE "RICHEST GIRL IN AMERICA," FROM "ON THE AVENUE," AT THE FOX.

Laughter and Music Get Together 'On the Avenue'

By Colvin McPherson

MANY screen musicals don't click and at best merely get rid of so much of lagging eternity, but this one does snap right into place and stay there. Presenting, therefore, Darryl F. Zanuck's, Irving Berlin's, Roy del Ruth's, Dick Powell's, Alice Faye's and the Ritz Brothers' "On the Avenue." Yes, and the Fox Theater's "On the Avenue."

While nothing to get out of a sick bed for, the new musical is at least worth playing hooky to see. A clever, amusing, tuneful sort of thing that stays out of the ruts as long as possible and provides some moments to remember.

A new Broadway revue is opening, one of those caustic, uproariously satirical affairs such as we found in "As Thousands Cheer." A sketch in the show caricatures America's richest girl, played by Madeleine Carroll, her father, George Barbier, and her explorer sweetheart, Alan Mowbray. The sketch itself is a scream. The audience howls. All but Miss Carroll, her father and Mowbray. They simply blow up. Madeleine goes backstage and slaps Dick Powell, who has impersonated her father, but neglects Alice Faye, who played Madeleine. Having been slapped by the lady, Powell falls in love with her. From that time, it's come-to-me, go-from-me and the like.

But the camera men keep sneaking back to the theater to see the rest of the show, and therein is much reward. For Powell, Miss Faye and the Ritz Brothers put on some mighty fine stunts, the Ritz Brothers especially. One of the family does a biting bit of lampooning himself when he breaks into "Figaro! Figaro! Figaro!" to preen himself in the manner of several baritones whose names come immediately to mind and get delicately near to print.

At several places in the proceedings are ensembles rendering Irving Berlin's songs. These blessed events have already been anticipated to a great extent by the radio, but the lilting anthems deserve listing. They are "Slumming on Park Avenue," which has the niftiest lyrics; "This Year's Crop of Kisses," with most adhesive tune and worst lyrics; "I've Got My Love to Keep Me Warm" and "You're Laughing at Me," as good as each other; "He Ain't Got Rhythm" and "The Girl on the Police Gazette," which have to be seen to be appreciated.

Mr. Powell, whose washed-urchin countenance has never seemed particularly romantic, turns out to be a dandy light comedian, and I say good for him. Alice Faye, too, is improving in each picture.

Those who stay through to see this one a second time will have "Criminal Lawyer" and Lee Tracy thrust upon them. Tracy, who is what we call a "mouthpiece" for a gang, discovers that his is a pretty despicable calling and after being sardonic about it, becomes District Attorney and puts the double-cross, as gangsters say, on Mr. Eduardo Ciannelli, gang chief.

Stolen Holiday.

WE are taken back to 1929, at the Ambassador, to see what kind of haircut Kay Francis had then, and what kind of dresses she wore. Kay represents Nicole Picot, French mannikin, who agrees to aid Claude Rains in an evening of social deception in order to start a financial career. He sets her up in a dress shop (sets or sits—Rains says both in the picture) for her part in the plot.

Then we move to 1936. Nicole is a name comparable to any that go on the labels in women's gowns. Rains is a bigger and better swindler, plundering the pawn-shop business in France. The details begin to get familiar. This is that Stavisky case that shook ministries to pieces a few years ago. This is something approaching fact. For Rains' machinations are discovered and even marriage to Kay won't save his reputation. With the police hammering on the door of his villa at Chamonix, he shoots himself. Or appears to shoot himself. There is a sentence of dialogue that raises suspicion. It was at Chamonix, by the way, that M. Stavisky took leave of this existence.

Kay has been getting in some good licks with Ian Hunter, who is British and has a Government job, so she has someone to turn to in her grief and generosity. The house of Nicole Picot, of course, is all knocked to pieces by sticks and stones and rioting populace. A pity, too, since the style shows there were really lovely and the gowns Kay sold to the customers about the best Mr. Orry-Kelly of Hollywood, Cal., ever designed.

Aside from the fact that Miss Francis' Nicole is far too trusting to have good sense, and has her lines too well memorized to be herself in dramatic scenes, "Stolen Holiday" is an interesting item in the week's cinema. Scenic backgrounds, of France and Switzerland, are a screen vacation. The Ambassador stage show goes in heavily for styles for the week, too, with routine stage acts to vary the program.

Black Legion.

BEGINNING with eerie music and ending with a sermon on every citizen's right to safety from mob violence, "Black Legion," at the Missouri, also attempts to retell a story that took a lot of type space in its day. In the straining to follow fact, I think, the film loses its dramatic possibilities and is robbed of its maximum effectiveness. Its characters degenerate, its ending is not a happy one, either for principals or picture-going public.

The picture does have power and does strike close home in certain situations. Humphrey Bogart is offered as a family man working in a machine shop. He misses an advancement, sours on the world and joins the Black Legion. The Legion helps him to drive a "foreigner" out of the job he wants, Bogart gets it and becomes each day more brutal and intolerant. More serious crimes follow until Bogart kills Dick Foran and the activities of the Legion are revealed to police.

Such a theme is splendid for Hollywood to take up, and if propaganda from the screen is effective at all, should help to scotch similar movements. But as a dramatic work, "Black Legion" hardly can be thought of along with "Fury" and "You Only Live Once." The audience does not suffer with the misused victims, but thinks the members of the Legion are a pretty bad lot, occurring rarely and not to be taken more seriously than ordinary movie villains.

With very little remodeling, the favorite old comedy, "Ladies of the Jury," becomes the hand-me-down "We're On the Jury" at the Missouri this week. Helen Broderick and Victor Moore have the time of their lives with the plot, and the whole courtroom, in which a murder trial is taking place, becomes a shambles of merriment.

Under Cover of Night.

MULTIPLE murders are always a little amazing, to anybody who stops to think. Where did you ever hear of a respectable citizen of today disposing of three or four lives between dinner time tonight and breakfast tomorrow morning? It happens in "Under Cover of Night," at Loew's, and the murder's tracks are as plain as those in the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese Theater in Hollywood.

Since there's no harm in telling, it is Henry Daniell (the Baron in "Camille") who carries out the whole fiendish business. He's a jump ahead of Edmund Lowe and Nat Pendleton and leads us to believe he may add pretty Florence Rice to his list of victims before help arrives. Daniell's reasons are those of Macbeth, with whom he, as a college professor, may have been acquainted.

Loew's two short subjects are of more import than its second feature. The cartoon, "Donald and Pluto," is excellent slapstick, with Pluto swallowing a magnet and tin-canning himself. The Pete Smith specialty, "Wanted—A Master," about a dog, is the work of two amateurs and was bought from them by the studio. Street scenes in it are those of downtown Los Angeles. Loew's second feature is "Mama Steps Out," a Guy Kibbee and Alice Brady monotone.

Bulldog Drummond Escapes.

THE newest entertainment device the St. Louis Theater has hit upon is a matinee feature, shown only to daytime customers and not at all on Sunday. In this case, it is "Bulldog Drummond Escapes," featuring Ray Milland and Heather Angel. With fogs, roaring auto and airplane, disappearing bodies and mad scrambles in houses at night, the film is in good Bulldog Drummond style. The St. Louis' second-run feature, "Three Smart Girls," is shown day and night, and the stage show, too, is for everybody. This week's line-up in the flesh is tiptop. Freddie Craig does some baffling stunts with a piece of chalk and some blackboards, Beatrice Howell impersonates Katharine Hepburn, Sylvia Sidney, Luise Rainer and Barbara Stanwyck in excellent style, and the Six Lucky Boys have a session of acrobatics and tomfoolery welded neatly together.

Maxwell Anderson Comes Through With Three Hits

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, who was once a newspaperman himself, almost has become an entire Broadway theatrical season with the presentation of his third play, "The Masque of Kings." Before this one, and an exciting play it is, Anderson wrote the present profitably selling shows, "High Tor" and "The Wingless Victory."

But, the best is, and all the critics attest to this, is "The Masque of Kings." In this romantic, dramatic episode he pictures the love of Prince Rudolph of Austria for Mary Vetsera in 1889. He pictures well the mind and motives of Rudolph, a harsh but understanding Prince of democratic motives, but a Prince still influenced and ruled by the imperial cruelty of Franz Joseph's court.

The Prince is in love, terribly in love, and even above that ardor he holds most dear the chance he has to weld an empire over which he can rule with a semblance of sanity. Sincere as he is, there happens one disillusionment after another and the climax of all of these is when he discovers that the Baroness Mary Vetsera is a spy and a tool in control of the court. She protests that she is guilty as a tool of espionage, but, too, she protests that she has discovered since that she loves him and that she will have no more to do with such espionage maneuvers.

Idealistic as he is, even among such intrigue, the Prince cannot wholly believe her innocence of deliberate wrong-doing and, frustrated by this disbelief, she commits suicide. Too late realizing her innocence, he follows her path of doom.

It is a tragic drama of royalty, and tragic it is even when compared to these days of tragedy in royal circles. Anderson has written a thrilling, poetic play of a dynamic monarch and the only faltering aspect is that royalty is portrayed with such weakness and, too, the cast is faltering.

Pauline Frederick, once a queen of the silent cinema and in this a regal empress, is excellent. Dudley Digges, as the emperor, is the fine and most capable actor he has been on Broadway for a decade, and there are a pair of scenes where he moves the audience to overwhelming applause.

But, it is in the principal roles that Playwright Anderson has to carry on alone and not depend too much upon his actors. Henry Hull, who has given many fine performances on the stage, was difficult to understand in some of his best scenes on the opening night and Margo, as the Baroness Mary Vetsera, often drifted into a verbal fog not appreciated by the audience.

Otherwise, the players were good and meritorious and deserving of the bouquets of applause they received. Especially so Dudley Digges, who usually has been seen in Irish roles in the past decade in Theater Guild plays. A very fine actor and a very fine director is Digges, and never was he better than in this bit of sketch about royal personages which Maxwell Anderson has written.

More for the American

FOLLOWING Katharine Hepburn's highly successful engagement at the American Theater in the past week, the outlook for stage entertainment in St. Louis during the spring has improved considerably and Manager Paul Beisman, back from booking conferences in New York, reports that the problem now is to work out schedules at the American for all the shows that can be routed there.

The next arrival is "Boy Meets Girl," in a return engagement the week of Feb. 28. Set for March 8 is Tallulah Bankhead in "Reflected Glory" and for April, Walter Hampden in "An Enemy of the People" and the Lunt-Fontanne team in "Idiot's Delight." Dates of the last three engagements are made uncertain, however, by considerations affecting the "Ziegfeld Follies," "On Your Toes," "Leaning on Letty," "Dead End," the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, and two roadshow films, "The Good Earth" and "Lost Horizon."

The "Follies," doing big business in Chicago, is set to head West sometime in spring, in order to reach the Coast before some principals go into films; "On Your Toes," with several weeks of traveling already is looking over Midwest cities, "Leaning on Letty" is as near as Chicago, "Dead End" is now in the East but finding better response, is expected to continue rather than close; the D'Oyly Carte troupe has not counted St. Louis out yet, and "The Good Earth" has begun engagements in several other "key" cities already. "Lost Horizon," Frank Capra's $2,000,000 spectacle, is announced ready for release in March.

Olsen-Johnson At Ambassador Theater Friday

THREE leading stage units have been booked by the Ambassador Theater for appearances in the next five weeks. Starting off with Olsen and Johnson's comedy revue next Friday, the lineup includes Borrah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals and Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians.

The Olsen-Johnson show, "Fun Marches On" has a cast made up of Roy Cummings, star of Shubert shows, Ardis May, California dancer, the Peters Sisters from the radio, Hector and His Pals, Ole Olsen Jr., Ruth Faber, Jack Cavanaugh and the Hollywood Co-eds and "Olechicks," two groups of dancing girls. The Ambassador's film will be "A Woman of Glamour," with Melvyn Douglas and Virginia Bruce.

Minevitch's show is scheduled to follow Olsen and Johnson, on Feb. 26, with the new Grace Moore picture, "When You're in Love," on the screen the same week. Minevitch and his band, seen recently in the film, "One In a Million," will come to St. Louis from New York, where they have had a continuous run since leaving Hollywood.

Waring's Pennsylvanians are set for the second week in March. In the cast are Poley McClintock, drummer with the "Popeye" voice; Rosemary Lane, Priscilla Lane, Johnnie Davis, The "Three Fellas," Gene Conklin, Larry Collins, Charles Newman and others. The band will make a picture soon after the St. Louis engagement.

Transcription radio programs on film, made with the same facilities for "re-takes" as are motion pictures, are being prepared for radio stations' use by Warner Brothers. One of the programs in the works is an hour-long production with Dick Powell as master of ceremonies, several movie actors, an orchestra and singers. To what an extent such film programs can supplant the regular disc transcriptions used so much by stations depends, of course, on the quality of reproduction and the willingness of stations to go to the expense of installing the necessary apparatus. Warner Brothers are reported by Motion Picture Daily to have arranged for auditions with sponsors of some big network programs. Hitherto transcriptions have been barred for broadcasting on the networks.

Ralph Kirberry, the "Dream Singer," will start a new series this week at 11:30 a. m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday on the WEAF net . . .

An attempt to demonstrate the sending of electric power and light by radio to a ship en route from New York to Bermuda is planned for March 1 by John C. Roberts, formerly of Brentwood, Cal. Roberts says he will use a special tube and method of transmission on a channel created by an electric-magnetic beam to be sent out and picked up a special receiver on the ship. Engineers have been invited to witness the test, which will be held at New Castle, Del. The current is transmitted as AC and received as DC, and laboratory tests over a distance of 40 miles have been successful, Roberts declares.

A story in the New York Morning Telegraph says that terms of Toscanini's contract to organize a symphony orchestra and conduct non-commercial concerts on the WEAF and WJZ networks, starting in December, assure him $10,000 a week for as many weeks as he pleases, whether one week or a hundred, and permit him to terminate the contract whenever he pleases, but does not give that privilege to NBC. NBC, the story said, will let Toscanini organize his orchestra and will pay the salaries of the musicians for the concerts and rehearsals. Frank Black will continue to conduct the NBC string symphony orchestra. . . .

Trade Notes

New Grunow Models.

Four new radio sets, just added to the Grunow line, were shown to dealers at a four-day meeting at the Plaza Hotel held the past week by the Brown Supply Co., distributer.

The added models include a five-tube, two-band AC-DC set in a violin-shaped cabinet; a six-tube, two-band table set; a seven-tube console set with broadcast and foreign bands and electric eye tuning, and an 11-tube set, of 540 to 18,000 kilocycle range, in a special cabinet. The cabinets of all these new models are exceptionally attractive.

All the models previously in the Grunow line are retained, including "magic dial" tuning and high fidelity contuber, the 12-tube set with "teledial" tuning and high filedity control, and the 12-tube set with three speakers, teledial tuning and coverage of all stations, including the ultra high frequency stations such as W9XPD, the auxiliary of KSD.

New Philco Auto Sets.

Five new Philco automobile sets are being introduced by the Artiphone Corporation, distributer. All are superheterodynes, with adjustable aerial circuits for performance with any type of antenna, full wave vibrator, automatic volume control and special filter systems to prevent chassis spark or antenna spark interference. They are designed to operate in any car without spark plug resistors.

A universal tenite control fits any 1937 Philco auto set and any car, and may be transferred from one car to another.

Growing popularity of the car-top aerial is reported by the Transitone, Auto Radio Corporation, Philco's auto radio division. An advantage of it is that it is at a maximum distance from the sources of interference such as ignition and tire static.

This type aerial curves the full length of the top, is secured rigidly to the roof by three streamlined insulators, and has water-tight mountings.

St. Louis Boy Scouts will celebrate Scout Sunday today with special services in more than 40 churches, climaxing the week's activities honoring the twenty-seventh year of the Boy Scout movement in America.

Walter W. Head, president of the National Council, will speak to representatives from all troops in the St. Louis area at a special meeting tonight at the Second Presbyterian Church, 4501 Westminster place.

The first Senior Scout citizenship forum will be held this afternoon at the Cabanne Branch Library, 1106 Union boulevard, at which former Gov. Henry Caulfield will speak on the relationship of scout law to citizenship. Bernard Ferguson, barytone, will sing a group of songs, and Robert L. Finch, chairman of the Citizenship Committee of the senior scouting program, will preside.

The forum will meet monthly, and will be for the purpose of acquainting scouts of voting age of civic duties and needs. Men high in public position will speak to the scouts on non-partisan subjects.

Walter A. Stay was elected president of Shawnee Lodge of the Order of the Arrow, scouting honorary society, at a meeting of the society last week. Other officers elected: Vice-presidents, Ferd Gast and Karl Kirberg; secretary, Carl Ehrhardt; treasurer, James Stevenson. Vigil honors, the highest rank in the society, were conferred on Ferd Gast, Karl Kirberg, Henry C. Noe and Max Nusser.

Herman F. Walz, chairman for the last two years of the council's camporee committee, received a special award for five years' service in scouting at a meeting last week of the South District field commissioners.

Field Commissioner Wallace L. Rinehart received a pin for his 20 years of service to his troop, No. 306, last week. Rinehart was a charter member of the troop, for which he was scoutmaster.

Tryouts for Parts in Girl Scout Birthday Pageant.

Tryouts for the 300 parts included in the Girl Scout birthday pageant, to be presented in the Municipal Auditorium April 23, will be held Saturday from 1:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. at the Y. M. H. A., 724 Union boulevard.

The pageant will be the main local celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Girl Scouts. More than 5000 Girl Scouts are expected to participate in the pageant.

The celebration will be under direction of the following: Director, Percy Ramsay; dancing instructor, Mrs. Fred Armstrong; chairman of festival, Mrs. J. W. Woodward Jr. and Mrs. Dudley W. Southward; casting committee, Gertrude Bishop, Mrs. E. Diers, Mrs. R. T. Bertram, Florence Kingsbury and Mrs. Frank Skelly.

The annual report of the Girl Scout registration figures issued last week, showed 6143 persons connected with the Girl Scout movement in the St. Louis area.

The St. Louis headquarters announced the following statistics on membership: 4142 Girl Scouts, 925 Brownies, 451 volunteer Scout and Brownie leaders, and 625 committee members. The local council has 166 troops and 45 packs.

Last year 27 training courses, with an enrollment of 384 members, were given by the local council for women interested in scout leadership.

REPORT ON BARGE SINKING CRITICISED BY CONGRESSMAN

Zimmerman Dissatisfied With War Department Finding, to Seek Further Investigation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.— Congressman Orville Zimmerman of Kennett, Mo., dissatisfied with the War Department report that no Government employe could be held directly responsible for the loss of 30 lives in the sinking of a barge in the Bird's Point-New Madrid floodway, said today he would ask for further investigation.

Zimmerman said the War Department should be able to establish the cause of the accident "more definitely."

The War Department investigating board found that the barge was "not suitable for carrying men in large numbers" and that the speed at which it was being towed was "unwise in view of conditions."

Zimmerman had been advised, he said, that all who were drowned when the barge sank were regarded as Government employes, coming under the compensation laws. Relatives of each Zimmerman said, would receive "up to $3500" from the Federal Government.

The barge, loaded with more than 100 WPA levee workers, sank on the night of Jan. 30 as it was being towed back to New Madrid, Mo., with men who had spent the day sandbagging the setback levee which forms the west side of the floodway.

So far, 26 bodies have been recovered. Dragging operations are being continued in an effort to find the bodies of four who are still missing.

Gift of Late W. W. Durbin, Register of the Treasury.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—A model of the three masted schooner, "Flying Cloud," was added to President Roosevelt's large collection of ship models today.

It was the gift of the late W. W. Durbin of Kenton, O., Register of the Treasury, who died last week.

ROUSED BY POLICE BEFORE HE KNEW BED WAS ON FIRE

Night Watchman Asleep in Oil Station Snoozes on While Blanket Burns.

All was quiet along Greenwood boulevard early yesterday. Three Maplewood policemen drove along in a squad automobile and one spied the red of dancing flames through the door of a gasoline filling station at 3540 Greenwood.

The door was not locked. One seized a burning blanket that lay on the floor near a stove. Another called the fire department.

The third surveyed the scene. Close by the stove and near shelves stacked with cans of oil was a cot covered by a smoldering blanket. Beneath the blanket a youth slept, undisturbed.

After being dumped unceremoniously on the floor as the policeman overturned the cot, the frightened young man identified himself as fire engines, found unnecessary, roared into the driveway. "Frightened but unhurt," as the policemen described him later in their report, he said he was Walter Richardt, 19 years old, 610 Clairevoix avenue, Webster Groves, a tree trimmer.

Asked to explain his presence, he replied: "I work here at night as the watchman."

MOVIE OPERATOR BILL VETOED BY THE MAYOR

Dickmann Condemns Measure as Piecemeal Attack on Public Safety in Theaters.

A bill which would have required motion picture theaters to hire an operator for each projection machine was vetoed yesterday by Mayor Dickmann. He held it was a "piecemeal" attack on the problem of public safety in theaters, and appointed a committee to consider the whole problem and suggest legislation.

The committee, which includes representatives of theater owners, union projection machine operators, and city officials, will meet next Wednesday at City Hall.

Although the bill was advanced as a safety measure, theater owners opposed it on the ground that it was an attempt to enact into law a regulation of the Motion Picture Operators' Union which was already in effect in nearly all theaters in St. Louis.

Several other bills affecting theaters are pending in the Board of Aldermen. One would provide for censorship of films, and another would forbid theaters to sell admission tickets unless seats were available.

The Mayor's committee is expected to consider these and other suggestions and to draft an ordinance for incorporation in a new building code relating to theaters.

Pauline Seipp Is Married to William Goltra

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.

MISS PAULINE SEIPP, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Seipp, 2340 Lincoln Park West, and William Brown Goltra were married late this afternoon at her parents' home by Bishop William Scarlett of Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, a close friend of the bridegroom's family. Mr. Goltra, who has lived in Chicago for the last few years, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Field Goltra, 4487 Lindell boulevard, St. Louis.

The bride wore the elaborate satin and rose point lace wedding gown in which her mother, the former Miss Ella Uihlein, was married to Mr. Seipp. The entire bodice is of rose point, and from a cap of the same lace fell a long tulle veil with a center panel of Brussels lace.

Mrs. John K. Notz, the bride's cousin and her only attendant, was gowned in a long-sleeved, trained frock of gold satin, with which she wore a brown hat and brown slippers and gloves, and carried an armful of talisman roses. E. Field Goltra Jr. was his brother's best man.

The service, at which guests were limited to members of the two families and a few friends, was read in the high-paneled living room of the Seipp apartment before bay windows overlooking Lincoln Park. A screen of greenery, calla lilies and candles partly concealed the glass. On the wedding table in the dining room decorations centered about Japanese trees of white hyacinths.

The bride's mother, in a gown of beige lace, headed the receiving line for the reception which followed. Guests from out-of-town, in addition to the best man, included the bridegroom's parents, his aunt, Mrs. J. Dwight Dana and her son, Robert, from Asheville, N. C., where they are spending the winter; Miss Elizabeth Culver and Miss Francesca Leighton, college classmates of the bride from the east, and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Seipp, her uncle and aunt, from Middleburg, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Goltra will spend their honeymoon in the South and will return to Chicago to reside.

The bride, a member of the Junior League and a debutante of three seasons ago, is a graduate of Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington and of Vassar College. Mr. Goltra is a graduate of Lawrenceville (N. J.) Preparatory School and attended Princeton Preparatory School.

February Brides' Parties Continue

SEVERAL guests will arrive from out-of-town this week for the wedding of Miss Katherine Hillman James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Evans of Montgomery, Ala., all of whom will be guests of the bride's family, and Mrs. James Simpson of Birmingham, Ala., who will visit Mrs. Robert Weatherly.

Numerous pre-wedding parties continued last night with a cocktail party at which Miss Caroline Steffens was hostess, followed by a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Ransome White, Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Calfee and Miss Betty Wyman, in the ballroom of the home of Mrs. White's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Linn Hemingway, 7711 Maryland avenue. Later the guests will go to the near-by home of Mr. and Mrs. White, 121 North Hanley road, Clayton.

Adelaide Melville Wed Yesterday

THE wedding of Miss Adelaide Melville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Melville, and Alfred E. Davis took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Melville home, 7228 Roland drive. Friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Walter Scheer of Louisville, Ky., before the fireplace in the living room, which was banked with woodwardia and white flowers and lighted by tall candelabra.

The bride, wearing a gown of white moss crepe made with a square neck line, long tight-fitting sleeves, and ending in a train, met her father at the foot of the stairs and was escorted by him to the improvised altar. Her long tulle veil was caught at the back of the head by a row of orange blossoms and the modesty veil fell in front to her knees. Her flowers were white lilacs.

Miss Claudia Melville, her sister's maid of honor, was gowned in flowered peach taffeta. The flowers in her bouquet, African daisies, were repeated in a row across the back of her head. The two bridesmaids, Mrs. Arnold Wolfe of Hays, Kan., and Miss Marian Davis, sister of the bridegroom, were in turquoise taffeta and their flowers were African daisies.

Mr. Davis, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis, Clayton and McKnight roads, had his brother, Robert Davis, for best man, and the ushers were Landon C. Lodge, Ellery Johnson, and Joseph Latta.

Mrs. Melville wore blue georgette with a corsage of African daisies. The bridegroom's mother chose a deeper shade of blue lace with a corsage of roses for her gown.

After greeting the bridal party and the parents of the young pair in the hall, the guests were seated at tables in the lower floor rooms for supper. The bridal party was in the dining room at a table decorated with a wedding cake and white flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis left on a month's honeymoon to Mexico. On their return they will be at home in their new house of 7620 Maryland avenue.

Out-of-town guests in addition to those in the wedding party were Mrs. Harold Frazier of Farwell, Tex., and James Woods, president of Stephens College, the bride's alma mater. At Washington University she became a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity. Mr. Davis also attended Washington University.

Special emblems and flowers will adorn tables arranged by various organizations of the Council for their own guests.

Preceding the dinner, to be served at 8 o'clock, guests at the head table will have cocktails with Col. Carl H. Muller, Cavalry, Chief of Staff, 102nd Division, in Parlor A. This group will include guests of honor and commanding officers of the organizations in the council.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.

THE good times the Duke of Windsor and his sister Princess Mary are having in Vienna just now where she is visiting him recall an incident of the Duke's last visit to Washington as Prince of Wales.

The Prince and his entourage waited for their special train in Union Station after he had luncheon with President and Mrs. Coolidge in the White House. He wandered about through the concourse until he came to the candy and magazine stand where his eyes lighted up at the sight of peanuts in little cotton sacks with tags attached so they could be addressed, stamped and sent to friends. The Prince bought a bag for himself and the other bag he addressed to his sister, Princess Mary, in London. To those standing near him he confided the fact that they loved peanuts.

An American woman, Mrs. Frederick Sterling, wife of the United States Minister to Bulgaria and former Minister to the Irish Free State, will play an important part in the French Exposition of Fine Arts opening in Paris in May. Her husband has been appointed the United States Commissioner for the exposition, and Mrs. Sterling will be hostess for Americans who visit it. Mrs. Sterling is a daughter of Mrs. John R. Williams of Washington, and was Miss Dorothy Williams, sister of Mrs. Joseph Leiter. Her marriage to Mr. Sterling and his diplomatic service abroad gave her many years of continental life. When transferred from Dublin to Bulgaria they had a yacht in which they took frequent cruises. It was on one of these trips their only son, Frederick Sterling Jr., died a year ago of typhoid. The Sterlings returned to America and have spent a great deal of time in Washington since.

Art lovers are wondering if the famous Houdon bust of Washington, for generations the possession of the Locker-Lampson family in England, bought a few years ago by an American art dealer for an unknown purchaser, may not be one of the items in the Mellon art collection recently offered as a gift to the United States Government.

At the time of its purchase it was said to have been bought for $250,000.

This Houdon bust was posed for in person by Washington at Mount Vernon and completed there in 12 days in 1785. It was purchased by the American branch of the Locker-Lampson family and later taken to England.

In the annals of White House receptions none is probably more interesting to American women than the one Mrs. Grover Cleveland, now Mrs. Thomas J. Preston of Princeton, held in 1897 to celebrate the founding of the National Congress of Parents and Mothers, now the National Parent-Teacher Association, which will celebrate Founders Day, Feb. 17. The cofounder was Mrs. Theodore Birney, mother of Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. Edward R. Finkensteadt and Baroness von Schoen and grandmother of Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert and Aldace Walker. Her associate in this work was Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst, wife of the then Senator from California, in whose home many of the early meetings were held.

Essentials of Flood Control in The Light of 1937

By Ellwood Douglass.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

As the most disastrous flood of American history flows on past Memphis and below the Missouri boot-heel, it becomes evident that the existing project for flood control on the lower Mississippi is in need of upward revision in two particulars: the "maximum probable flood" for which it was designed, and the human equation for which it must allow.

First a word about current misconceptions. Probably most readers know that Mississippi River flood control has not since 1927 depended on "levees only"; that levees have no measurable effect on the river bottom; that reforestation and erosion control can stand on their own feet, in any plan for land use, but their effect on floods is too indeterminate and too remote for a place in any immediate plan of flood control.

No Power Possibilities.

It is less widely understood that flood control reservoirs offer no possibilities for power; limited possibilities for irrigation and navigation. Power reservoirs must be kept full; flood control reservoirs must be empty in readiness for need. The popular view has been right in that it was the smell of money which has confused this issue; but mistaken in the source of odor. It arose in prospective profits from dam sites sought by power interests on pretense of incidental benefits in flood control. The point is made obvious by recalling that it was most overwhelming in the 13 years while Senator Norris seemed doomed to lose his fight for Government operation of power dams built by the Government. His surprising victory came only four years ago, on May 18, 1933.

Markham Plan.

Flood control reservoirs have a place in the "Markham plan" for the lower Mississippi adopted by Congress last June; and $85,000,000 in reservoirs, authorized in the same session, comprise the step toward Ohio River flood control on which President Roosevelt has called for immediate action.

They may be expected to reduce the unprecedented Ohio River flow which, without any help from the Upper Mississippi, has produced a "super-flood" below Cairo. How much they will reduce it is not apparent. They were described in Congress as "comprehensive." Engineers ascribe to them only "a high degree" of local flood control and "a large measure" on the Ohio proper. In the same report appears a "comprehensive" system for the Ohio and its tributaries costing $517,059,000.

With or without the $85,000,000 reservoirs, the Missouri floodway must still be used. Better arrangements must be made to take care of its human equation in the future, for, while in every other respect the floodway has borne out the advance estimate of the technicans, there it has radically exceeded them.

Present Hardships.

Cairo has been saved, and so has New Madrid, and so have thousands of Missouri acres behind the setback levee. Under water in the floodway are 130,000 acres; in 1927, before it was built, water from the Dorena crevasse covered 200,000 acres in the floodway counties alone—and kept on going inland.

For the periodical use of the floodway, the Government has paid landowners $2,178,000 in advance. But there are present hardships which those millions fail to ease. Most of them were inherent in belated and therefore hurried evacuation. Sleet had crippled telephone service; notices were delayed; and when the water climbed above 58 on the Cairo guage, it became apparent that other than natural forces were preventing a break in the fuse plug across the river.

It is easy enough for swivelchair critics, miles from any flood, to blame desperate men, fighting for their levee with shotgun and sandbag, for losses they might have avoided by bowing to the inevitable. But there is a kinder and wiser view. Let the authorities in charge of flood control, the army engineers, undertake from now on to give adequate and unfailing notice to every human being in the floodway the moment a crevasse becomes certain, or, in most floods, a full week in advance; and let them provide prompt and orderly mobilization of adequate facilities, under unified command, to evacuate every family with all its perishable and portable belongings.

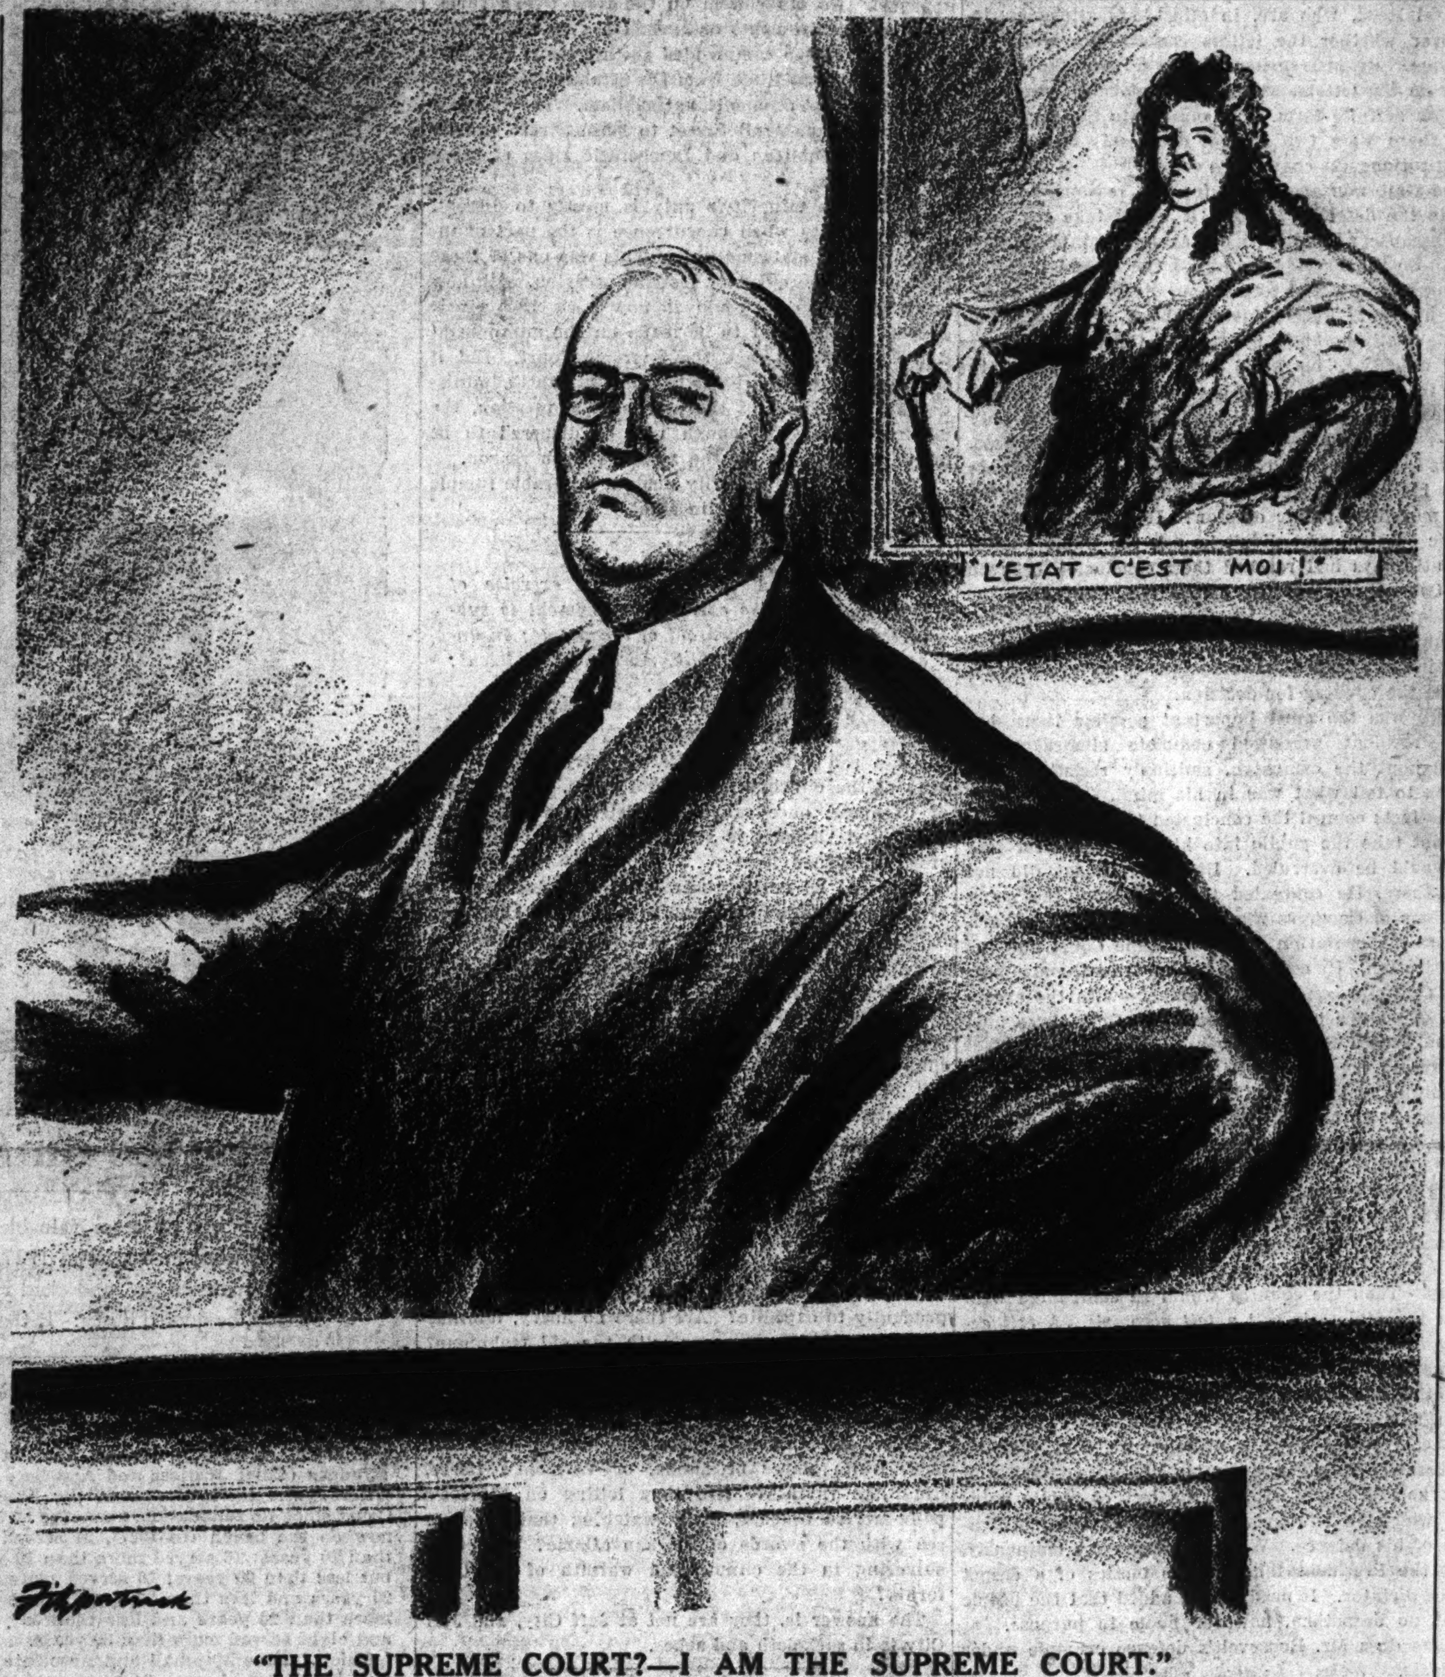
From the First He Insisted the Great Powers He Wanted Were Constitutional

Seemingly He Believed Congress Should Be Authorized to Regulate Relations of Labor and Capital Because of the Country's Need and That the "Commerce Clause" Could Be Stretched by Interpretation to Legalize Such Action.

To Have Bowed to the Court's Contrary View and Sought Amendment of the Constitution Would Have Been to Admit His Philosophy of the Country's Basic Law Had Been Unsound From the Beginning.



"THE SUPREME COURT?—I AM THE SUPREME COURT."

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.

"Our constitution is so simple and practical that it is possible always to meet extraordinary needs by changes in emphasis and arrangement without loss of essential form."

With this confident slogan nailed to the mast as a battle pennant, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, late of the navy, buoyantly set out on uncharted seas to find the port of the more abundant life. Misgivings and doubts of others as to the soundness of his slogan were met with a "damn the torpedoes, go ahead" attitude and more haste at Washington.

A review of the events which have tumbled one upon another since that day in March, 1933, when Mr. Roosevelt in his first inaugural proclaimed his view of the Constitution leads to the conclusion that the most sensational act of his brilliant and spectacular career—his proposal now before the country to reconstitute the Supreme Court—was the inescapable result of his first step; that having committed himself publicly and repeatedly for four years to the proposition that where there was a will in the Federal Government there was a way in the Constitution, in terms that admitted of no later modification, and having turned his disagreement with the Supreme Court into a bitter personal feud against that tribunal, graceful retreat was impossible.

Break With the Court Only Way to Validate New Deal.

In this view, breaking the court was the only way to put his New Deal legislation on the statute books. He had closed the road to amendment of the Constitution.

Washington, of course, is seething with speculation as to the outcome. Political opinion is in general agreement on two points. First, if Congress fails Mr. Roosevelt, his presidential career, equalled in historic interest and importance thus far only by the great triumvirate, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, may end in a debacle unprecedented in the White House. Second, it is believed at this writing that he will not fail; his proposal will become law; he will control the Supreme Court through the rest of his administration, and his substitutes for the New Deal statutes which the present court held unconstitutional will be upheld by the new one, and he will retire from office (unless, unless there should be a third term) triumphant.

However, this expectation is based solely on faith in numbers—the President's overwhelming majorities in Congress which may enable him to rush his scheme through before the opposition can organize the popular revolt of which there already are visible signs throughout the country.

Statements Significant of What Was to Come.

As the stage is being set for congressional consideration of his startling proposal, with promise of a debate of historic proportions and qualities, the skirmishes of the last four years may be reviewed in the light of their new significance, and without going into the merits of the controversy between the President and the court.

In a campaign speech at Baltimore in 1932, Mr. Roosevelt read from his prepared text these words: "After March 4, 1929, the Republican party was in complete control of all branches of the Government—the legislature, with the Senate and Congress and executive department"; then interpolated, "and I may add for full measure, to make it complete, the United States Supreme Court as well."

He spoke of the Constitution in his first inaugural address after having stated his purpose to take aggressive action to overcome the depression. He said:

"Our Constitution is so simple and practical that it is possible always to meet extraordinary needs by changes in emphasis and arrangement without loss of essential form."

Perhaps only he can say whether or not this was intended as notice to the country and the Supreme Court that he expected interpretation of constitutional powers to be adjusted to the prevailing view of emergency needs.

But clearer and more significant expressions of his views were the following statements in the same address:

"It is to be hoped that the normal balance of executive and legislative authority may be wholly adequate to meet the unprecedented task before us. But it may be that an unprecedented demand and need for undelayed action may call for temporary departure from the normal balance of public procedure. I am prepared under my constitutional duty to recommend the measures that a stricken nation in the midst of a stricken world may require. . . .

"But in the event that Congress shall fail to take one of these courses, and in the event that the national emergency is still critical, I shall not evade the clear course of duty that will then confront me. I shall ask Congress for the one remaining instrument to meet the crisis—broad executive power to wage a war against the emergency as great as the power that would be given to me if we were in fact invaded by a foreign foe."

NRA and the New Deal Hastily Shaped Into Law.

The response of Congress to the President's requests for executive power is history. New laws were enacted with amazing rapidity and the occasional lonely protests in the House or Senate that constitutional powers of the Federal Government were being exceeded went unheeded.

Enactment of the National Industrial Recovery Act creating the NRA was hailed by Roosevelt as a high achievement. When he signed it on June 16, 1933, less than four months after taking office, he said:

"History probably will record the National Industrial Recovery Act as the most important and far reaching legislation ever enacted by the American Congress. It represents a supreme effort to stabilize for all time the many factors which make for the prosperity of the nation and the preservation of American standards."

Here was legislation setting-up administrative machinery to regulate virtually all industrial and commercial enterprises in the country for the New Deal purposes of increasing employment, reducing hours of work and increasing wages. It was the heart of the planned economy by which law undertook to assure to workers a larger share of their products and so create a "more abundant" life for the masses.

It was to bring "recovery" by the formula of more wages, to make more "purchasing power," to make more business, to make more employment, and still more wages.

For the farmers the Agricultural Adjustment Act was designed for similar purposes, with a much smaller radius of effect, and later, after the NRA had been invalidated, the Guffey Coal Control Act was enacted as a means of attempting to apply NRA principles to a single industry—soft coal mining.

Supreme Court Knockouts And Roosevelt's Reaction.

Everything went well for the first two years, or until May, 1935 when the Supreme Court held the NRA to be unconstitutional for reasons to be noted later. To a less cocksure mariner this warning might have had the effect of a bell-broy in a fog, but not with Mr. Roosevelt. He addressed the country through a special press conference now famous as the horse and buggy interview, in which he dissented in toto from the court's decision, and figuratively shook his fist at the nine Justices who had in that one ruling virtually pronounced the doom of the New Deal. As the President himself said, NRA was its very heart. Here that vital organ had been cut out.

Although the Court's opinion was unanimous, and two of the "liberal" Justices, so called, Cardozo and Stone, joined in a separate opinion stronger than that of the majority, and despite the fact that the nine Justices showed by citations that they were following a long-standing and often reiterated interpretation of the Constitution, the President refused to be convinced and declared the Court had relegated the country to the "horse and buggy" era.

The Post-Dispatch's report of the press conference included this statement of the President's view of the Constitution:

"Coming to New Deal legislation, the President said that the administration had hoped for an interpretation of the interstate commerce clause (of the Constitution) in the light of new conditions. He said that the thought was that a harmful practice in one section of the country had its effect in another section of the country. He said that was why Congress thought it could depend on an interpretation that would broaden the definition of interstate commerce; that was why there had been included in the NIRA provisions relating to direct and indirect effects on interstate commerce."

The powers which the Federal Government had sought to exercise in the NRA were those which other governments possessed, the President said, and if our Federal Government did not have them it was the only national government in the world without power to legislate on national economic and social problems. He distinctly implied that the Constitution should be interpreted by the Supreme Court to concede these powers to the Federal Government. Otherwise the subjects were left to the 48 States, with resulting confusion.

It was the biggest question before the coun-

Big Business In U. S. Gaining Stronger Hold

Extension of Chain Ownerships Rapidly Increasing Grip on Economic Life—Heavy Concentration in Few Hands.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.

BIG business, through the extension of chain ownership, is rapidly increasing its hold on America's economic life. The process has gone on, in some fields at an accelerated rate, through the depression and four years of the New Deal.

This is shown in a study recently completed by a group of economists who have attempted to determine just how big big business really is. While the conclusions they reach are conservatively expressed, the trend toward greater concentration is plain.

First results of the study are contained in a volume called "Big Business: Its Growth and Its Place," published by the Twentieth Century Fund. Rufus S. Tucker was director of the survey and Alfred L. Bernheim editor of the findings. They announce that other volumes will be published showing in greater detail the extent to which big business dominates American economic life. By the phrase big business, the authors mean that share of the nation's economic activity carried on by giant corporations with resources of more than $50,000,000 and an annual turnover of more than $5,000,000. Banks with many branches, chain grocery concerns, corporations with numerous plants manufacturing a variety of products, all come within this classification.

Banking Concentration.

In the field of finance in particular, the authors show, a comparatively few large corporations have extended their hold over banking and credit in recent years at a startling rate. Between 1925 and 1934, the study shows, the biggest national banks "have gained vastly in relative importance. In number they remained insignificant, but their share of the total assets of all national banks rose from slightly more than one-fourth to not much less than one-half."

Further evidence of increasing concentration, the authors say, is the growing proportion of the total loans and investments of all banks held by the country's 20 largest banks. In 1920 the 20 "giants" held only 13.8 per cent of all loans and investments. By 1931 this had increased to 27.3 per cent.

Regaining Lost Ground.

"Between 1900 and 1920," the authors say, "the largest 20 banks lost some ground relatively. This, of course, was the result of the great increase in the number of small banks during that period. With the reversal of this trend after 1920, the largest banks began to recover their lost ground. They have gradually absorbed a continually greater proportion of the banking business. After 1928 the increase was very rapid, primarily the result of the many mergers of already big banking institutions. In 1931, the 20 biggest banks held very nearly twice the proportion of assets they did in 1920.

"Corresponding figures have not been published for the years after 1931, but data on deposits indicate that the largest banks continued to improve their relative position. In 1930, the 25 biggest institutions held 30 per cent of the deposits of all banks in the United States, exclusive of mutual savings banks. By 1935 their proportion had risen to 38 per cent—a gain of more than one-fourth."

Branch Banking.

Branch banking, the authors point out, has developed mainly in seven states and, with the exception of California, almost entirely in the form of city branches subsidiary to a head office. But recently and particularly since the banking holiday of 1933, large banks have established countrywide branches and even in some instances branches throughout a state. Leading branch banking states at the end of 1935 were California with 798 branches, New York with 671, Ohio with 169, Massachusetts with 149, Michigan with 147, New Jersey with 118 and Pennsylvania with 107.

"Branch banking," the authors write, "is, of course, a type of 'concentration' because of the centralized control over resources. So likewise are group and chain banking. Though differing from each other in many respects, they are very much alike in their effect upon the tendency toward centralization in the banking field. The number of banks controlled by groups and chains on Dec. 31, 1931, was 1886. The number of controlling groups was 273. The total loans and investments of these banks amounted to $9,642,000,000."

Similarly the chain stores have taken over an increasing share of retail distribution,

A Sound Position.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE position of the Post-Dispatch with reference to the proposed reorganization of the Supreme Court is so sound, and so irrefutable, that it is quite incredible there should be any dissent from it on the part of thinking people.

The partition of sovereignty between a federal nation and indestructible states required, and requires, an impartial umpire. To switch umpires, because of disagreement with an honest decision, in the middle of the game, seems quite unworthy of an honorable man or an honest party.

IGNOTUS.

A Suggestion.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF the increase in the number of Supreme Judges is intended to pack the court with Roosevelt-minded Judges, or if this will be its effect, it will just be too bad—inexpressibly too bad—for these United States, but the desirability of requiring the Supreme Court to consider cases which it now refuses to consider has been recognized by many of the bar for years.

If the Supreme Court is to do this additional labor, six additional Judges are not too many, but in providing for their appointment, the packing of the court with favorites (and thus possibly controlling the court) should be avoided. This may be done by a provision that the six additional Judges now to be appointed shall be selected from existing District or Circuit Judges who have been in service a given number of years, say five or 10, and that no more than three of them shall be selected from any one political party.

Harriman and Root.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ONE of the most ruthless financial plungers of his day was E. H. Harriman. He helped produce the panic of the year 1907.

Upon the death of Elihu Root, we are reminded in the news that Harriman once said, "I can hire other lawyers to tell me what I can't do, but Root is the one who can tell me how to do what I want to do."

And, strangely, this is interpreted as a notable tribute to Root—that he could find a way around the law for a financial freebooter.

We Are Taken to the Woodshed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AT last, after many years of lying in wait with aces back to back, so to speak, I have caught you out on a limb. I refer, sir, to your editorial on styles for men, in which you PREDICTED that midnight blue would actually become a fashionable color for evening attire. For shame! Have you been burning so much midnight oil on the Supreme Court and General Motors that you haven't, in the last three years, been to a dinner to the town's biggest bore or cavorted yourself upon a dance floor? Blue, my dear fellow, is THE color for dinner clothes. You may be a seer on presidential elections, floods, ballot frauds and kidnaping, but you had better admit defeat and quit the field of fashionable fancy.

Qualifications for Professional Positions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

PERCIVAL CHUBB says, in your column of Jan. 27, that "the root of our school troubles is the lack of educated people on our School Board."

It is clear that Mr. Chubb means that we should have persons trained in the science of education, which is a profession, and requires training and experience of a technical nature. Politics gives us strange bed-fellows, and we have professional positions held by persons having no other qualifications for the jobs than that they are politicians.

There seems to be a spreading of this political disease. For instance, why should a layman be placed at the head of the U. S. Veterans' Hospitals, under the guise of "business manager"? Why were the doctors of medicine, who were formerly in charge of these hospitals, replaced by laymen? It is the encroaching of the layman-professional idea on the profession of medicine. This practice has been condemned legally, professionally and ethically, as against public policy. It takes very little exercise of reason to see that such practice is not even good sense. The doctors, in spite of themselves, are subject to the layman-manager's point of view, which is not professional but generally political.

To have honest results, professional positions must be occupied by persons specially trained for the job, free from political fetters and back-slapping.

JOSEPH C. LYONS.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S DEFENSE.

At Friday's press conference, Mr. Roosevelt, for the first time in his career, accepted the defensive on a major policy of his own making—the proposal to pack the Supreme Court. He was forced into this position by the rising tide of revolt whose roar has penetrated the walls of the White House. The President adopted the so-called "background" method of communicating his views, which means that the information is not to be attributed to the President; but, stripped of camouflage, in that conference Mr. Roosevelt was addressing the country.

Let us examine his defense.

The central point in it is that his revolutionary plan was drawn up in response to public opinion. In an effort to substantiate this thesis, he cites the fact that, following the NRA decision of May, 1935, in which the Supreme Court unanimously knocked out what Mr. Roosevelt himself refers to as the heart of the New Deal program, thousands of letters were received at the White House urging him to act.

In response, Mr. Roosevelt secretly turned them over to Attorney-General Cummings and Solicitor-General Reed, who are, in effect, his attorneys, to discover whether the letters contained a workable program. By last spring—nearly a year ago—their work on the letters, we are now informed, began to take on definite form. It appeared to the attorneys that there were two courses open: (1) change the Constitution; (2) change the court.

The first was abandoned for two reasons, according to the defense: Because it would take too long and because a constitutional amendment might not pass. So the President adopted the second plan.

How does the first reason appear in the light of recent history? Recent history shows that when the people really want to change the Constitution, they do it quickly. The repeal amendment was passed in less than 10 months. The lame-duck amendment was passed in less than 11 months. That leaves only the second reason—the amendment might not pass.

But how does the President's second reason square with his central point of defense, namely, that he was moved by public opinion? If he really wanted public opinion, why didn't he ask the whole public? His attorneys had reached their conclusion between the two courses months before the opening of the presidential campaign, which offered the perfect opportunity to sound public opinion. It is the primary function of presidential campaigns to lay great issues before the country for decision.

Here was the most important possible issue, but the President preserved complete silence on it throughout the campaign, smilingly resisting challenges to tell what was in his mind.

The facts compel the conclusion that the President did not take the public into his confidence for fear he would be overruled. But concealment did not stop there. He concealed the plan from the many members of Congress who are distinguished authorities on the operation of the Supreme Court and the Constitution. He concealed it even from the members of his official council—the Cabinet—with the exception, of course, of Mr. Cummings. Only three men in the United States knew about it.

Why did the President impart his idea to Messrs. Cummings and Reed? That, too, is obvious. He did so because he had to. These two men were not advisers. They were technicians. It was their job to draft a bill embodying the mechanics of the President's plan, so that, when he sprang it on the country, the bill would be all ready, with every "i" dotted and every "t" crossed, on the theory that a subservient Congress would promptly affix the rubber stamp. Then the country would be confronted with what the diplomats call a fait accompli. A fait accompli means an accomplished fact and, again to cite the usage of the diplomats, when that happens, there is nothing to do but sit back and take it.

So, as we get a bird's-eye view of the President's course, revealed by his defense, we find that he deliberately followed a course of concealment and that he sedulously avoided the test of public opinion, which he now speciously cites as the justification of his defense. We find, even more ominously, that the President followed the tactics of a despot and a dictator. It need not be added that the people want no despotism, however noble in purpose.

Thus does Mr. Roosevelt's defense crumple under analysis.

JUSTICE STORY ON THE COURT.

The passage from Charles Evans Hughes' book, "The Supreme Court of the United States," which is reprinted under the cartoon today, quotes Justice Story as saying in effect that enlargement of the bench in 1837 slowed it down. This observation becomes all the more significant when it is known that Justice Story had earlier favored increasing the size of the court. In 1824, he joined President Madison in urging a larger court, writing to Daniel Webster that he thought there should be nine members instead of eight, so the Judges might be numerous enough "to bring to the court an extensive knowledge of local jurisprudence."

Justice Story was a Judge and teacher who had no hesitation about revising his opinions in the light of experience. A scholar of the Holmes sort, he ranks among the great Judges of the court. Appointed when he was only 32 years old, he served for nearly 35 years. At the same time, he blazed a trail as a pioneering teacher of law at Harvard and published a long series of legal textbooks, the first great American writer on the law. What this distinguished jurist said about enlarging the court in 1824 and then again in 1837, after it had been tried, makes significant reading today.

TO LITTLE ESQUIRE, BLESS HIS HEART!

Esquire the Second condescendingly reproves us in the letter column for predicting that midnight blue would become a popular color for evening attire. Where have we been the last three years, he satirically inquires? Then he proceeds to deprecate the affairs of pith and moment which professionally engage us and he mocks the grave and studious life we necessarily lead, far from the gay and festive foyers he himself frequents. If we were not a hermit, he implies, if we capered, as he does, along the primrose path, we should know, as he and all his fellow-triflers know, that the midnight blue dinner jacket is a venerable vogue—a '34 model, you might say.

May we acknowledge, in Mr. Longfellow's fine phrasing, that with us "life is real, life is earnest, and the night club's not its goal"? As to the tint of what was once called "the tux," it may be azure, cobalt, ultramarine, horizon or any other shade of blue the servile foppish fall for. But—mark you—we ventured no prediction. We merely quoted the 20 times twice-told tale of the tailors whose spokesmen declared that men were about to dine in midnight blue. It is the tailors, not us, whom Master Verdant should flay to tears and lamentation.

In all friendliness to Esquire, Junior, we would repeat what was wisely said long as to fashions:

Be not the first by whom the new are tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.

THE MINORITY'S FUMBLE.

The House last week extended the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act for three years, a period sufficient, probably, to enable Secretary of State Hull to complete the admirable program he undertook on his own initiative. Already 15 treaties have been concluded, and negotiations are now pending with England, following the recent week-end visit at the White House of Sir Walter Runciman, president of the British Board of Trade.

The action of the House, regrettably, was by a strict party vote, the Republican minority being almost solidly against the measure. We say regrettably because here was an instance where the minority could so have acquitted itself as to command popular approval. No other item on the New Deal's variegated accomplishments or agenda has so widely and thoughtfully been commended as this effort to liberate international trade from the strangulation of the post-war years' economic nationalism. The indorsement runs from Wall Street to Main Street and on both the Republican and Democratic sides of those thoroughfares.

Though the minority's duty is mostly to dissent, there are times when concurrence is the part of intelligence and statesmanship. This was one of those times. Had the minority met the occasion, with how much better grace could it now seek Democratic support in the fight to be made on the administration's proposal to pack the Supreme Court. But if the Republican minority is to be simply anti-administration, regardless of the merits of a question, the majority naturally enough will be disposed to be pro-administration for the same partisan reason.

The Republican minority made a miserable fumble when a touchdown was in sight.

JEFF CITY'S MELANCHOLY DAYS.

It's a sad winter at Jefferson City. Scarcely an echo of the old-time gaiety and gusto. The powers of darkness, once called lobbyists, now preferably designated "legislative agents," are absent and discreetly mourned.

They did so much, those powers of darkness, to brighten capitolian days and nights. They kept open house, from breakfast to the midnight oil, and all the makers of the laws were always welcome. They were of many types. The suave and elegant Petronius, the lusty host of Rabelaisian humor, the furtive, whispering buttonholer, the rustic raconteur of homespun speech and guileless manner, but all with the gift of persuasion and all serving devotedly their chosen gods.

The budgeting problem on the constitutional $5 per diem is far from simple at Jefferson City. And those devious, but delightful, spectators at democracy in action, those meal tickets, if you will, were sources of aid and comfort. They are missed.

What of the sinister interests in the carpeted, paneled, urban background? Have they no pet projects prudently to expedite? Are there no hoary, familiar thrusts to dodge or parry with the old technique? Why have they withdrawn their emissaries from the vaulted chambers and dignified colonnades of government?

Where are they all? Are they skiing down the cold, white slopes of Maine, or Vermont's fierce, Sinai-like ravines? Are they lolling on Florida's palm-serried beaches, lazily watching that sapphire sea with the swords of the sun aflame? Are they shivering in the circularized warmth of icy California?

The answer is, they are not at Jeff City, and Jeff City is in sackcloth and ashes.

WE DEBUNK SIR GALAHAD.

The place is the Supreme Court. John W. Davis is talking. The occasion is the "Morris Watson case."

Just an explanatory word. Morris Watson is the man whom the Associated Press fired, whom the Labor Relations Board ordered reinstated, and from which impasse developed the litigation in which we have been told that

(a) freedom of the press was about to be hanged, drawn and quartered, and
(b) freedom of the press wasn't in the cast, wasn't even in the audience.

Watson back on the job would mean, said Mr. Davis, the end of freedom of the press. And the eminent counsel went on to say that "if Watson were as wise as Solon and as pure as Galahad," the verdict still must stand, namely, that freedom of the press was no more.

What we object to is the supposititious purity of Galahad to which gentlemen of letters elegant like Mr. Davis delight to allude. What authority has John W. Davis for presenting Sir Galahad to the Supreme Court as the symbol and exemplar of purity? The worshipful verses of a poet who, plucking a legend here, a bit of folklore there, contrived the romance of the Round Table in the tempo and imagery of adolescent imagination. That is all.

Tennyson did pretty well by all the Arthurians, but Sir Galahad was, of course, the apple of his eye. It was he who found the Holy Grail, who alone could sit at the wheel perilous, who squired the dames with such gallant devotion. But a critical student of Tennyson, leaving Malory's translations unopened, might well entertain a reservation or two about this fellow Galahad. We are not implying that Galahad was a gay Lothario but, we submit, on the Tennysonian evidence, that he was a diligent and accomplished philanderer and pretty much of a carpet knight. We offer the testimony of the realistic Encyclopedia Britannica: "To treat Galahad as Grail hero par excellence, as is too often done (as John W. Davis has done) is a grave mistake."

One question and we're done. What do you make of it, Watson?

Mr. Hughes on Supreme Court Tenure

"Community has no more valuable asset than an experienced Judge," said present Chief Justice in lecture in 1927, while off the court; saw difficulty in fixing definite retirement age, and cited Holmes' brilliant record; opposing increase in membership, he quoted Story: "If there were 12 Judges, we could do no business at all."

From "The Supreme Court of the United States," Lectures by Charles Evans Hughes at Columbia University; Columbia University Press, 1928.

IT is interesting to observe that of the Judges (Chief Justices and Associate Justices) who have served on the Supreme Court since its foundation, exclusive of those now on the bench (in 1927), 24 served less than 10 years; 16 served more than 10 years but less than 20 years; 10 served more than 20 years and less than 25 years; six served more than 25 years and less than 30 years, and eight served more than 30 years.

Chief Justice Marshall and Associate Justice Field served over 34 years, the latter holding the record by a few months. Justices Story and Harlan served over 33 years. The other Judges who served over 30 years were Bushrod Washington, William Johnson, McLean and Wayne.

Five of the Chief Justices rendered service after they were 70 years of age: Marshall for about 10 years and Taney for about 17 years; Waite for a year and a half, Fuller for seven years and White for five and a half years. Twenty-three Associate Justices served after they had reached the age of 70.

On the policy of compelling retirement, there are conflicting opinions. Chancellor Kent was compelled to leave the bench at the age of 60 and then at the height of his power proceeded to write his Commentaries. Today we witness the retirement of two Judges from the Court of Appeals in New York, and of the Presiding Justice of the Appellate Division of the First Department in that State, in full vigor which permits them to resume the practice of law.

The community has no more valuable asset than an experienced Judge. It takes a new Judge a long time to become completely master of the material of his court. Contrary to general opinion, the work of the court tends to keep a man keen-witted and earnest. Fossilization is not due to the work of the court but probably to some physical defect which serves to impair mental activity. Doubtless there is a time when a Judge reaches, on account of age, the limit of effective service, but is is very difficult to fix that time.

We have today the agreeable spectacle of Justice Holmes at 85 doing his share of work, or even more, with the same energy and brilliance that he showed 20 years ago. (He retired in 1932, when almost 91 years old.—Editor's note.) On the other hand, some Judges have stayed too long.

Under present conditions of living, and in view of the increased facility of maintaining health and vigor, the age of 70 may well be thought too early for compulsory retirement. Such retirement is too often the community's loss. A compulsory retirement at 75 could more easily be defended.

I agree that the importance in the Supreme Court of avoiding the risk of having Judges who are unable properly to do their work and yet insist on remaining on the bench is too great to permit chances to be taken, and any age selected must be somewhat arbitrary, as the time of the failing in mental power differs widely. The exigency to be thought of is not illness but decrepitude.

Men who take good care of themselves and live the protected and regular life of a Judge are more likely now to be fit at 70 than were their predecessors at 65 under the conditions of 50 years ago.

Proposals for changes in the organization and the exercise of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court have been of two sorts; those suggested for the purpose of promoting its efficiency and those which have been sought to curb the exertion of the judicial power.

Efforts to increase the number of Judges have failed. After the number of Associate Justices had been enlarged to eight in 1837, Justice Story wrote:

"You may ask how the Judges got along together. We made very slow progress, and did less in the same time than I ever knew. The addition to our numbers has most sensibly affected our facility as well as rapidity of doing business.

"'Many men of many minds' require a great deal of discussion to compel them to come to definite results; and we found ourselves often involved in long and very tedious debates. I verily believe, if there were 12 Judges, we should do no business at all, or at least very little."

Doubtless, a rhetorical exaggeration to emphasize a strong point! Everyone who has worked in a group knows the necessity of limiting the size to obtain efficiency. And this is peculiarly true of a judicial body.

It is too much to say that the Supreme Court could not do its work if two more members were added, but I think that the consensus of competent opinion is that it is now large enough. Happily, suggestions for an increased number have not been favored because of their impracticality in view of the character of the court's most important function.

In our system, the individual finds security in his rights because he is entitled to the protection of tribunals that represent the capacity of the community for impartial judgment as free as possible from the passion of the moment and the demands of interest or prejudice. The ends of social justice are achieved through a process by which every step is examined in the light of the principles which are our inheritance as a free people. The spirit of the work of the Supreme Court permeates every legislative assembly and every important discussion of reforms by legislative action.

No one is above the law. The officer of government, the state itself, is subject to the fundamental law that the humblest may invoke. Our relations to each other, to the society of which we are a part, to the governments, Federal and state, which are the organs of that society, come to the judicial test as far removed from the intrusions of artifice, selfishness and caprice as any test can be. The Supreme Court is the embodiment of this conception of our law, the exemplar of its application, and the assurance that in the complexities of an extraordinarily expanded life, we have not forgotten the ancient faith by which we have pledged ourselves to render to each one his due—a faith which alone makes it possible to look to the coming years with confidence as well as hope.

Safety in the Air

From the Washington Post.

LITTLE came out in the reports of the Bureau of Air Commerce safety conference to reassure a public which has lost much of its "air-mindedness" as a result of the many recent plane crashes.

It may be, of course, that the 10-point program laid before the conference by a committee of radio technicians alone justified the assembly. The layman is scarcely competent to judge. But at least he knows that failure of a beam or direction finder has been emphasized in more than one recent crash report. And his confidence in the air lines will revive perceptibly only when it can be announced that these devices have been perfected. The proposal to co-ordinate efforts of several company and Government engineers now working separately toward that objective should speed this day.

But encouragement from this part of the conference proceedings is largely offset by the charges heard that pilots have been forced to fly in bad weather. The air travel business is highly competitive, being still in its infancy, and every effort can naturally be expected from rival companies—particularly those operating on parallel routes—to present the best record of scheduled flights flown.

But when human error is credited as the primary cause behind 16 of 26 recent crashes, it is disheartening to hear of a single pilot's judgment being overridden by head-office orders.

The charges, it is true, were weakly supported. Perhaps this was because few pilots would wish to place their jobs in jeopardy by testifying to coercion. But, weak as they are, they ought to be ruthlessly investigated. The Bureau of Air Commerce could do commercial aviation no greater service than to search out the fire, if any, behind this smoke of accusation.

THE WASTE OF DEBT.

From the New York World-Telegram.

HERE is a column of figures culled from the new Federal budget:

Year.		Interest on Public Debt.
1932		$599,300,000
1933		689,400,000
1934		756,600,000
1935		820,900,000
1936		749,400,000
1937	(estimated)	835,000,000
1938	(estimated)	860,000,000

It hardly seems necessary to elaborate the obvious, but it may be pertinent to observe that our national debt costs more than the legislative, judicial and civil establishments combined. We pay almost as much for that debt as we pay for our army and navy.

Or, to make it more tangible, our interest bill is nearly three times as much as the cost of the CCC. Which means that if we didn't have that bill to pay, and could spend the money for something which nearly everybody has come to believe is very fine indeed for the country, we could have more than 1,000,000 instead of 350,000 young men at work conserving our forests and our soil—which would be that many fewer loafing and sponging off their folks.

The only way to make much of a cut in the annual interest bill is to reduce the national debt. And to do that, we first must keep the debt from getting larger.

NAZIS ANNOUNCE NEW DECREES ON CHURCH ARE READY

Government Will Issue Them Tomorrow but Keeps Their Contents Absolutely Secret.

LATEST MOVE IN 4-YEAR CONFLICT

Action Follows Resignation of Reich's Evangelical Council Designed as Co-Ordinating Body.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 13. — Nazi Germany decided today on new efforts to regulate its relations with the Protestant Church. New decrees to that effect were prepared for publication Monday. No information on their contents was given out.

Resignation of the Reich's Evangelical Church Council, designated by Nazi officials to co-ordinate the church, brought to a head Germany's conflict between church and state. It has been going on since 1933 when Chancellor Hitler appointed an Army chaplain, the Rev. Ludwig Bueller, to bring the church into line with the authoritarian idea of government.

Guesses on the new laws varied between two extremes. On the one hand there was an expectation that complete separation of church and state would be declared, with resulting curtailment of all government subsidies hitherto given to the church. Representatives of the confessional synods said they were prepared for such a measure and would welcome it. These groups have opposed the Nazi Church co-ordination plan.

On the other hand, Nazi Christians expressed hope the Government might restate policies of 1933-34 to force the Evangelical Church to submit to Nazi domination. The Evangelical Council, headed by the Rev. Wilhelm Zoellner, handed its resignation to Reichsminister Hans Kerrl. Automatically the authority for establishing order in church affairs reverted to Kerrl under a decree of 1935 which permits him to take any action considered necessary to achieve church "stability."

The Rev. Mr. Zoellner, in giving up his office, asserted that Protestantism, unlike Catholicism, has no court of last appeal such as the Vatican for ruling on questions of dogma, and that therefore the Nazi-assumed task of uniting conflicting factions was hopeless. Thereby he put the next step up to the Nazi Government.

PROF. HOOTON OF HARVARD TO GIVE "APOLOGY FOR MAN"

Anthropologist Will Deliver Lecture at Wednesday Club in Series Sponsored by Alumni.

Dr. E. A. Hooton, professor of anthropology at Harvard University, will speak at 8 p. m. Wednesday at the Wednesday Club auditorium as part of a series of lectures sponsored by the university and Associated Harvard Clubs. His subject will be "Apology for Man,"

Dr. Hooton was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford and received his degree in anthropology there. Several years ago he undertook the examination of 16,000 prisoners in 10 states in an effort to determine whether a connection existed between physical characteristics and anti-social tendencies. The project has not been completed.

At the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition, he and associates took measurements of 16,000 visitors selected at random as part of another research program. He is the author of three books dealing with anthropology. Admission to the lecture will be by invitation.

CELEBRATION OF LINDBERGH FLIGHT ANNIVERSARY PROPOSED

Meeting to Discuss Chamber of Commerce Plans to Be Held Tomorrow.

Plans for a celebration, including championship air races, and a dinner for aviation leaders, to be held in St. Louis, May 27 to 30, in observance of the tenth anniversary of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's flight to Paris, will be discussed at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow at 1:30 p. m.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce Air Board. Its purpose, said George B. Logan, chairman of the board, is to obtain the attitude and viewpoint of business men and others on the plans, recently formulated by the board.

TELEGRAMS COMMEND CLARK

Senator Reports Many Praising Opposition to Court Scheme.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri received today many telegrams from Missouri and other states as a result of his statement of opposition to President Roosevelt's plan to increase the Supreme Court membership.

Clark said the telegrams were "virtually unanimous" in commending him for his poition. He said he had made no count of the telegrams, but called the number "tremendous."

try outside of war times, he declared, and the issue whether the Government had power to deal with all matters which affected the whole country had, some day, to be settled.

In the NRA decision the court held to its earlier definitions of interstate commerce, refusing to stretch the definition to take in the great mass of purely local activities simply because they might have some indirect effect on interstate commerce. Hence the NRA in undertaking to regulate local business activities was outside the powers conferred on Congress by the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution. And when it could not do this—regulate wages in virtually all business and industry—there was no more NRA.

Further, the court held that the method set up under NRA to regulate industry through the orders of boards and code authorities was an unlawful delegation of legislative power even had Congress itself possessed the regulatory power in the circumstances. Since in a matter of such vast detail Congress itself could not possibly pass laws for all situations, regulations by boards or commissions would be the only practical method, and the finding of invalidity in that respect became a vital weakness in the whole planned economy scheme. The separate opinion of Justices Cardozo and Stone spoke of the NRA enforcement scheme as "delegation running riot."

A year before this sweeping decision, when NRA was being administered by Gen. Johnson with the fervor of a crusade, President Roosevelt, in a speech to employers, had expressed unbounded confidence in the constitutionality of the law, saying:

"And now to be more specific in regard to NRA itself, you have set up representative government in industry. You are carrying it on without violation of the constitutional or parliamentary system to which the United States has been accustomed."

Undeterred, He Pushed Guffey Coal Bill Through.

With the NRA knockout fresh in the public mind, President Roosevelt urged Congress to enact the Guffey Coal Act, sometimes described as a "little NRA" for the coal mining industry. When the bill was before a committee of the House he wrote to a member of that committee:

> "I hope that your committee will not permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation."

The act was passed, and, as was widely expected, was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Meanwhile the court had held the Agricultural Adjustment Act to be unconstitutional, completing the nullification of the New Deal legislative program.

In the AAA and Guffey Coal Acts it was asserted that the taxing power of the Federal Government gave authority for the regulations which those acts set up. In the AAA case the Court held the Government could not do indirectly, through the taxing power, what it could not do directly. In both cases it held the so-called taxes were in reality nothing more than "exactions," and therefore invalid, and in the Guffey case it said the exaction was obviously a penalty to enforce compliance with the regulations.

In a press interview last June, following the five to four decision by which the Supreme Court held the New York State minimum wage law was unconstitutional, the President, using that case as an example, said that, the majority of the court had clearly defined a "no-man's-land" where no government could function, where both the State and Federal Governments were prohibited from acting.

This was the first sign of wavering from the earlier confident assertions that ways could be found under the Constitution to meet the needs, but the President declined to answer questions or amplify this seeming change of attitude.

Three Basic Propositions Back of New Maneuver.

The Roosevelt philosophy of the Constitution, then, as progressively revealed by his earlier acts and statements, and now clarified by his latest proposal, obviously was based on three propositions:

First, that emergency created by the economic depression justified the exercise of any power necessary to meet that extraordinary situation.

Second, the all inclusive power of sovereignty resides in the Federal Government and may be exercised in the wisdom of that Government.

Third, that although the Constitution limited and conditioned this power in terms, the Supreme Court could by "enlightened interpretation" free the Government from their hampering effects; specifically that the commerce clause and the taxing power could be stretched to validate all New Deal legislation as an exercise of the express power of Congress to regulate commerce and to levy taxes.

With this philosophy the Supreme Court disagreed.

1936 Platform Silent; Appeal for "Redefinition."

The Democratic national platform of 1936 avoided the constitutional issue. In the keynote address at the convention, however, when the renomination of President Roosevelt was a certainty, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, discussing the Supreme Court decisions against the New Deal laws, said:

"What we need is a new definition and a new interpretation of interstate commerce."

In the last major address of his re-election campaign President Roosevelt restated the economic and social objectives of the New Deal and in a voice that boomed from millions of radios echoed after each item the ringing phrase, "We have just begun to fight."

He came to his second inauguration last Jan. 20 riding the crest of national popularity that had given him an unprecedented popular and electoral college plurality. Behind him, however, lay the ruins of an ambitious plan for reformation of economic and social conditions, shattered on the rock of the Constitution. It was fresh in the minds of the people, too, that just before they went to the polls he had assured them that he had "just begun to fight" for these objectives.

There was intense interest in the question of how he expected to reach the goal unless he proposed a Constitutional amendment to confer on Congress and the executive without doubt the powers that were sought. He had given no hint of how he expected to proceed, unless it could be read into his public utterances about "interpretation" of the Constitution.

Not for Amendment But "Enlightened View."

There was his message to Congress last Jan. 5 in which he discussed the Constitution and reached this conclusion, which was a reiteration in different terms of his consistent position throughout his first administration:

"The vital need is not an alteration of our fundamental law (the Constitution) but an increasingly enlightened view with reference to it."

He went on to say that "means must be found to adapt our legal forms and our judicial interpretation to the actual present national needs," and that "the judicial branch also is asked by the people to do its part in making democracy successful." Some commentators bluntly called these statements a lecture to the Supreme Court.

What was in his mind concerning the court as for the second time he took the oath of office in which he swore to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States," is not known to the public. In this dramatic moment the administering officer facing him was Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States.

Was the President's triumphant return to office an empty honor while his major policies lay in ruins? Did there weigh upon his mind a realization that unless he could revive and effect these policies his great victory might turn to defeat?

If he had ever thought that his policies might prevail through a new "interpretation" of the Constitution by the present Supreme Court he seemingly abandoned that view when less than a month later he boldly proposed the revolutionary plan of remaking the court in a way that would immediately give him the appointment of six new Justices. But he was absolutely in character in the drastic means he took to negate the court's action. It was "damn the torpedoes" over again.

Deeper Question Remains: Is Wagner Act Valid?

But if the President wins and is able to place on the bench six new Justices of his own choice will he get what he wants?

A deeper question than those so far passed on by the Supreme Court in deciding against New Deal laws remains to be considered as an ultimate test of constitutionality of this type of legislation. This question, which seemingly is a vital issue in the pending Wagner Labor Relations Act cases, is whether the New Deal laws, even if the commerce clause or the taxing power, or both, were stretched to embrace them, would violate other rights of citizens guaranteed by the Constitution.

Specifically, the New Deal acts had been questioned on the ground that they violate the provision of the fifth amendment that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without the process of law," by the Federal Government. (There is a similar prohibition against the states in the fourteenth amendment.)

It was not necessary to decide this question in the decisions thus far as they were based on other grounds, particularly that the subjects sought to be regulated and controlled were not in interstate commerce. Even if the interstate commerce clause were stretched to include them the other question still would have to be decided.

This question has been raised in the Wagner Act cases separate from other contentions, some of the litigants admitting they fall within the commerce clause jurisdiction but asserting their rights under the Fifth amendment are being violated. This contention is made, for instance, with reference to orders by Labor Relations boards, Government agencies, for employers to reinstate discharged employes and pay them in full for the time lost; this, it is asserted, destroys freedom of contract (a property right) by compelling an employer to enter into a contractual relation against his will, and also denies him the right of jury trial on the question of the wage claim, an alleged violation of the Seventh amendment.

Other Presidents sometimes have been disappointed with the decisions of Justices appointed because of particular views they were known or believed to hold.

The extent of public interest aroused by the President's proposal indicates that the debate in the Senate will marshal on one side or the other the best minds of that body; that the public again will have the rare privilege of seeing the veterans, Johnson, Glass and Borah, analyzing, expounding, fighting with all their eloquence and logic for their conception of constitutional government.

That would mean no greater concession than President Roosevelt has already ordered for the evacuation, if necessary, of residents along the lower river, and it would satisfy the human equation, so far as Missouri is concerned, in a way to elicit the most co-operative spirit. But as the 1937 crest leaves the Missouri battlefront, it approaches another crucial point.

No work whatever has been done on the essential Boeuf floodway, below the Arkansas River, authorized in the "Jadwin plan of 1928. It was blocked by the human equation, manifest in violent local opposition on consideration of real estate. It was discarded, in the Markham plan, for the smaller Eudora floodway through adjacent lowlands, supplemented by reservoirs on the Yazoo.

No Appropriation by Congress.

It is an arresting fact that not a cent was appropriated by Congress for going ahead with the work it authorized under the Markham plan. Presumably, the present disaster will give it the necessary stimulus.

The probability of a levee failure, since opposition to the Boeuf floodway crippled the old project and the new is not yet begun, was pointed out in an article on "Political Ghouls of the Flood" reprinted in Thursday's Post-Dispatch. Fears might arise for the safety of New Orleans and the populous delta towns except for one all-important fact:

None of the three floodways above Bonnet Carre means new overflow. Including, so far, the Missouri project, floodway construction has meant only the building of guide levees to confine overflow within the designated area. The floodways have simply substituted controlled and limited overflow for an overflow hitherto, and immemorially, uncontrolled and unlimited.

What Englishmen Have Done.

Hence the net result of the real estate quarrel is that floodway guide levees, planned to protect 59.4 per cent of the Boeuf Basin, have not been constructed. But while the engineers awaited, and repeatedly urged action by Congress, they have raised by one to eight feet, and strengthened by 90 per cent, the main river levees — with the crucial exception of those at the head of the proposed floodway.

If Congress had acted to make the floodway effective, that section would have constituted the fuse-plug. It is a fuse-plug today. Congress has authorized its abandonment only when the Eudora floodway is completed. It was designed to withstand a flow of 1,850,000 cubic feet a second. A flood estimated at 2,250,000 second feet is on its way below Memphis. The crest will flatten out considerably in the backwater storage area of the Arkansas and under the carrying power of the new "cut-offs" through the Greenville bends, but an expert in the Engineering News-Record has expressed doubt that the fuse-plug will hold. He added that "the determined farmers of the basin are patrolling the fuse-plug levee."

In 1929 the Post-Dispatch pointed out:

> The floodways are the sole reliance of the project against great floods. Great floods are expected to occur, on the average, once every 10 years. What if one comes while we are wrangling in Congress and the courts?

The flood is at hand. New Orleans is quite safe. But the Boeuf Basin is not.

ST. LOUISANS TO SPEAK FOR AERONAUTICS BOARD BILL

Group to Attend House Committee Hearing Tomorrow Night in Jefferson City.

Prompt approval of House Bill 55, creating a Missouri Aeronautics' Commission which would have supervision over all intrastate aviation, will be urged by a group of St. Louisans, organized by the Air Board of the Chamber of Commerce, who will attend a hearing on the bill in Jefferson City tomorrow night.

Heading the group will be George Logan, chairman of the Chamber's Air Board, and George M. Parker, vice-chairman. Other members of the party will be James H. Doolittle, head of the aviation department of Shell Petroleum Corporation, Col. Phil Love, Missouri National Guard, and Ralph R. Page, manager of the St. Louis Municipal Airport.

The hearing on the measure will be conducted by the House Transportation Committee, to which the bill was referred after its introduction by Representative Lindhorst of St. Louis. Sponsored by the Air Board of the Chamber, the measure would set up a bi-partisan commission.

A. C. WIGET SECRETARY OF NEW ELECTION BOARD

South Side Republican Designated for Post by Gov. Stark.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 13. — Adolph C. Wiget, South St. Louis insurance dealer and former State Senator, was designated secretary of the new St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners yesterday by Gov. Stark.

When membership of the new bipartisan board was announced last Thursday, former Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Woodward, Democrat, was named chairman, but the Governor was uncertain whether to designate Wiget or his Republican colleague, former Gov. Henry S. Caulfield, as secretary. The fourth member of the board is Claxton E. Allen, Southwestern manager of the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Co.

The appointments were announced after Gov. Stark had conferred with Charles P. Williams, chairman of the out-going board which was named by Gov. Park to replace the ousted Waechter board just before the November election. Gov. Stark said later he wished to appoint a board which would "measure up to the board headed by Williams."

St. Louis Senators, likewise, were consulted by the Governor and confirmation by the Senate of his appointments is expected soon.

The new board will be prepared to assume its duties before the city primary election March 12.

MURPHY HAS OPPOSED SCHOOL BUILDING PROGRAM

Education Board Member Seeking Renomination Calls Attention to His Record.

Richard Murphy, for whom nominating petitions for a fifth term of six years on the Board of Education are in circulation, has called attention to his stand on the board's $2,578,000 bond issue and PWA building program. He said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he had consistently voted against all proposals under this program, without offering an explanation of his opposition.

In last Sunday's Post-Dispatch it was stated that all board members seeking re-election had voted for the use of part of the Vashon High School grounds as a site for a Negro grade school, except Thomas F. Quinn, who did not belong to the board when the question arose in November. The transcript of proceedings of the board's November meeting shows that Murphy was present then but does not show that he or any other member voted against the Vashon site or against the contracts for the grade school.

However, the transcript shows that Murphy voted against the appropriation for this building at the same meeting. He said that he had voted for purchase of the Vashon High School site prior to erection of the high school in 1925. Murphy is vice-president of Festus J. Wade Jr. & Co., brokers.

AKRON BAR AGAINST SCHEME

Condemns Roosevelt Proposal to Enlarge Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., Feb. 13.—The Akron Bar Association, 53 to 6, adopted today a resolution condemning President Roosevelt's proposed enlargement of the Supreme Court.

The resolution said that such a proposal would "substitute for reasoned and orderly processes the wish of the particular Chief Executive who may happen to be in office."

especially in certain fields. A table given in the book shows that the percentage of total sales done by chains in the field of combined grocery and meat stores increased from 32.2 in 1929 to 43.7 in 1933. For shoes the increase during the same four-year period was from 41.7 to 46.2 per cent, for cigar stores from 25.1 to 33.9, drug stores from 18.5 to 25.1, department stores from 16.7 to 23.9. And for all retail distribution the increase in the share done by chain stores from 1929 to 1933 was slightly more than 5 per cent, from 20 to 25.2 per cent. Chains did more than 91 per cent of all the business done by variety stores—5 and 10-cent stores—in 1933.

More Corporations.

"The number of business corporations reporting to the Bureau of Internal Revenue practically doubled between 1909 and 1930," the authors write. "In the meantime the population of the United States increased only 36 per cent. It is obvious that whatever concentration has taken place in the world of business is not manifested by a decrease in the number of separate enterprises. It is interesting to note, however, that the number of reporting partnerships decreased about one-third from their peak in 1924 to 1933, while the number of reporting corporations decreased only about 3 per cent from their peak which came in 1930. This is further evidence of the trend toward the corporate form of ownership."

The authors cite statistics of income for 1933 to show the "striking concentration of corporate wealth in the hands of a small number of very large corporations; and, conversely, a very large proportion of the total number of corporations with a minute share of the total wealth."

Big Holdings in Few Hands.

The largest 594 corporations, each reporting total assets of $50,000,000 or more, with an average of $240,000,000, owned 53.2 per cent of the total assets of all active reporting corporations submitting balance sheets. Yet numerically the 594 represented only 0.15 per cent. And if only non-financial corporations are considered, the authors add, 375 companies out of 287,575, or 0.13 per cent, owned 56.2 per cent of total assets.

In certain industries a few concerns employ virtually all the workers in the industry. A conspicuous example is the manufacture of cigarettes with 99.4 per cent of all wage earners employed in the largest eight concerns and 91.4 per cent in the largest four. At the other extreme is women's clothing which had only 3.7 per cent in the largest six and 2.1 per cent in the largest three. The tendency, the report shows, is away from single plants employing large numbers of workers and in the direction of multiple units employing smaller numbers.

"The figures," the authors state, "bring out a startling contrast between concentration of wealth at one end of the corporate scale and diffusion at the other. The full extent of concentration is to some degree understated because certain corporations controlled by others are separately reported, owing to the fact that they are less than 95 per cent owned by their parent corporations.

Many Stockholders.

"On the other hand, it must be noted that concentration of corporate wealth is not the same thing as concentration of individual wealth. With few exceptions the largest 594 corporations are 'publicly owned.' Thousands, and in some cases several hundreds of thousands of people are stockholders, while a large proportion of the small corporations are owned by a single individual or a family or by a closely restricted group. Widespread ownership of giant corporations means, however, potential rather than actual democratic control. Except under the most unusual circumstances, stockholders neither participate in the affairs of the corporation nor question the activities of the management."

A Word of Caution.

Having shown the extraordinary degree of concentration that exists the authors of the study caution against too hasty a conclusion about the role of big business in American life. Thus, in the total economic activity of the country, corporations account for but 57 per cent of all income produced, with wide variations in the several branches of economic life. Of income from agriculture, corporations accounted for only 6 per cent, and of income from Government—which was 7.8 per cent of the total national income in 1929—the whole share, of course, came from unincorporated sources—the various governmental units throughout the country. In contrast, corporations produce 96 per cent of the total income from mining and quarrying, 92 per cent in manufacturing and 86 per cent in "transportation and other public utilities."

Holding Companies.

Briefly the authors discuss the various means by which concentration of wealth and economic power is brought about, stressing the holding company as the modern instrument which has more or less replaced the simple form of the trust.

"An effective substitute for the trust," they say, "is the holding company. Indeed the holding company was so obviously a device for accomplishing what the courts condemned in the trust form of organization that there was some question as to its legality from the very beginning. This, no doubt, partly explains why, although the State of New Jersey had opportunely amended its corporation law to legalize the holding company in 1889, the device did not begin to become common until the opening of the present century. The chief reason, however, was the dullness in business and the lack of confidence among investors which followed the panic of 1893-94. Although holding companies were not unknown before 1889, corporations had usually not been allowed to hold stocks of other corporations until then."

How Corporations Grow.

But "internal" growth, which occurs through "plowing back" earnings, is a continuous process except for periods of depression, the authors point out. Thus the big corporation gets bigger by a ceaseless process of internal expansion. External growth, on the other hand, occurs, according to the authors, in more or less sharply defined waves. External growth occurs through the sale of securities to the public to finance expansion and as a result of mergers or combinations.

Finally in conclusion the authors write:

"The picture can be painted in two sharply contrasting colors. For example, taking the broadest view, it can be truthfully said that 81 per cent of all American economic activity is carried on by the medium or small corporations, by firms which are not incorporated at all or by individuals. More than two-fifths of the entire business activity in the United States is not in corporate hands at all—much less in the grip of the giants. Of the total national income produced, the corporations with $50,000,000 or more assets produced only 18.4 per cent in 1933. From this point of view the large corporation sinks into relative insignificance.

Contrasting Pictures.

"By concentrating attention only on that particular 57 per cent of our economic life which is carried on by corporations, it can just as truthfully be said that 594 corporations out of the 504,080 that existed in 1933—or one-tenth of 1 per cent—own more than half the assets of all corporations put together. Or to put it in another way, 95 per cent of all corporations in the United States own only slightly more than 14 per cent of all the corporate assets. This sounds as if American business were completely dominated by big business. And such is a very common opinion.

"Yet this is just as 'colored' a picture as the other. Both pictures are true at the same time and both must be kept in mind if the realities are to be firmly grasped."

And finally the authors warn in their concluding paragraph that the figures they present do not tell the whole story of the concentration of wealth and income in the hands of the giant corporations. Concentration can be effected and control exercised, they point out, in ways that cannot be measured statistically through interlocking directorates, investment trusts, trade associations and banking affiliations. Although these factors are beyond the scope of the present volume, they should be kept in mind, the authors say, in considering the picture of concentration of America's wealth.

AMERICAN ADAPTATION OF BRIGHT FRENCH COMEDY

TOVARICH. A Comedy in Two Acts. By Jacques Deval. Adapted by Robert E. Sherwood. (Random House, New York.)

SINCE last October on Broadway, and since 1933 in Europe, a bright little play by the title of "Tovarich" (Russian for "Comrade") has been tickling funny-bones and warming hearts of everybody from Hitler to the dramatic reviewer of the New Masses.

"Tovarich," Mr. Sherwood says, is his one and only adaptation, yet surely he will allow place for it on the shelf with his "Road to Rome," "Queen's Husband," "Petrified Forest" and "Idiot's Delight." The idea may have been that of a French playwright and novelist, much of the dialogue surely is, yet "Tovarich" has the Sherwood touch, and unless there is a definitely cosmopolitan activity in M. Deval's being, the attitudes many times must be accounted Sherwood's, and American.

This charming fable is about two Russian expatriates, a Prince Mikail Ouratieff and his wife, the Grand Duchess Tatiana Petrovna, custodians of a Czarist treasure of four billion francs, which they refuse to touch, while they live in poverty in Paris. So important is the money that the French Government wants to borrow it, a group of White Russians would start a revolution with it and Communists growl at Prince Mikail, hoping to catch him off guard that they may grab it.

But he is secure in the knowledge that only his signature on a check will release the fund, and he knows he will give it up only to an enthroned Czar, such as the one from whom he received it for safe-keeping. Meanwhile, he and the Grand Duchess must eat, and shoplifting having proved ineffective, they take employment as butler and maid in the home of a Parisian banker.

Quite naturally, the servants captivate the household and are worshipped by the son and daughter of the family, before their identity is discovered. In the denouement, Prince Mikail lets patriotism get the better of his royalist feeling and turns the money over to the hated Soviets, to keep them from having to mortgage Russian oil to buy tractors.

What makes Mikail and Tatiana so delightful to all is their tongue-in-the-cheek attitude toward themselves and their pretensions. They are the same caviar-eating, vodka-drinking, glory-remembering Russians that live in all sentimental fiction, except that they satirize themselves.

The parts are played on Broadway by John Halliday and the Italian actress, Marta Abba. As might be expected, screen rights have long been obtained, and Claudette Colbert is announced for the cast. Pleasure is in store.

One of the Makers Of the West

END OF TRACK. Reminiscences of James H. Kyner, As Told to Hawthorne Daniel. (The Caxton Printers, Caldwell, Idaho.)

THE story of the conquest of the West is largely one of trails and railroads, and the establishment of new means of transportation in an unsettled country is basically a matter of heroic men. Of this daring breed, none is more typically significant than James H. Kyner, railroad builder, whose reminiscences are told here.

The story opens with Kyner's idyllic boyhood in a little southern Ohio town before the Civil War, where his parents owned and operated an old-fashioned inn. Even then he was notably courageous, for, despite the opposition of his family and most of his friends, he proclaimed his conviction that slavery was wrong. At the age of 15 we find him fighting with the Union forces. Wounded in the battle of Shiloh, he lay on the field with a crushed leg for several days and nights. Immediately after the war, unhandicapped in adventurous spirit by his wooden leg, he went west, homesteading on the Elkhorn River, northwest of Omaha.

From courageous work in the Nebraska Legislature, he was drawn into railroad contracting. Many of the trails of steel across the prairies and mountain ranges were first opened up by his grading and blasting. Often the odds seemed overwhelming, but always he met them with intelligence, energy, bravery, and with unusual consideration of the human elements involved.

With honesty, self-reliance, industriousness, an ever-buoyant sense of humor, and an unquenchable enthusiasm for the adventure of human life he not only successfully carried out audacious contracts, but made for himself a fortune, which, with many others, was swept away in the depression of 1893. Beginning again as manual laborer on an extra railroad gang, and borrowing $75 to buy a team of horses, he built for himself another competence, finally to retire in his later years in a beautiful old Maryland home, where last year, at the age of 90, he died.

At the close of his book there are these words:

"How strange a thing is time! How strange a thing is memory! And yet the strangest thing of all is the restless urge that forever lies within a man. The end of track, I realize, is not far off for me. And yet I've often seen the very best of contracts lying at the end. It may be that my track will end that way. I hope it will. I like to feel that I am ready still—for anything."

In these last paragraphs he refers as well to the problems of our day in which he was vitally interested to the end. "What lies ahead?" so many have asked him. And he answers: "Why, opportunity lies ahead, of course, as it did in 1893, for those who would work for it." And then he calls on us all to revive courage and faith, industriousness, intelligent good-will and self-reliance.

Leisurely Voyage In Summer Seas

ZIGZAGGING THE SOUTH SEAS. By Isabel Anderson. (Bruce Humphries, Inc., Boston.)

AS though she were settled comfortably before her own fireside with a small group of friends, Isabel Anderson, author of many travel books and distinguished wearer of the Croix de Guerre, here tells with conversational charm of her visit to the South Sea Islands.

On the Stella Polaris, she and her husband, "L," and a diverse though congenial group of fellow travelers sailed from New York upon an unseasonably calm ocean toward the West Indies. After a glimpse of Jamaica's tropical beauty, they passed through the Panama Canal into the Pacific. Resisting the impulse to go fishing and treasure-hunting at Cocos, they traveled on across the Equator, making obeisance to King Neptune, and called at Tagus Cove, Galapagos, a desolate spot cheered by the profusion of colorful wild birds. Then they steamed slowly across the loneliest part of the Pacific to the Marquesas. Thence they were lured to Tahiti, the Lorelei of the South Seas, where dark-skinned native entertainers perpetuate the traditions and legends of their race in weird songs and wild dances.

The seaway led on to the superb harbor of Pago Pago in American Samoa, where the most advanced of the Polynesian tribes emulate and respect their civilized protectors. At Suva, the capital of the Fijis, the far-reaching influence of the Rockefeller Foundation has established a medical school for native students to combat the epidemics of cholera, smallpox, dysentery and leprosy.

A brief call at Port Moresby, New Guinea, scene of many a disappointing gold-rush, a day at Flores, the "isle of orchids," and the Stella Polaris steamed through the Lombok Strait toward the towering volcanoes, Mount Rinjani and her sister on lovely Bali. Omen of luck, a dragon took shape in the mingling smoke and clouds, and "the sunset turned the monster's breath to fire." Both journey and story end naturally here at this wanderers' Mecca.

Miss Anderson has a vocabulary adequate to describe the lavish beauty of the Southern islands, but she has removed some of the tinsel from the current conception of their glamour, and replaced it with a realistic perception that includes radiance where it occurs, and admits the occasional contrasting presence of the sad and ugly. Constantly in personal touch with her reader, she permits frequent gleams of delightful humor to penetrate the factual dignity of the book.

CHILDLESS: A Study of Sterility, Its Causes and Treatment. By Sam Gordon Berkow, M. D. (Lee Furman, Inc., New York.)

AT A time when overproduction of food stuffs is deemed serious enough for government crop control, there is growing alarm over underproduction of human beings, according to Dr. Berkow. His book, written in a lucid style, handles the subject from both the individual and economic standpoints.

Much to Be Said For Crocodiles

TROPIC FEVER. By Ladislao Szekely. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

TROPIC fever is something that gets into the blood of a man who goes primitive in Sumatra. It makes him beat coolies and curse the day that brought him there. Sometimes it drives him to write a book. In that case it is a fever that has its points, at least in the present case, for the "Tropic Fever" of Ladislao Szekely brings Sumatra out of the tropics for the enjoyment of those who do not find it convenient to go there and would not enjoy it if they did.

Szekely, a young Hungarian, seeking adventure and a job, went to Sumatra and found both; but he found that island to be a pestilential place, exuding miasma and swarming with mosquitoes. Certainly he had everything to gain when he stood leaning against the custom house at Belawan, 15,000 miles from home, and watched the homeward-bound ship drop over the horizon. With six cents in his pocket, he thought of ending it all by jumping into the water which was swarming with crocodiles, but he changed his mind. Sumatra might be pretty bad, but it couldn't be as bad as being chewed by crocodiles. There were times through the years, however, when he had doubts as to the wisdom of his choice.

Sometimes, in the withering heat, he was almost persuaded to lie down in the cleared forest and die. Was it a week since he had come? Or a month? Perhaps even a year. No matter. And how long was he to remain there? One year? A hundred years? No matter. There was nothing for it but to get a firm grip, to crawl through the boundless jungle of felled trees, to pound through the slimy, stinking swamp. That was what they called getting acclimatized. By and by he would be a trained planter and live in his own house and be a big tuan. If he lived that long.

He lived that long, for, although the tropics torture, they do not always kill. Sumatra gave him, after a long time, all that he had earned. He leaned at evening against a tree that he had planted and looked upon a landscape that had become gentle and friendly. This was his handiwork. It was thanks to his labor, to the sweat of his brow, that the rubber trees stood there. The fine roads and the well-tended gardens, he had made them all. But now, as he stood gazing upon the results of his work, he could feel neither happy nor sad.

It was difficult to say whether in the struggle he had won or lost. Yet out of it all he had saved remembrances that were sweet because he had won through to a sort of triumph over the venom of the tropics. These, as translated by Marion Saunder, are good to read, even though they leave one with a feeling that, as between Sumatra and the crocodiles, something might be said for the latter.

Immortal Lovers In New Roles

THE AVON FLOWS. By George Jean Nathan. (Random House, New York.)

HERE indeed is news!. George Jean Nathan has remodeled Shakespeare! In "The Avon Flows," he has slashed "Romeo and Juliet" in half, and then, for material in rebuilding, used bits of "Othello," parts of "The Taming of the Shrew," and a great deal of his own audacious cleverness.

In this 1937 model of the immortal drama the young lovers do not blunder on to tragic ends. They live; and it is when they are married in the Friar's cell that Nathan begins lifting characters, renaming them, and purloining passages from the two other plays mentioned.

Tybalt, the villain, tells Roderigo that he has a chance to win Juliet from Romeo as she is tired of him, mentioning Paris as her lover. He then plants seeds of distrust in Romeo's mind and prods his jealous passions into action. Juliet has dropped a handkerchief which Tybalt has secreted on the unsuspecting Paris. When Romeo sees it, he is convinced that Juliet is faithless and his jealousy drives him mad.

Later, he eavesdrops and finds her true to him, but chides her for her faithlessness. She sees through his play and gives him a large dose of his own medicine. This angers him and he strikes her. Juliet leaves, returning to her father.

Then comes her transition into Catherine; and Romeo, as Petruchio, tames the shrew—which is almost too ridiculous! One cannot imagine Romeo throwing roasts about or the two lovers slapping each other in a common brawl.

Given the idea, a pair of scissors, three of Shakespeare's plays, and the endurance to keep his tongue in his cheek for a time, anyone could do what is done here. His ability and great knowledge of Shakespeare have helped Nathan to make amusing reading, but the value of the play as a producible work is problematical.

Memorial to William Holmes McGuffey at Miami University

His Influence Followed the Frontier

WILLIAM HOLMES McGUFFEY AND HIS READERS. By Harvey C. Minnich. (American Book Co., New York.)

THE life story of William Holmes McGuffey has much in common with the fictional characters he used to point moral lessons in his celebrated series of readers. Like Henry Bond, Charles Bullard, James Bland and even Susie Sunbeam, he was industrious, honest, generous, kind-hearted, and he was rewarded with success, renown and the respect of all who knew him. He never acquired an extensive store of worldly goods, but then he had never preached acquisitiveness.

A nephew has dismissed as legendary the account of how McGuffey's education began, but this biographer records it as fact. His mother, praying aloud near the family home in the Ohio backwoods for the means to get schooling for her son William, was overheard by the master of an academy, riding by in search of pupils. He returned next day and engaged the lad to work for his tuition, so the story goes. It ought to be true, so perfectly in key is it with the McGuffey fables and the McGuffey career.

He taught school for a time after graduation from college and then, in 1836, the first of the readers appeared. His name, if not his fortune, was made. Thereafter, until about 1900, the McGuffey texts were the educational stand-by of students by the millions. Their moral lessons left an unmistakable impress on the standards of the generations that used the "eclectic readers." And their compiler's wise selection of fragments of the best in English poetry and prose opened the doors of literature wide to the citizens of a young country eager for education.

McGuffey's undisguised moral preachments may seem as quaint today as the rude woodcuts that adorned his pages. Yet it must be remembered what an advance his benevolent tutorial manner was over that of his predecessors, the stern New England schoolmasters, whose Puritan texts threatened hell and damnation to the juvenile sinner on every page. He urged the simple virtues in homely terms and object lessons that were readily grasped by every reader.

McGuffey had not only shrewd literary judgment, but also a method of approach and presentation that made young minds accept his offerings, and seek more for themselves. The eloquent and tender and glowing passages of the fifth reader were not soon forgotten by the generations that it influenced. As Mark Sullivan has written: "Every little prairie schoolhouse in America was an outpost of English literature."

The writer of this study of the man and his work is Dr. Harvey C. Minnich, dean emeritus of Miami University (where McGuffey taught for 10 years) and curator of the McGuffey Museum at that institution. His is a straightforward and detailed account, the product of intimate familiarity with the subject. Like the text itself, the format of the book enters into the McGuffey spirit, for its cover reproduces the style of the readers to perfection.

In Any Case We Have the Plays

WILL SHAKSPERE, Factotum and Agent. By Alden Brooks. (Round Table Press, New York.)

EVEN in his own day there were some who doubted that the sonnets, poems and plays attributed to William Shakespeare were writte.. by the man of that name. For three hundred years a theory has persisted that it was not Shakespeare who shaped that most considerable bulk of great English literature.

It is contended that Shakespeare was a country butcher's boy at the age of '13; that after eight years, during which there is no trace of him, he was a groom outside the London theaters; that presently he appeared, impossibly, in view of the record, as the dramatist whose greatness abides through the centuries. That there is something of a problem here can not be gainsaid. It has invited some of the keenest intellects of criticism, many of whom agree that the Shakespeare of the canon can not have been the Shakespeare lout of Stratford; but there agreement ends and disagreement begins.

Now comes Alden Brooks, a Harvard graduate, sometime instructor at Harvard and at the United States Naval Academy, a veteran of the French Foreign Legion, author of this and that, etc., who takes up the cold trail. "Will Shakspere, Factotum and Agent," is the first of a series of conclusions.

Ingeniously and persuasively, Brooks develops many obscure contemporary comments which, he argues, depict a Shakespeare altogether different from the legend—a practical business man unlettered and vulgar, but shrewd; a showman, a play broker and commissioner, who hired the poets of his day to revise and rewrite; a front for those who wished to publish veiled libels without being called to account.

Such a demonstration, if sustained, would explain the differences in quality and style in the items of the Shakespeare catalog, but it sheds no light on the fact that particularly in parts and generally in bulk the catalog items are superior to the known works of any who might have been Shakespeare's hirelings. To meet this difficulty, Brooks assumes a master mind whom he calls The Poet, subject to identification in a subsequent book.

"Will Shakspere" reads like a detective story. It is fluent, compelling and amusing in its irreverence to pre-established notions. It is detailed, circumstantial. There is, however, a rule of evidence in the law courts which Brooks seems not to have heard about. The rule is: Evidentially an inference may not be based on an inference—which is to say only that a conclusion from facts is acceptable, but a conclusion from a conclusion is more questionable. Thus the attention that Brooks may command—and his thesis seems likely to stir up one of the liveliest controversies in years—must be mixed with a measure of caution. There is a possibility that Brooks has the key to the puzzle, but the case is still open.

Interesting as all this may be, the fact remains that we still have the plays called Shakespeare's, and "the play's the thing," as was said by Shakespeare, or Bacon, or the yet anonymous Joe Doakes.

A Regal Figure Of British Stage

MARIE TEMPEST. By Hector Bolitho. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

THE Australian-born biographer, who has written so extensively of Great Britain's royal family, here turns his talents to the portrayal of a regal figure of the contemporary English stage.

With a high degree of sensitiveness and with unerring skill, he paints in 27 lively "episodes" a full-length portrait of the remarkable comedienne, Marie Tempest, whose work has spanned a period of 50 years. The study reveals beneath the glamor of the stage career a fiber tough and resilient, a character of indomitable determination, rigid discipline and more than a touch of asperity. The fortitude she displayed at the age of 17, when she withstood the diplomatic persuasions of Gladstone himself, invoked to divert her from the theater, attended her through such vicissitudes as the threatened loss of her voice, a trouping journey which took her almost around the world, and the period of uncertainty following her return to England.

If Mr. Bolitho grows lyrical in his praise, he is supported by reams of critical and popular adulation of this spirited actress, whose work has been compared with that of Rejane and Duse, and who achieved a superlative degree of artistry, with financial rewards that have permitted the indulgence of a very luxurious taste. "Each year she spends as many hundreds of pounds on her health as would keep a man and his family in a tidy villa. She does not count this an extravagance or a luxury. She represents a standard of dignity, behavior, beauty and fashion, and these expensive ministrations are the due she pays for her position." If this seems rather stratospheric from the work-a-day level—well, perhaps that is the atmosphere most appropriate for a sovereign of the make-believe.

One of the most beautiful phases of this romantic tale is that of Marie Tempest's happy marriage with William Graham Browne, combining successfully their professional careers with an unusually congenial home life. "I have only two interests in the world," she has said, "one is my home life with my husband and the other is my work."

Topping this highly satisfactory and dramatic career was the jubilee matinee held in 1935, at which every notable actor and actress in England paid tribute to the eminence of this perennially youthful woman. And if the stubborn G. B. S. still held out, and stayed away, perhaps that i- just because he is G. B. S. and not because Marie Tempest is any less than she seems to the rest of England.

Mr. Bolitho has done a delightfully entertaining character portrayal.

The Life of Those Who Stayed at Home

THE HILL COUNTRY OF NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND: ITS SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC HISTORY: 1790-1930. By Harold Fisher Wilson. (Columbia University Press, New York.)

MUCH remains to be assembled, but, piece by piece, the story of the American past as the people have lived it is being put together like a great, brightly-colored jig-saw puzzle. Dr. Wilson's book, at the same time scholarly and sprightly, fills out the section comprising Vermont, New Hampshire and part of Maine. Others have told the story of those who deserted upper New England farms to start life anew on the westward-moving frontier. He tells, as he puts it, "of those who stayed home."

The first half of the book covers most of the period under review. In it are recounted the effects of the first railroads on the existing self-sufficient life, the development of the sheep industry, the beginning of rural decline, the lure of the city and the rise of the dairy industry. The 30 years ending in 1930 receive the rest of the space. This makes it possible to report on forest products, changes in agriculture, development of the summer recreation business and the evolution of the dairy industry and its problems in greater detail.

Dr. Wilson, who is now on the history faculty at the New Jersey State Teachers' College, Glassboro, N. J., knows at first hand the countryside of which he writes. Born in Bethel, Vt., and a graduate of the university of that state, he made the subject of this book his doctoral thesis at Harvard under Prof. Arthur M. Schlesinger, one of the leading exponents of social history. Careful documentation, numerous tables in the appendices, and an extensive bibliography bear witness to its thoroughness and scholarship.

Sons and daughters of the White and Green Mountain section, wherever they are, will find Dr. Wilson has gathered together much to interest them. The general method is that of the Schlesinger-Fox History of American Life series.

MEET YOURSELF AS YOU REALLY ARE. By Prince Leopold Lowenstein and William Gerhardi. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

IN this series of 430 questions the authors claim to have a system which enables anyone to analyze himself. The self-analyst does not answer all the questions, but is given a keyword depending on how he answers some of them, and must follow this keyword through the mazes of the book.

The authors have drawn up hundreds of charts "for the purpose of investigating all the psychological factors constituting human nature." Other students of character study people, not charts, and, in addition, do a vast amount of checking to determine the validity and reliability of their questionnaires, never pretending to have one which determines a "fundamental character." They do not feel, as do these authors, that a single rating, test or measure is reliable. It would require years of checking with hundreds of people to determine the validity and reliability of a questionnaire that tries to be as comprehensive as this one.

If this book were used as a parlor game only, and the authors suggest that as one of its uses, and if it is considered no more seriously than other fantastic character systems such as numerology, palmistry and phrenology, it will provide an innocuous means of amusement and mild embarrassment.

WINS MEXICAN NATIONAL PRIZE FOR LITERATURE

EL INDIO. By Gregorio Lopez y Fuentes. Translated by Anita Brenner. Illustrations by Diego Rivera. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

A MEXICAN correspondent of a New York paper has assured the world that "Few events in recent years have caused quite so much excitement (south of the Rio Grande) as the award of the first National Prize for Literature to Gregorio Lopez y Fuentes for his rich and sensitive novel, 'El Indio'." The translator, Anita Brenner, further testifies that she found the book "very real." Nay more, in reading it she "had the sense of the most complete and utter reality." Complete, more complete, most complete. Real, realer, realest, utterly real, most completely real, most completely and utterly real!

One gathers, somehow, that the novel is notable for its realism!

But what most "enchanted" Miss Brenner was the "speed and simplicity with which the story moves," and she was unable to "think of any book about Mexico or any other country to compare it to." Quite probably she couldn't even think of a book to compare it with!

Is it any wonder that a trusting reader should open the volume in a fever of anticipation? The first few chapters do indeed seem to promise an exceptional novel of primitive life; but long before the end is reached it begins to seem probable that the blurbs got mixed; for "El Indio" is not a novel, if the term still has any significance. The author does begin a story, carries it on in a desultory manner for a while, and then drops it, save for an occasional perfunctory reference thereto that gets him nowhere.

Nevertheless, the book has definite value of a sort not emphasized in the blurb. There is nothing to distinguish it as fiction; but regarded as an authentic description of Indian village life in Mexico it may well be a notable contribution, as the author, now a newspaperman in Mexico City, grew up in close contact with the primitive people he describes.

It is regrettable that the work has been offered as a great "novel of the soil," comparable with Hamsun's work, in view of the fact that it has peculiar merits sufficient to justify respect and, at times, admiration. There is a fine pictorial quality in the author's writing, and he tells much that is of curious, as well as of universal human, interest.

It is conceivable that the illustrations could have been produced by the primitive peoples under consideration. They are certainly crude and ugly enough to qualify as very fine art.

A Masterly Tale In Whimsical Vein

APRIL. By Vardis Fisher. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

JUNE WEEG is the "homeliest girl in the world." Her face is a caricature, her legs and arms are thick as logs, her body is dumpy and fat. All these misfortunes make it difficult for her to get the kind of husband she wants—a tall, dark, handsome man. Sensitive about her appearance, she creates in imagination another existence for herself, one in which she is tall and willowy, serene of eye, straight of nose, and crowned with black, silky hair—in short, an utterly seductive creature. In this dream-world her name is April, the loveliest month-name there is, and she is wooed by Sir Guy Hammerton-Smythe and Monsieur Cyrano de Charlevoix.

According to her mother, June is not handicapped by her appearance so much as by the fact that she does not have the right "way" with men. Says Kitty time and again to her daughter, "If you have the way, your face don't matter so much." And Kitty should know; for, although now a fat, ungainly, novel-reading woman who has managed to destroy the love of her husband, she was in her day courted by many.

The background of Vardis Fisher's delightful little story is a small Mormon community in modern Idaho, but one large enough to contain unhappy marriages, subjects for Government relief, disappointed old maids, and aging bachelors who, with the passing years, make love to each group of young girls as they grow up. The author treats his characters with grim humor and a rugged lack of mercy.

The reader may not be particularly interested in the plot of "April"; for it makes little difference, after all, whether June marries or not, or whether she finally ends her days in an insane asylum. Often she does seem headed in the direction of lunacy. What does matter is the author's interpretation of the behavior of the persons involved in the plot. The story is a prose poem, whimsically conceived, and should be read as such to be enjoyed to the full.

Vardis Fisher has won a conspicuous place in contemporary literature with his tetralogy of American life, the concluding volume of which, entitled "No Villain Need Be," appeared last fall.

Mystery Business Slightly Improved

THE CHINK IN THE ARMOUR. By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York.)

THE PUNCH AND JUDY MURDERS. By Carter Dickson. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

THE 1-2-3 MURDERS. By Francis Gerard. (Henry Holt & Co., New York.)

THE DARK SHIPS. By Hulbert Footner. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

A FEW weeks ago it looked as though detective-story writing had run into the doldrums. However, the scene has been considerably brightened by the appearance of a new Dorothy Sayers novel, "Busman's Honeymoon," which is a sequel to "Gaudy Night." Although Sir Peter and Harriet Vane are on a honeymoon, they cannot escape from their duty when a murder is accomplished practically on their doorsteps. Dorothy Sayers is probably the most literate and erudite of detective-story writers—certainly one of the wittiest. Those who count a chapter lost that doesn't yield one dead body may find her a trifle windy, but those who like to savour their reading will enjoy her excursions into French and her really great knowledge of English literature. In addition, Miss Sayers is pre-eminently sound in the psychology of her characters.

"The Chink in the Armour," by another English author, certainly does not come up to expectations aroused by the blurb from Messrs. Hemingway, Woollcott & Pearson. It is supposed to be a horror story, but a reader who experiences anything other than ennui, while plowing through pages of its abominable style, will have to be unusually susceptible to blurbs.

A more lively English offering is "The Punch and Judy Murders." It is one of those detective novels which have everything in them but the kitchen sink—eccentric scientists, international spies and counterfeiters—all not without their humorous moments. With so many curious events happening, the reader's mind is likely to be too confused to reach any solution.

Francis Gerard, who made his debut last fall with "The Concrete Castle," has written another super-criminal thriller, "The 1-2-3 Murders." This is really a well-done job and indicates definite improvement in style and characterization. No guessing necessary.

Arthur Somers Roche, in collaboration with Ethel P. Roche, turns out in "Callingham's Girl" a well-knit combination of Broadway and the underworld. Mr. Roche's gift is characterized by a light touch that makes even death seem a game, and gangsters more foolish than sinister. The reader solves this one along with the police.

The German luxury liners, which were taken by the United States after the World War and are kept off the coast of South Carolina, seem to offer a great temptation to fiction writers. "The Dark Ships" is the second detective story this season in which part of the action is laid on board these ships. It concerns a double-dealing slicker, a girl and a Government agent from the narcotic squad, who does some very funny business for a responsible Government official, but it all comes out in the wash.

Ways to Prevent Waste of Gasoline And Increase Mileage

All Largely Dependent on Car Driver and What He Does or Doesn't Do.

Gasoline mileage still is largely up to a car driver, says Arthur R. Lindburg of A. R. Lindburg, Inc., the Studebaker distributer.

"There is the habit of staying in second up to 35 miles per hour, for instance," he says. "It may look and sound impressive, but it uses up a lot of gas. Gunning the accelerators too hard when one is starting floods an engine with useless gasoline that is never turned into power. If one gets a nervous foot on the gas pedal when he's waiting in traffic, or leaves his motor running when his car is standing still, he wastes plenty of gasoline. So, too, if he runs his engine when he's going down hills and forgets to get into the overdrive (if he has one) when he's rolling along 'cross country.

"Those are the chief gas wasters. There are ways to conserve gasoline.

"A driver should remember to start slowly and smoothly, without racing the engine, letting momentum and gravity substitute for gasoline whenever possible, and not running an engine any more than necessary. One should have the car regularly inspected and tested, and follow the recommendations with regard to service required. Most important of all, one should never drive excessively fast.

"These simple rules, carefully followed, will give any driver maximum gasoline economy—a number of miles per gallon, on the average, that will be a pleasant surprise. For the car of today has mileage built in it.

"Tests were made of stock Studebakers on the Bonneville Salt flats. While these conditions are so perfect for gasoline economy that the average car will never approximate them, the results are sufficiently pertinent to have a great bearing on gasoline consumption under normal conditions.

"Stock Studebaker Dictators—at a speed of 35 miles per hour—gave 27.46 miles to a gallon, while the larger car, the Studebaker President, made an even 23 miles to the gallon at the same speed. These were stock cars, taken from the factory under A. A. A. supervision."

Advantages Claimed for "Electric Hand" in Slippery Weather

Analysis of more than one billion passenger miles of driving with the "Electric Hand," has been made by the Hudson Motor Car Co. from information gathered from 100,000 of owners of cars thus equipped who have averaged more than 10,000 miles each.

With this method of driving without a hand gear shift lever certain advantages are achieved, according to officials of the Hudson Co. The driver need not remove his hand from the steering wheel nor his eye from the road in making the shift. He can select his gear with a flick of his finger, and then make the actual shift by momentarily raising his toe from the accelerator pedal, whenever he desires.

On the 1937 models, the "Electric Hand" has been further refined in connection with automatic clutch action to give selective automatic shifting. With this system, the action of the transmission and clutch is automatic, but the control of time and speed of shifting is in the hands of the operator. Furthermore, there is no free wheeling.

An observation made by drivers of cars thus equipped is of improved safety, due to easier and surer handling, in slippery weather. Good drivers instinctively slip back to second gear when the going is treacherous. There are times, however, in such going when it is risky to take the hands from the steering wheel. This is where the selective automatic shift functions.

Swing to Supercharger Cars in Graham Sales

Retail sales of Graham cars in the past two years and since the beginning of the 1937 model year, show remarkable and definite swing toward the supercharged models, reports F. R. Valpey, vice-president and general sales manager of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation.

"This growing preference by buyers for our higher priced supercharged models means that while our unit sales in 1936 were approximately the same as in 1935, our dollar volume in 1936 was increased by more than a million and a quarter dollars," Valpey says.

"In 1935 only 10.8 per cent of our total car sales were supercharged models. This percentage of Supercharger sales increased to 24.2 in 1936 and, of the 1937 models sold during 1936, 45.9 per cent were supercharged models."

Cadillac-La Salle Certificates Given to 1458 Service Men

In connection with a new program to systematize and improve the reconditioning of used cars sold by its dealers, Cadillac-LaSalle announces award of certificates to 1458 dealer's service men who in 1936 became eligible for the Cadillac Certified Craftsmen's League. The list includes 1263 who passed the league's monthly tests for the second consecutive year. A passing mark of 85 per cent is required in the examinations.

"The Cadillac Certified Craftsmen's League," said D. E. Ahrens, general sales manager for Cadillac-LaSalle, "has maintained the high standard of Cadillac-LaSalle service in our retail organizations. The skill and experience of league members is a vital link, not only in maintaining new car owner satisfaction but also in raising the standards of reconditioned used cars sold by Cadillac-LaSalle dealers."

To qualify for enrollment in the Cadillac Certified Craftsmen's League, each service man must submit to the factory written answers to 25 technical questions, monthly.

Says Auto Designers Center on Room, for Passenger Comfort

"Current studies of body design for motor cars are directed toward obtaining the necessary room for the comfort of passengers, with the result that external dimensions are rapidly changing from cumbersome exteriors to light, compact bodies," says Amos Northup, designer of the new Willys car.

"Automobile buyers are demanding sufficient room in the front seat to accommodate three occupants, without discomfort. To secure this width of front seat, the modern type of design utilizes a flaring outward curve which conforms to the most recent developments in hood design, and lends itself to a graceful inward sweep at the top.

"All steel body construction permits of new body lines at the top and make the pleasing body flare easily possible. Width of seat is got without adding to the bulkiness of the body."

Driving in China Slow.

Despite the fact that China now has 57,000 miles of motor roads, compared with 600 in 1921, less than 5 per cent are paved and few of the unpaved roads permit a speed greater than ten miles an hour.

Buick Reports Many Orders Despite Strike

Orders for new cars continue to pour into the Buick Division of General Motors Sales Corporation, notwithstanding the strike in General Motors supplying plants that halted production Dec. 31, according to W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager.

Hufstader said that unfilled orders at the factory stood at 29,419, a new high, with an estimated additional 30,000 unfilled orders on hand at zones and distributer points.

Sales in the first 20 days of January established a new record for the period, Hufstader said, as a total of 8031 new cars were delivered in the period as compared with 4251 in the corresponding period of last year, a gain of 3780 units or 89 per cent.

This total compared with 7066 in the entire month of January last year.

Car Light Shows Speed.

American Airlines Nears Carrying Its Millionth Passenger

Some time in the next few weeks American Airlines, Inc., will become the first air transportation company in the world to have carried a total of 1,000,000 passengers, and plans are now being completed for a nation-wide celebration, C. R. Smith, president of the company, said yesterday.

An accurate count has been made of all passengers transported by American and its predecessor companies since the day in the spring of 1926 when Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, then known only as "Slim," climbed into the cockpit of an open plane and flew the first air mail from St. Louis to Chicago for any commercial line.

Jan. 17 of this year, Smith said, electric time clocks were installed in all American Airlines terminals throughout the United States. A timed record is now being made of every passenger boarding any of the company's fleet of air liners.

In Chicago, auditors are checking tickets of these passengers in the order in which they flew and it is expected the identity of Passenger No. 1,000,000 will be known within a week after he or she makes the trip.

Car for Honduran President Armored Even Against Bombs

A Packard twelve sedan-limousine just completed for Gen. Tiburcio Carias Andino, president of the Republic of Honduras, it is said, will resist fire from pistol, submachine gun, bomb or even high-powered rifle.

In outward appearance, the car is like any other Packard twelve sedan-limousine. However, it has an inner shell of armor plate a quarter-inch thick which is so hard surfaced that it can neither be sawed, filed nor drilled. This steel plate is hidden between the outer steel of the body and the inner dark blue leather trimming. Windows are of bullet-resisting glass an inch and a quarter thick.

In tests of the armor on the car, a high-powered rifle with .30-caliber United States Government ammunition was only able to dent the steel. The same rifle, using the same ammunition, sent a bullet through 58 boards, each seven-eighths of an inch thick and placed an inch apart.

Rifle bullets shattered on striking the armor plate. Some parts of the bullets were fused to the steel because of the heat generated by their impact.

The floor of the car is fitted with armor plate to protect occupants from an explosion of bomb or dynamite thrown under the vehicle. The windshield and back window glass have ports through which sub-machine guns can be fired.

Best Year's Business in Its History in 1936, TWA Reports

The greatest business of any year in its history was had in 1936 by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., Jack Frye, president, said yesterday in making public the company's annual compilation of traffic statistics.

In excess of 22,000 more revenue passengers were transported in 1936 than in 1935, and the revenue passenger miles flown increased by nearly 15,000,000, Frye said. "Mail pound miles jumped by more than 660,000,000 (a mail pound mile is a pound of air mail flown a mile), while air express, operated by TWA's affiliate, General Air Express, increased by more than 135,000,000 pound miles."

Frye said the skyliners of his company operated a total of more than 9,000,000 miles, which represented completion of more than 95 per cent of all flights scheduled by the company throughout the year.

The actual number of revenue passengers transported in 1936 by TWA was 88,351 or over 25 per cent more than the 66,882 carried in 1935. In 1936, TWA operated 120,359,240 seat miles, of which 76,296,390 were for revenue passengers. This was in comparison with 109,746,929 seat miles operated, and 61,566,758 occupied in the preceding year.

TWA passengers in 1936 averaged 853 miles each. This was somewhat shorter than the average passenger trip in 1935 when TWA passengers averaged 925 miles flown per passenger.

Willy's Production 6588 Cars in January

Production of new Willys cars in January was 6588 complete units, according to David R. Wilson, president of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc.

This exceeded December production by 2568 cars, or 64 per cent, and brings the total of cars produced since operations started on the current models up to 10,608 with two plants now running.

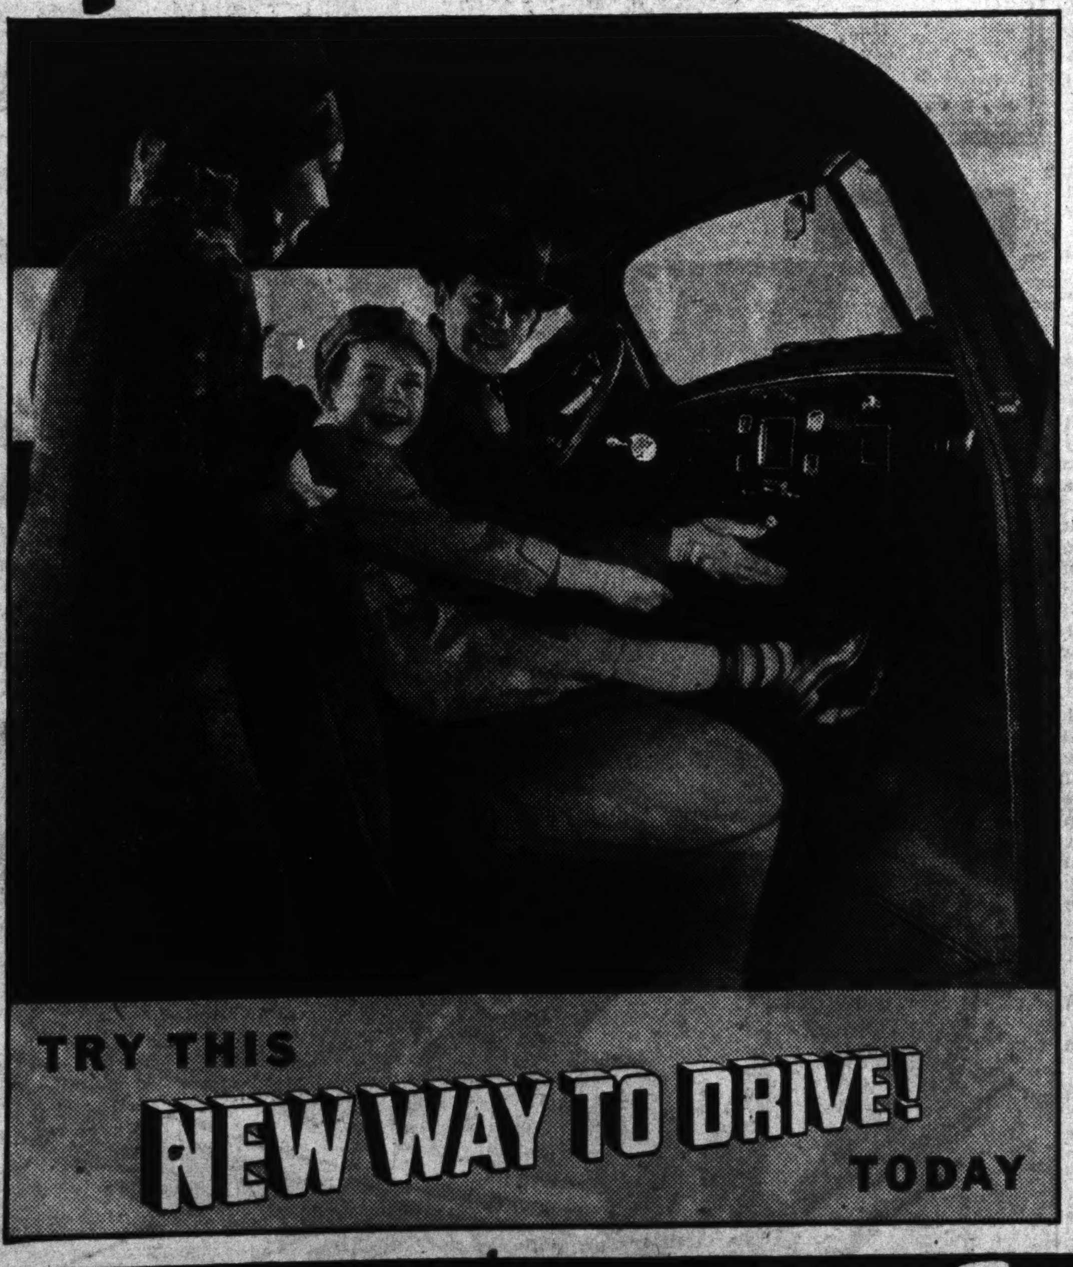
Good-bye GEAR SHIFT LEVER!



NOW THERE'S A NEW WAY TO DRIVE

Nobody needs to do any of the work of shifting gears, any more! There's a new way to drive! You'll find it in any 1937 Hudson or Terraplane with Selective Automatic Shift!

Nothing New to Learn

One finger flicks a little lever at the steering wheel, to pick your next gear. The same familiar gear positions are there . . . nothing new to learn. Then . . . just lift your toe from the accelerator and gears shift automatically . . . faster and more surely than you can move them by hand. No need to push a clutch pedal.

Selective Automatic Shift is optional at small extra cost on all 1937 Hudsons and Terraplanes . . . not available on any other popular car. You can have the conventional gear shift if you wish . . . but we're sure you won't after you drive this new way.

No. 1 in Everything You Want

And this new way to drive is just one of the advantages that make these America's No. 1 Cars! No. 1 in size and roominess . . . 117-inch wheelbase in Terraplane; 122 and 129-inch wheelbases in Hudson. With 55 full inches of front seat comfort for three . . . several inches wider than any other popular car.

No. 1 power . . . ranging from 96 to 122 horsepower. No. 1 safety . . . body all of steel and exclusive Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes. Interior luxury that says "fine car" all the way through. And proof of endurance, performance and economy no other 1937 cars can give you.

Come in and drive today . . . tomorrow's way!

REMARKABLE ECONOMY PROVED AGAIN!

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.: Hudson Eight—22.71 miles per gallon! Terraplane—22 miles per gallon! These are the official gasoline mileage figures established by Hudson and Terraplane in the 1937 Los Angeles-Yosemite Economy Run. And they are certified by the American Automobile Association, under whose supervision the test was held. Hudson beat all other eights by more than 2 miles per gallon. Terraplane had the best gasoline mileage of all leading low priced cars. This annual classic was run over a twisting, mountainous, 352-mile course. Each car carried five passengers and baggage—with no coasting allowed.

World's Wealthiest Man Keeps Silver Jubilee

Nizam Hyderabad Opens 10-Day Celebration by Attending Public Service at Mosque.

By the Associated Press.

HYDERABAD, India, Feb. 13.—The Nizam of Hyderabad, reputed to be, the world's wealthiest man, opened his silver jubilee, riding through the street in a 26-year-old Rolls Royce refurbished for the occasion. His annual income is estimated to be $50,000,000.

Services in the central mosque opened the jubilee at which his subjects gave thanks that Allah had spared the Nizam. The jubilee, originally scheduled for last year, was postponed because of the death of George V, Emperor of India, and because one of the Nizam's sons died. The Nizam has been on the throne 26 years. His subjects number 14,500,000 persons.

The Nizam was simply dressed in a gray morning coat and a plain turban and wore no jewelry. He was accompanied by two sons, who bear princely titles, and by several other sons.

After the reciting of poems of gratitude and praise, the Nizam prostrated himself in the midst of his subjects, according to Mohammedan rule. The theme of the prayers was thankfulness for Hyderabad's religious freedom, undisturbed by communal bickering.

The 30-year-old Crown Prince Azam Jah, heir apparent, led a military parade after the religious services.

Arab and African cavalry, displaying remarkable precision, played a prominent part in the ceremonies which by Oriental standards had a minimum of pomp. The Nizam preferred to spend celebration funds on charities instead of on decorations.

A taxicab strike disrupted transportation but the Government arranged a special service to care for the influx of visitors.

The Nizam's wealth—reputed to include $260,000,000 in gold bars and $2,000,000,000 in precious stones—will be augmented by jubilee gifts estimated at more than $1,000,000 in value, from subjects and other Indian potentates.

The presentation of gifts will be part of the ceremonies, processions, garden parties and other celebrations that are scheduled for the succeeding 10 days.

The Nizam's subjects are expected to benefit from the anniversary through remission of some taxes as the Nizam's jubilee gift to his people. Already three tuberculosis sanitariums and several rural dispensaries have been established as jubilee tributes.

Prince Aly Khan, the heir to the Aga Khan, and his wife, the former Mrs. Loel Guiness, were among the guests in Hyderabad for the festivities.

PROPAGANDA FOR COLONIES IN GERMAN COMIC OPERA

Comedian's Song Deals With Share Given to Germany When Africa Was Divided.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—In a large theater built by Max Reinhardt and taken over by the German labor front 2500 members night after night have German colonial propaganda served to them in a comic opera, "Adventure in Africa."

The story tells of a German professor who organizes a scientific expedition to Africa, only to find that a consul has filled his boxes, supposedly containing supplies, with coke.

The comedian is called out again and again, and his final verse describes how the rest of the European powers acquired land in Africa, but how the Germans were cheated of their share. The song ends with assertion that soon the Germans will be "back in Africa."

PRESIDENT WANTS DAM TO BE COMPLETED

Anxious to Eliminate Private Realty Profit From Grand Coulee Project.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Senator Homer T. Bone of Washington State said today President Roosevelt has taken a definite stand in favor of provision by the Federal Government of "adequate funds so that the construction of the Grand Coulee project may proceed in an efficient manner and without delay."

At a meeting of the Washington State delegation, he made public a letter from the President in reply to the delegation's recent appeal for executive support for an appropriation of at least $15,000,000 to assure uninterrupted construction of the Grand Coulee dam.

"It is evident a waste of money will be entailed if construction of the high dam does not proceed upon completion of the present structure, due to the loss of interest on the money now invested by the Government, and on account of the necessity, at some future date, for organizing a new working force and preparing the foundation so that a bond may be obtained between the old and new structures," the President said in his letter to Bone. "Tremendous benefit will accrue to the Northwest by the building of Grand Coulee dam and power plant and the Columbia irrigation project."

The President said, however, it is "only fair that I should tell you that before the appropriation of funds for the construction of Grand Coulee dam as a high structure, it is my thought that the Congress assure itself of complete control over the lands in the Columbia basin which would be irrigated."

"I know that you will agree with me that it is unthinkable that real estate profits should accrue to private individuals solely because of this great Government work," the President wrote. "Therefore, in my judgment, construction of the high dam should be dependent on the elimination of private profits, speculative or otherwise, which would result from this proposed action by the Federal Government."

Twice America's Economy Champion

● ONCE CHAMPION—a notable achievement . . . TWICE CHAMPION—absolute proof of absolute superiority. Over mountain and desert, through burning heat and drifting snow, for two years running a Graham Supercharger has won the official U. S. Economy Championship in the 352-mile Gilmore-Yosemite Economy Sweepstakes. This year, a Graham Cavalier finished second . . . Open to all stock cars, certified by the American Automobile Association, no championship is so bitterly contested as the Gilmore-Yosemite Economy title . . . Winning the title with a mark of 53.4 ton miles per gallon and 23.95 actual miles per gallon, a Graham Supercharger, for two years straight, defeated 20 or more cars representing nearly every American manufacturer—for two years straight, demonstrated its sole right to the title "America's Economy Champion" . . . Call today for your sample ride in duplicates of these famous national champions. Prove to yourself the truth of the great Graham Supercharger slogan, "—farther and faster on a gallon of gasoline than any car in America."

Impressions in Water Colors of Scenes and Personalities — Painted by Joe Jones in Mexico City.

MEXICO, D. F.

MUCH of Mexican art has shown vitality and distinction because it expresses the native culture and characteristics of the Mexican people. Plans to carry this quality further with a national program of art that will reach the Mexican masses, articulate their thoughts and feelings, and serve as a step in their social education, were made at the National Congress of Writers and Artists in Mexico City the week of January 17.

Mexican artists, it was decided, must be closely integrated with the working class and the peasants, must paint and model for them as well as about them. Proposals were made to get active support from the Government, the trade unions and the peasant confederations for the movement.

The tone of the movement was struck in the audience and participants at the opening meeting in the Palace of Fine Arts. Joe Jones, St. Louis painter and member of the Communist party, who was one of the speakers at the Congress, illustrates it graphically in the water colors on this page, done during the sessions or at the exhibitions of Mexican painting, sculpture and architectural models held in connection with the Congress.

In the gallery of the great auditorium sat bare-footed peasants in white cotton shirts and trousers. On the lower floor were gathered most of the important Mexican artists and writers, along with scientists, medical men, lawyers, educators, musicians, representatives of Mexico's traveling folk theater, students and overalled workers from factories, offices and mines.

On the stage, against a backdrop by the painter, Angel Braco, showing figures with the raised fists of the People's Front, sat representatives of the National Revolutionary (Government) Party, the League of Revolutionary Writers and Artists, Waldo Frank, left-wing American writer, Joseph Freeman, one of the editors of New Masses, Jones, and Luis I. Rodriguez, secretary to President Cardenas.

One conspicuous absentee was Diego Rivera, most widely-known Mexican artist and at present host of the exiled Bolshevik, Trotsky. Rivera was not invited because of his refusal to take part in the building of a Mexican People's Front, although the political views of the sponsors were varied, ranging from radicalism to mild liberalism. Although there were other political developments, such as the pledging of the aid of those present to the Spanish Loyalists and to the further building of the Popular Front to guard reaction in Mexico, the Congress devoted itself to discussion, in various sections, of literature, the plastic arts, science, music, teaching, the cinema and theater.

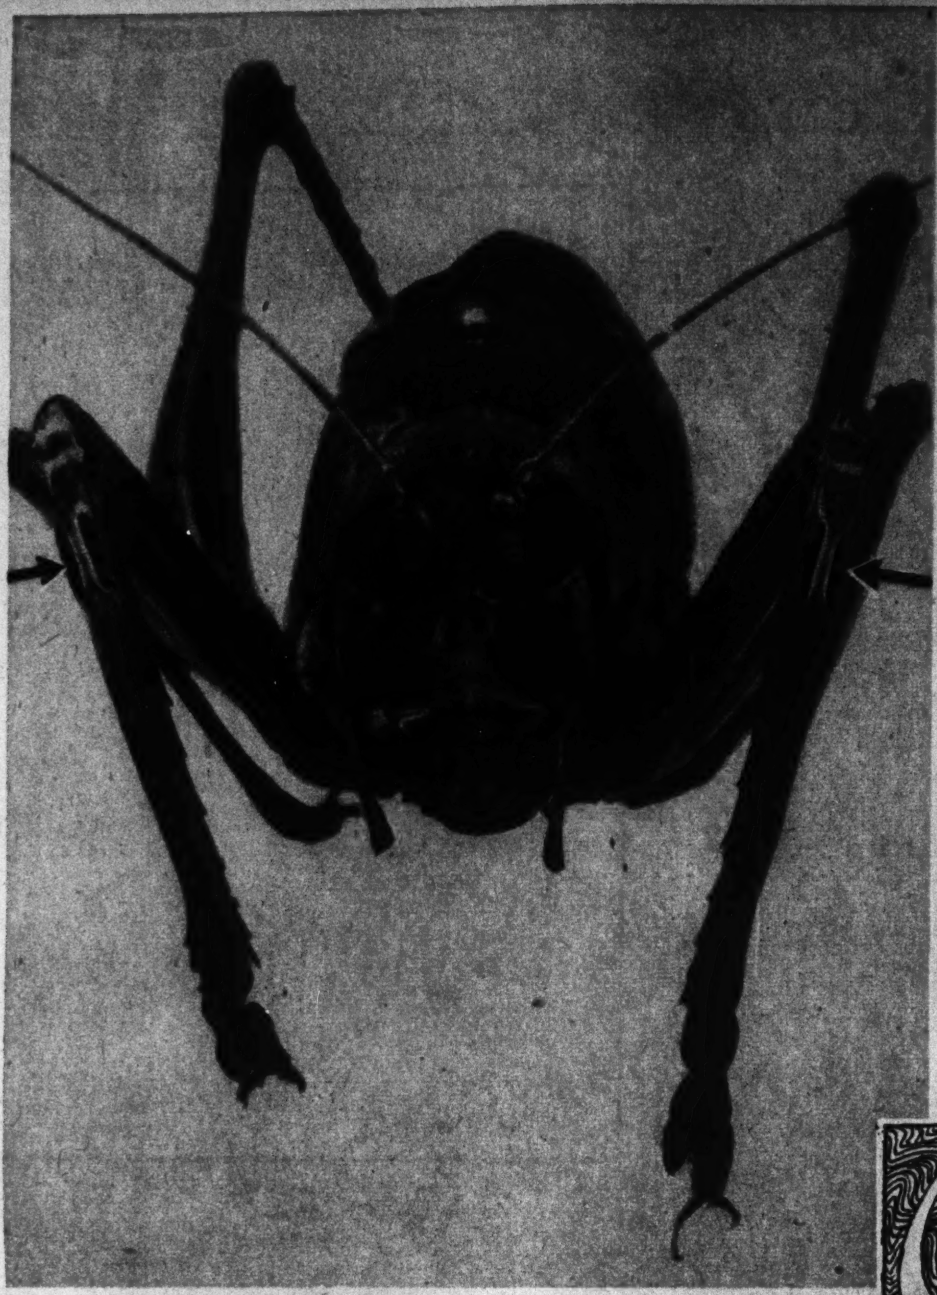
INSECTS that HEAR THROUGH KNEES and WAIST

Remarkable Series of Photographs Showing the 'Ears' of Crickets, Butterflies and Grasshoppers.



An insect with its "ears" in its legs; the double slits in the upper forelegs marking the openings to the ear drums.

Malayan cricket which also has "ears" in its legs.

ORGANS of hearing on legs and bodies of insects have been photographed clearly and in great detail in a remarkable series of pictures made by Dr. Wilhelm Ramme, a member of the Zoological Institute of the University of Berlin. Such pictures have been made before, but none has ever approached the clarity and minuteness of detail shown in those taken by Dr. Ramme. His pictures lead to the thought that the head may not be the only proper and fit location for ears despite the fact that mankind and all the higher vertebrates, as well as reptiles and amphibia, have their auditory organs there.

Unlike most insects, which hear by picking up sound vibrations through specialized nerve-endings in their feelers or antennae, the orthoptera, comprising the grasshoppers, walking sticks, locusts, crickets and roaches, have definite auditory organs to which the term ear can be applied without hesitancy.

Those which are able to produce chirping and other sounds, notably the crickets and grasshoppers, have well-formed organs of hearing in the forelegs or in the thorax. In locusts and ordinary grasshoppers, a large ear is on each side of the thorax. A tense, round membrane, surrounded by a firm ring, can be seen on either side of the lower part of the body. This tympanic membrane, or eardrum, covers a sac or depression lined with sense cells from which a large nerve runs to one of the centers of the nervous system.

The bush cricket of New Guinea, a long-horned grasshopper, and the common katydid, both have ears on the shin of each foreleg. Near the knee is a slightly recessed membrane in the shape of a longish oval, which represents the eardrum. In some cases, the ear is farther inside, protected by rolls of horny substance, so that a mere slit is left open.

These slits lead into chambers formed by the in-pushing of the cuticle of the leg. The chambers are thickened outwardly, but the inner walls are thin, forming two oval drums. Each drum is in contact with the wall of an air tube, the main air tube of the leg dividing into two branches which join again lower down. The inner chambers are covered by a tense membrane. The complicated series of auditory rods connects with the nerves of hearing and collects vibrations of the drums.

The auditory rods compose the chordotonal organ, comprising a structure somewhat resembling a piano keyboard. When a thin section of this is viewed under a powerful microscope, a row of sense cells is seen. Each is more or less rectangular and suggests the white keys of a piano, while their nuclei, more darkly colored, suggest the black keys. It is thought that each sense cell is adapted to receive sound vibrations of a certain pitch only and that this form of ear is therefore like a receiving piano.

Certain types of butterfly and moth also possess what might be called ears. The position of the organs in these cases is on either side of the body and at the junction of the thorax and abdomen. Experiments have shown that the butterfly and moth are capable of perceiving sounds of but very short wave length.

The MYSTERIOUS MURDER on the 759 EXPRESS

Marius Veyrac, leaving the Magistrate's Court.

Suzanne Garola.

Why a Frightened French Ticket Taker Has Been Charged With Causing the Death of Suzanne Garola.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NICE, France.

SOME time during the chill dreary hour just before sunrise, a furtive figure stepped out of a second-class compartment of 759, the night express, Strasbourg to Ventimiglia. Inside on one of the two long vis-a-vis upholstered seats lay attractive chic Suzanne Garola, a 33-year-old widow and the manager of two fashionable tea shops in Cannes and Nice.

One of the blinds in the dim compartment was up just enough to allow a glimpse within. Through this Madame Garola could be seen in an easy posture of rest. Apparently she was sleeping peacefully although wearing her leopard skin coat and a hat of the same material. A rug tossed carelessly over her body covered her chin.

It took closer scrutiny to perceive the nickle-plate dog chain that bound her ankles and the end of another chain that tied her wrists behind her back. The rug concealed a scarf tied over her mouth so that it secured a handkerchief reeking of an anesthetic.

The widow had died in her sleep. So expertly had the murderer worked that she had apparently made not the slightest struggle.

At 7:32 a. m. the train left Nice, where Mme. Garola's 10-year-old son, Rene, and her mother, Mme. Michel, waited in vain on the platform in response to a telegram the young woman had sent the night before. Probably mama missed the train and would arrive a little later, Mme. Michel told the sobbing little boy.

An hour later, Ticket Collector Marius Paul Veyrac approached a fellow worker, Antoine de Cacavelli, the head postal sorter, and asked him to come to Car 5001 "and take a look at a compartment." He was puzzled by what he had seen from under the half raised blind.

Cacavelli stood in the door while Veyrac entered the compartment, walked over to the recumbent passenger, turned the rug back slightly and remarked, "I can't make it out at all—whether she is sleeping or dead?" Then he turned away, giving no sign that he had noticed the gag or the odor of the anesthetic. The two men stepped outside the compartment, Veyrac locked it, and after a few minutes of talk the two came to the conclusion that the situation demanded astute handling.

Unwilling to shoulder the responsibility, they asked the station master at the next stop, Beaulieu-sur-Mer, what to do. He decided it would be best to telegraph on to Monaco, the next stop, and let the station master there hold the car on a side track for police inspection.

When the train pulled into Monaco it was met by a station master who softly but firmly explained that he did not care to become involved in international complications. After all it would be so much easier just to detach the car at Menton, the next stop, where French police could handle the matter in the manner for which they are justly so famous, he reasoned.

So car 5001 with its murdered occupant was eventually sidetracked at Menton and boarded by a swarm of gendarmes and detectives. Veyrac described how he had gone to the compartment two hours before he discovered something was wrong. He was about to knock when the door was opened and a distinguished looking elderly gentleman with gray mustache and a beret stepped out and said, "Please, madame is sleeping. Ask for her ticket later."

Veyrac, according to his story, peeped under the blinds, after the man walked into another coach, and saw that Mme. Garola seemed to be asleep. The man in the beret got off the train at the next stop. After the train left Cannes and was nearing Nice, Veyrac continued, he felt rather uneasy and returned to the compartment. On opening the door, he noticed the heavy odor of an anesthetic, turned back without further examination, and summoned Cacavelli.

In addition to Veyrac's story, the police had the following clews:

The handkerchief used as a gag bore the initial M., and Veyrac's first name was Marius. The drug used as an anesthetic is not easy to purchase in France, leading to the presumption that the murderer knew something of medicine. There was no evidence of "criminal attack" or other marks of violence. In the rack next to that occupied by Mme. Garola's luggage was an empty, yellow leather bag. It was thought that the murderer had used it to carry his chains and the anesthetic. A strand of blond hair was found on the pillow under Mme. Garola's dark head. Veyrac's hair is also dark.

NONE of Mme. Garol's belongings had been touched except her purse, from which $75 was missing. This led to the conclusion that robbery was not the motive and that the money was taken merely to throw the police off the track. The passport which established her identity was in the purse.

The clew afforded by Veyrac's description of the "distinguished looking man with gray mustache," was supported by the statements of several passengers.

At the inquest next day, Monsieur Mergoux, brother-in-law of the murdered woman, testified that Mme. Garola had left Nice on November 2 for a pleasure trip to Northern France and had stopped at his home in Lyons on November 13 and 14. He mentioned that when he escorted her to the train about midnight of the fourteenth, she pointed to three suspicious looking men and remarked, "I should not like to have them for traveling companions." Mergoux made sure that the compartment she entered was unoccupied. It was this same compartment in which her body was found. He also testified that Mme. Garola was obsessed with the fear that she would be murdered. Police paid little attention to her "obsession."

The press played it up, jumping from conjecture to conjecture.

Police discussing the crime outside the sleeper where Mme. Garola's body still lay bound and gagged.

Then the Nice police started off on the old set formula: Motive—What was it? Jealousy? Venegeance? Robbery? Lunacy? Espinoage? Sadism? They worked fruitlessly for days until finally the Paris Surete, tired of a month's floundering by the officials at Nice, called for the papers on the case. A day or two later they had their own men on the scene.

They used the newspapers to invite every occupant of the fatal coach to come forward and tell his story, pointing out that the slightest detail might be of significance. Even under the guarantee of secrecy, only three men came forward.

More investigation of Mme. Garola's life disclosed that at Cannes she was known socially for her smart "5 o'clock clientele." There was a Monsieur Allardi, a prosperous business man, with whom she was quite friendly, but he was above suspicion and had an alibi — if one were needed. There was some talk to the effect that she had lost more money than she could afford in gambling casinos at Nice and Cannes. Some said that she had been seen in the casinos accompanied by "an elderly gentleman with gray mustache." Others said this was not so. That was as far as the Paris Surete men got in that direction.

Investigation of Veyrac's character revealed only that he was a peasant's son, 35 years old, had risen by his own efforts to a position superior to that which he might have been expected to attain, was married and living, apparently happily, in Avignon where gardening occupied his spare time. . . .

Then, by reconstructing the atmosphere of the express as it roared through the night and by placing themselves in the murderer's position, the Paris experts unanimously fixed on Veyrac as the murderer. They asserted they were unable to accept his explanations of why he let his passenger go on sleeping, without taking up her ticket or even knowing whether she had passed her destination.

They established that Veyrac had not boarded the train at Marseilles, where his run begins, but at Avignon. This would explain his presence on the train during the hours which the autopsy established as a time limit for the murder. Veyrac countered with the statement that he boarded the train in company with a friend, whom he could produce. The friend, interrogated by the police, asserted that he had been with Veyrac during the ride to Marseilles and had noticed nothing suspicious.

Asked why he had kept it secret that he was on the train during the time of the murder, Veyrac said that it was against regulations for him to get on at Avignon and he wanted to protect his job. The railroad records listed him as living in Marseilles.

When asked about the handkerchief with the initial M he responded that there must be five million Frenchmen whose first names begin with it.

Then he was confronted with annonymous letters from women who had written in since the murder telling of being awakened on night trains by a man who ran his hands over their persons as they slept. One woman said she had awakened dazed and nauseated by a peculiar odor. The incidents had occurred aboard trains on which Veyrac was the ticket collector and on nights when he was on duty. The writers said they had feared scandal or ridicule and so had not reported the incidents.

Veyrac steadfastly denied that the incidents had anything to do with him.

INSPECTOR CHEVENNIER, suddenly changing his tactics, ordered two policemen to go through Veyrac's pockets. Out came a crumpled letter, dated five days after the night of the murder, and addressed to the celebrated Paris lawyer, Maitre Henri Torres. Although written before any accusations had been made against Veyrac, it asked Torres to come and defend Veyrac should he have "any trouble with the police."

The inspector turned savagely on the now frightened ticket collector. "Come," Chevennier roared, "admit you killed this woman without meaning to!"

Perspiration stood out on Veyrac's brow, he grew pale and sank into a chair. He said nothing.

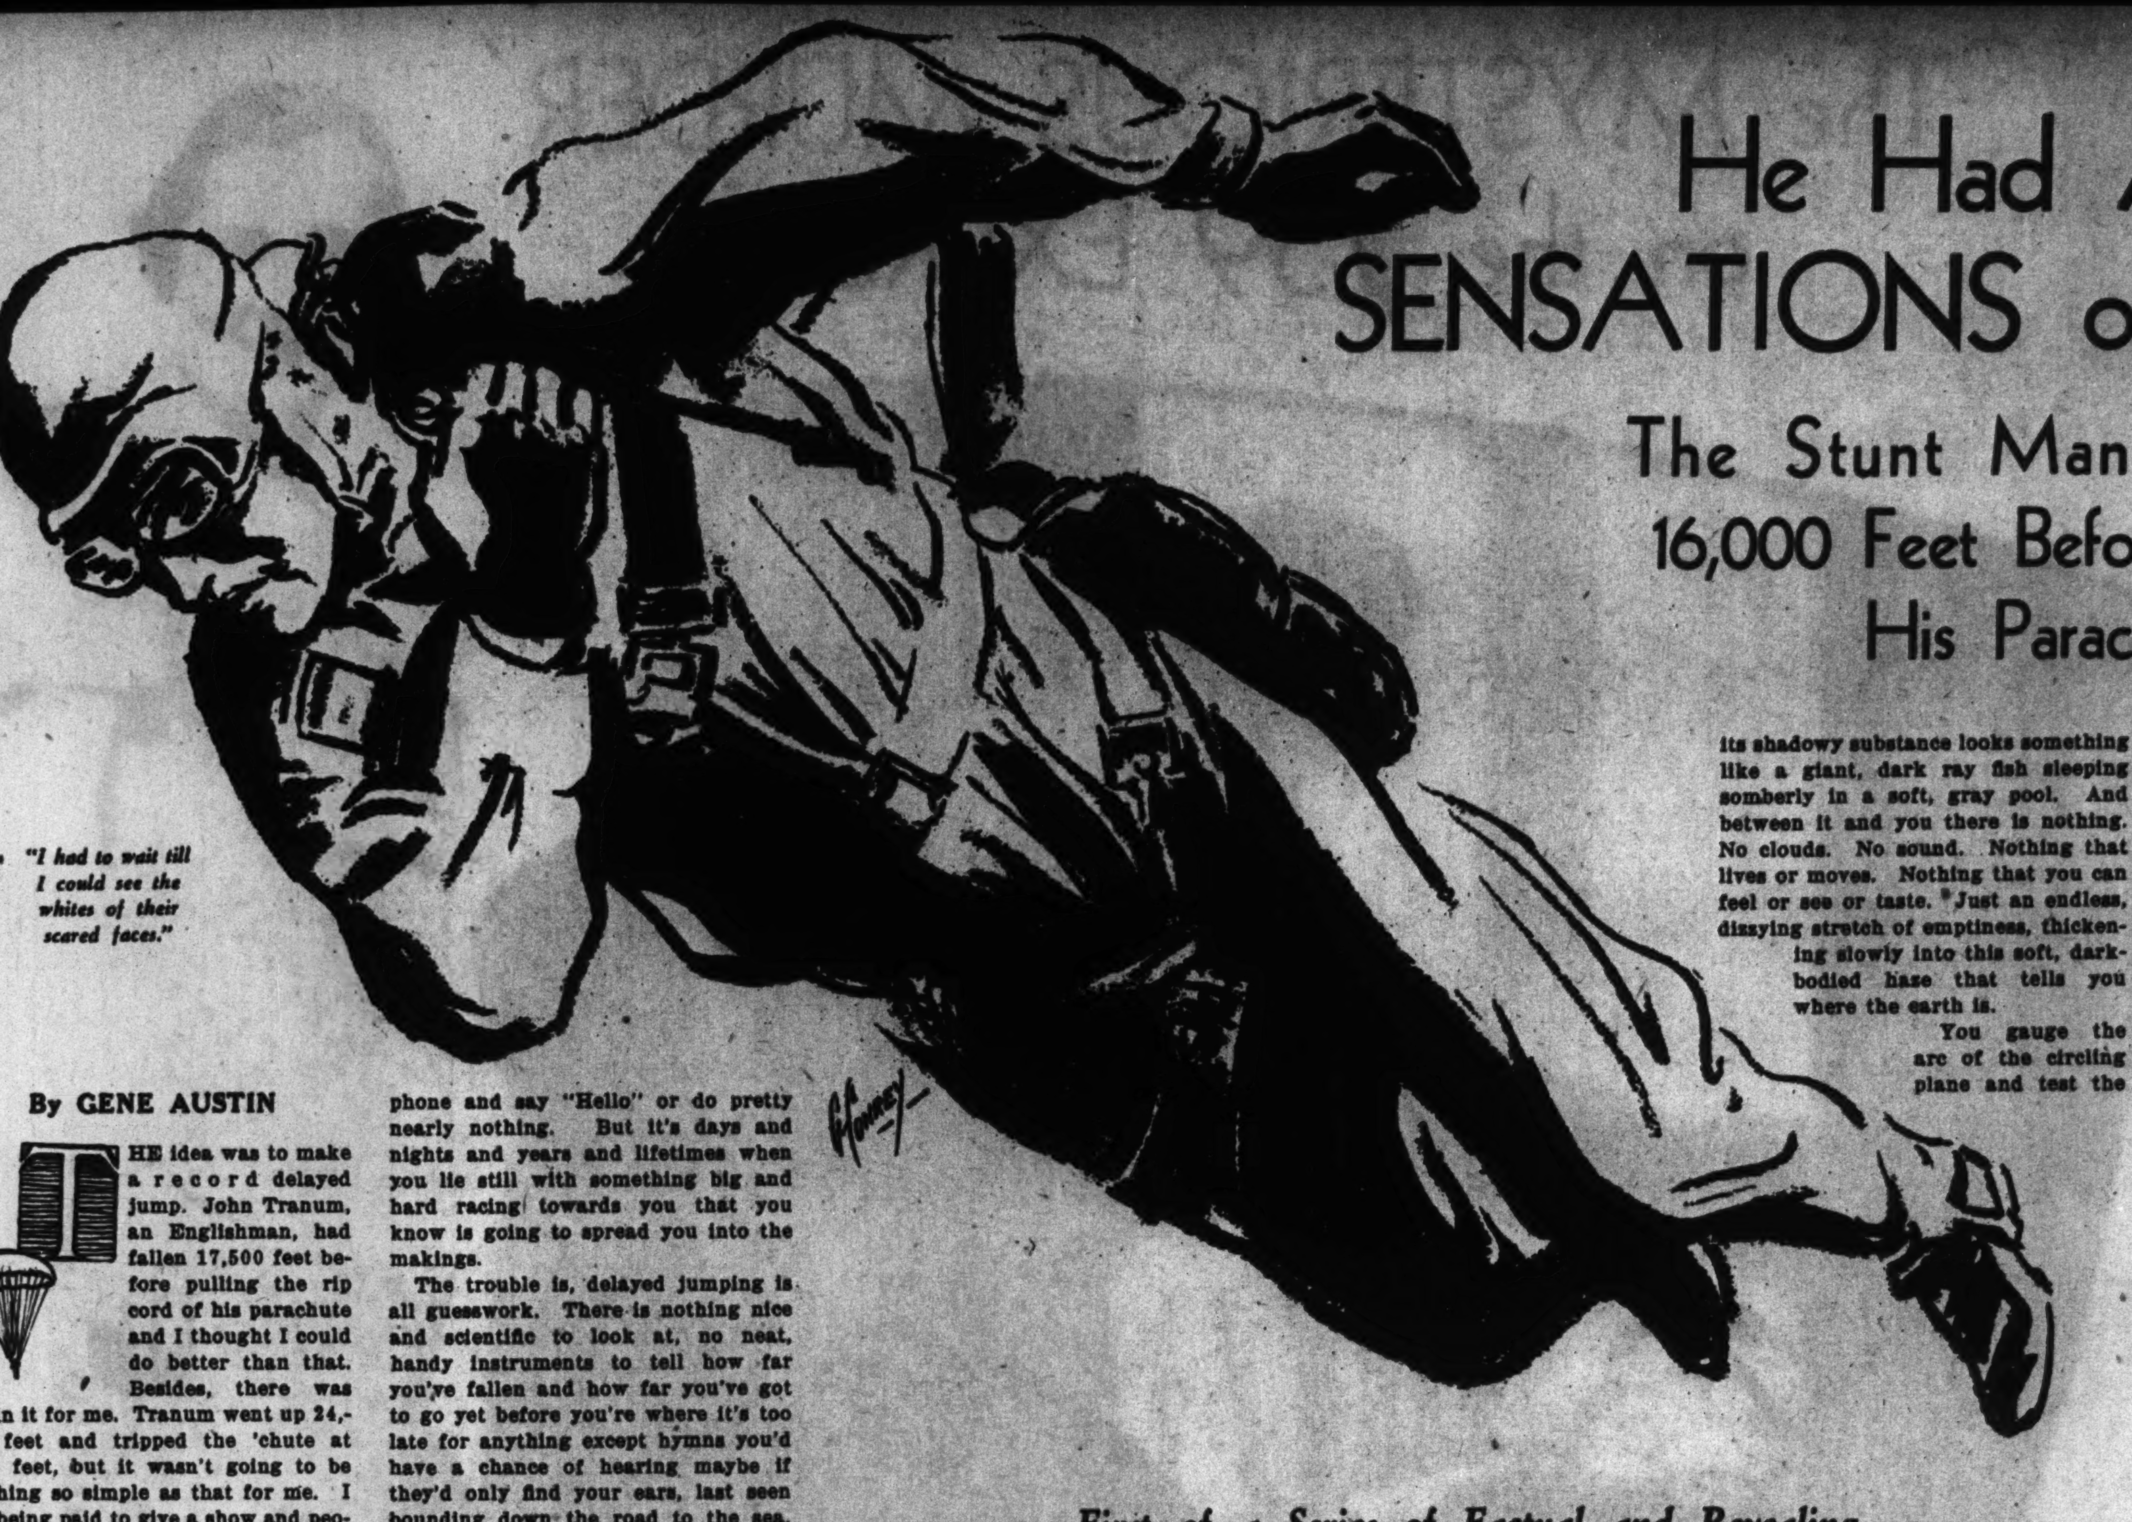
Abruptly, the examining magistrate intervened and broke off the interrogation.

"Hold him for further examination," he said quietly.

And so Marius Veyrac is in prison at Nice and Maitre Henri Torres is the lawyer that has been engaged to defend him.

He Had All the SENSATIONS of DYING

The Stunt Man Who Fell 16,000 Feet Before Releasing His Parachute



"I had to wait till I could see the whites of their scared faces."

First of a Series of Factual and Revealing Stories by a Well-Known Stunt Man.

By GENE AUSTIN

THE idea was to make a record delayed jump. John Tranum, an Englishman, had fallen 17,500 feet before pulling the rip cord of his parachute and I thought I could do better than that. Besides, there was $50 in it for me. Tranum went up 24,000 feet and tripped the 'chute at 6500 feet, but it wasn't going to be anything so simple as that for me. I was being paid to give a show and people standing on the ground, watching a man more than a mile away, yawn and say they might as well have read about it in the papers. So I had to wait until I got a lot closer to the grandstand seats. I had to wait till I could see the whites of their scared faces.

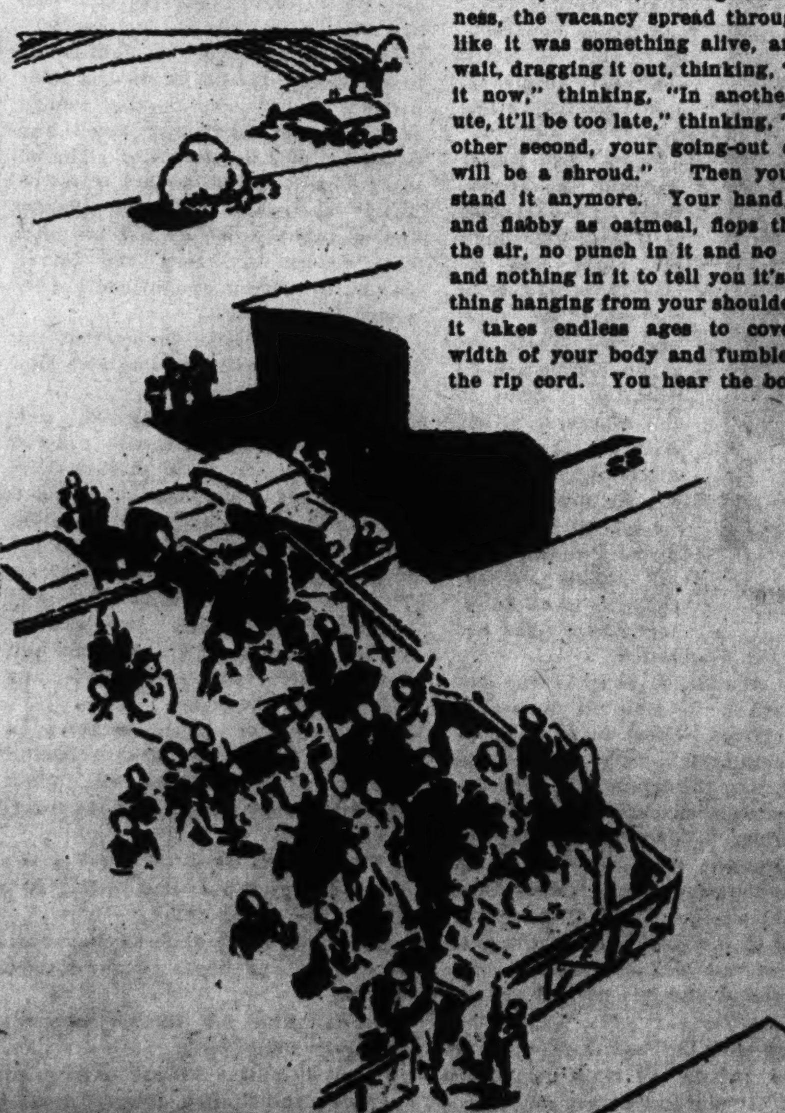
I stepped off the plane at 20,000 feet and pulled the cord when I thought I was 2000 feet above the airport. But I was really 4000 feet up, so I missed the record and felt a little bit uneasy when the boss handed me over my $50 as per contract. "Never mind," he said. "It's all right. You did okay. You had me breathing through my eyes for a while when you kept dropping and dropping like you were never going to stop short of six feet under." He patted my shoulder. He said he was glad not to have to take up a collection for the flowers for the funeral.

I had fallen 16,000 feet before tripping the 'chute and the ladies down on the ground who kept screaming and turning their heads away and fainting and growing green thought that was plenty entertainment for 50 cents, but it's a good long hesitation away from making me the A No. 1 fall guy of the world. As a matter of fact, it's exactly eight and one-half seconds away from the record because that's how long it takes to drop 1500 feet on a quiet day. Eight and one-half seconds: the time it takes to fish a handkerchief loose from the change and keys in your pocket or buy a ticket for the movies or pick up a telephone and say "Hello" or do pretty nearly nothing. But it's days and nights and years and lifetimes when you lie still with something big and hard racing towards you that you know is going to spread you into the makings.

The trouble is, delayed jumping is all guesswork. There is nothing nice and scientific to look at, no neat, handy instruments to tell how far you've fallen and how far you've got to go yet before you're where it's too late for anything except hymns you'd have a chance of hearing maybe if they'd only find your ears, last seen bounding down the road to the sea. You've got to think about giving your 'chute a chance to open and catch and hold on to the air. You've got to think about your first 'chute failing and giving yourself time to open the emergency. You've got to think about all the little things that might happen and take seconds to fight off and you've got to give yourself those seconds' leeway. And all you have to go by in estimating time is the ground growing bigger under your eyes and smacking up through the air towards you.

YOU start out with the airport looking as big as the nail on your thumb. By the time you look again it's as big as a half dollar. You blink your eyes a couple of times and it's as big as a folded handkerchief. You're traveling towards it at 120 miles an hour.

In a couple of minutes you say to yourself, "You're getting warm now," and then think you'll wait another minute before tripping the 'chute and wait. You lie there in the air easy as floating in a pool of soft, warm water and think if you wait another minute they'll be picking you up off the earth with a siphon and, wait, watching the airport and the ground and the people and the cars coming up towards you so fast you look for them to break into smoke at the edges and think, "You're close enough now; let her go," and, wait, hesitating, holding out for more. You feel that sick, swollen emptiness inside that you get when you think maybe you'll be dead before you know it and you wait, feeling the emptiness, the vacancy spread through you like it was something alive, and you wait, dragging it out, thinking, "I'll do it now," thinking, "In another minute, it'll be too late," thinking, "In another second, your going-out clothes will be a shroud." Then you can't stand it anymore. Your hand, loose and flabby as oatmeal, flops through the air, no punch in it and no nerves and nothing in it to tell you it's something hanging from your shoulder, and it takes endless ages to cover the width of your body and fumble loose the rip cord. You hear the boom of the 'chute, feel the abrupt twisting wrench against your shoulders, hold your breath for the agonized moments in which it takes to find out whether the bag is going to hold and then it's all over and the $50 is practically in your pocket waiting to be spent.



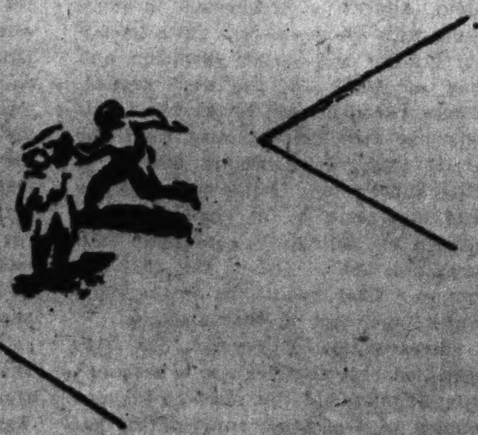
There are experienced fellows down on the ground who squint up at you and take a guess as to where you were when you gave up falling and that's where you were even if you were some place else. The 16,000-foot drop made me the American delayed jump champion. It's a record made with a lick and a prayer, a guess here and some rapid fire arithmetic there and nothing to back anything up except experience. The science fellows at the Bureau of Aeronautics won't recognize any such championship and even if they did, I found out later that it's something that ought to be kept a secret. The wife tells the neighbor, "My husband is a champion—the delayed jump champion of the North American continent," and the neighbor looks puzzled and says, "Huh?" as if the wife was sitting there blowing up a head wind.

"The first 1000 feet is terrific anti-climax. You lie in the air as in a pool of soft warm water."

WELL, parachute jumping is fun anyway. People get a kick out of it and I get a living out of it and tell the wife, "Take that handkerchief away from your eyes, honey. This is better than working."

They say that a parachute jumper is equal parts of craziness, foolishness and bladder brain. Maybe they're right, but I'll tell you one thing: If a parachute jumper was even a little bit as crazy as he looks, you'd have to look pretty deep down to find him after the first jump. He has to be careful. He has to keep a lot on his mind. He has to think out every step of the way in advance.

The work on this 16,000-foot delayed jump of mine began the evening before when I unpacked two 'chutes and repacked them with inch-by-inch care. I spread each out on a table 40 feet long. Then I checked the 24 separate shroud lines to make sure that none was twisted. A twist in a shroud line is likely to jam the 'chute out of shape when it opens. Then I went over the whole 'chute inch by inch to see that there were no holes or dampness in it. Wind rushing through a tiny hole is likely to blow a whole panel out. I had that happen once and when I looked up at the 'chute ballooning out over me and saw blue sky gaping large through it, I got gray hair and wrinkles and high blood pressure right away and said, "Never again." Dampness can be even more dangerous. Dry silk is resilient and when pressure is released it springs out like a colt going to town. Damp silk stays bunched and a bunched parachute is no more use to a fall guy than rheumatism to a dancer.



After that came the folding of the canopy of the 'chute. I accordion-plait them with a ruler, 12 inches to a fold, and the ticklish part is to see that no single fold overlaps another. One overlap may cause a shroud line to twist over the canopy and turn the whole 'chute inside out and shake you up so bad you'll never be able to get around to opening the emergency 'chute.

Give yourself about two hours for the packing job and you're ready to go. You put on your rubber-soled shoes, slipping in special ankle supports of bone-ribbed leather because when you land on your feet, you get a jar like when you drop off something that's 15 feet high. You slip powder puffs into the ear flaps of your helmet to relieve atmospheric pressure, put on goggles, step into the 'plane, wave good-by and say, "I'll be seeing you." And if you keep your head on your shoulders, you've got more chance than a jaywalker of really seeing them again.

On this day, the ceiling was limitless—blue clear into beyond—and we climbed in slow circles up, up and up, until the earth lay far below us, a dull, dark bulk under haze. At 20,000 feet there is no straight-cut horizon. The earth rounds off, slope-shouldered, and its shadowy substance looks something like a giant, dark ray fish sleeping somberly in a soft, gray pool. And between it and you there is nothing. No clouds. No sound. Nothing that lives or moves. Nothing that you can feel or see or taste. Just an endless, dizzying stretch of emptiness, thickening slowly into this soft, dark-bodied haze that tells you where the earth is.

You gauge the arc of the circling plane and test the drift of the wind and keep both fixed in your mind. Then, even when the landmarks have blurred into nothing, you know where to step off and where to let go to hit the dime-sized airport far below where people are waiting to see you land. When you do it long enough, you get so sensitive to the arcs of circling planes and can calculate wind drift to such a fine point, that knowing when to let go of the plane is practically like knowing that, to hit New York, you get off the railroad train at Pennsylvania station.

AT 20,000 feet the pilot gave me the nod and I put one foot over the side and squeezed out of the cockpit, letting myself down easily on the catwalk. I swung free from the plane at arm's length, waiting for the moment to come when we would be where the drift of wind would carry me to the airport. At arm's length so as not to cut the slip-stream from the propellor. If your body cuts the slip-stream, the plane's tail starts to whop around. It whops up and down and around and sideways, crazy as the gusts of wind that bowl down the great gutters of the prairie air lanes, and in minutes it would whop right off. I have known that to happen. I have known a green 'chute hopper, frightened into madness by the harsh erratic quivers that shuddered through the plane, lose his head and clutch with both hands to the cockpit. The pilot fought him off, hammering his face and head, but he couldn't break the man's grip and the tail broke off and that was the end for both of them. If you swing away at arm's length, that leaves room for the slip-stream pass between your body and the plane.

We were there now. I let go, making a flat dive between the wing tip and the tail. And here it is important that you take the right road because when you jump the suddenly lightened plane blows upward and veers wildly. The tail swings around and the wing tip and stabilizer cut a crazy arc and unless you jump diagonally, either might catch you and knock you for a stary-eyed loop and before you wake up you're where there's no hurry at all about doing it. That, too, has happened. That little mistake, too, has killed its many men.

When you jump, you keep your arms stretched out as in a swan dive and your hands cupped. When you're up that high and can't see the earth, the idea is to keep the wind on your face. Then you know you're headed in the right direction right side up. Cupped hands help. They furnish wind resistance—a surprising amount of it—and keep you from turning turtle too often.

THAT first 1000 feet is terrible anti-climax. You've worked yourself up to a pitch. You've gone against the natural grain of man to hold on to a visible, material support, you've overthrown an instinct that is billions of years old, that is as old as the smallest, crawling form of life. You've wrenched loose from it and stepped into space. And nothing happens. Your heart has started to beat again and the knots in your muscles slack out and you lay relaxed. The powder puffs in the ear flaps of your helmet cut out all sound. Science tells you you're dropping at the sizzling speed of two miles a minute, but you wouldn't know it unless you had read it somewhere. You fall as lightly, as softly, as easily as a flake of snow in a hush of air. There is nothing rushing by you to make you feel as if you're going fast, to make you feel as if you're doing anything but lying still, quiet in limitless, pressureless, fathomless soft cushions. The only sounds that come through the powder puffs are faint, staccato puffs, each like a distant whisk of steam. From the waist up, the harness of your 'chute and your helmet keep you bound tight, but the slack of your trouser legs flap out with the wind and you feel as if fingers are plucking at you, swift-shuttling fingers, gently insistent, more nag than pluck, more fumble than pull.

After about 1500 feet, you make your first somersault. The weight of your head and the parachute make you top heavy and the wind on your legs gradually, gently, softly turns you over. You hardly know it's happening. The earth swims away and out of sight. Your face suddenly flames hot as the wind swerves off it. You see theairplane that you stepped off so long ago and so high up immediately below you, off to the side, then vanishing abruptly as if snatched, and you see vast, endless emptiness, blue sky and then again the earth—large now, with buildings standing out as pin pricks and a river like a strip of gleaming wire and once more the cool, soft hammer of the wind thuds against your face, pushing back the hotness, easing the sting. It is a beautiful experience, a little wild, a little eerie.

In a long drop like this, you make 15 or 16 of these somersaults and each one takes its toll of your strength. Each one sucks out your energy and leaves you feeble, exhausted until at the end when you're ready to trip the 'chute, when you need most to keep your head through those moments of jolting, knotty-fisted excitement and tension, you're only a pasty, drained excuse for a living man.

The thing to remember is to come out of a fall when you are facing the earth and therefore horizontal. Eddie Wells, a parachute student, got excited once and forgot that little item and pulled the ring when he was upside down. He got such a terrific jerk when he was pulled right side up that his laced, high shoes were snapped

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

GENERAL EMIL KLEBER
ADMIRAL ARTHUR HEPBURN

Madrid's Chief International Defender

BACK of the Spanish Loyalists' stubborn defense of Northern Madrid against the persistent pounding of the Fascist forces looms the bulky figure of General Emil Kleber. One of the most picturesque figures to stand out in the civil war, General Kleber, who describes himself as a "professional revolutionary," carries a distinct international flavor. Born in Austria of French and German ancestry, he is a naturalized Canadian, and has fought in the armies of five countries.

It was as the leader of the colorful Eleventh International Brigade that he first distinguished himself in this war. The column, made up of anti-Fascists from many countries and comprising about one-tenth of the Madrid defense forces, hit the firing line in the University City sector northwest of the city November 9 a few days after the siege started, bore the brunt of the rebel thrust, and played a large part in preventing the fall of Madrid. For his brilliant work, General Kleber was named supreme commander of the northern sector of the capital three weeks later.

With high cheek bones, a broad nose, thick lips, bushy eyebrows, and a shock of gray hair, six feet tall, heavy set, and possessed of dynamic energy, the general has the physical characteristics of the ferocious warrior, but to the contrary is pleasant to the point of geniality, witty, straightforward and for a military man, decidedly informal. He wears no distinguishing uniform, often going about in such things as riding pants, golf stockings and sweaters. Only on formal occasions will he don a military coat and peaked hat. He smiles often. He was so careless of danger that his superiors declared that the spirit he succeeded in instilling in the Loyalist forces made his life "too precious" to risk that way, and they made him ride in a bullet proof automobile with an escort of armored cars.

Enthusiasm and courage are fine stuff in the fighting business, and Madrid's raw volunteer forces had them. But, as was shown at first in General Franco's steady successes in his march on Madrid, such qualities weren't enough by themselves to beat off smaller forces of seasoned professional troops. What the Loyalists sorely needed then were professional military leaders, with a thorough knowledge of war tactics, and capable of whipping their amateur forces into a tough, resilient line of cool and stubborn fighters. So Kleber, one of the foreign professionals to come to their aid, was made to order. He had seen lots of fighting in his 41 years. And he was a Communist, more than a man hired simply to do a job, one who believed thoroughly in the Popular Front cause.

His fighting days began in 1914 when he was drafted into the Austrian army, and became an officer. He was captured by the Russians and left Russia after the Bolshevik revolution. He says he escaped from a prison camp, but there may be something mysterious about the escape for he did not rejoin the Austrians, but made his way to Canada, where he became a Marxian propagandist.

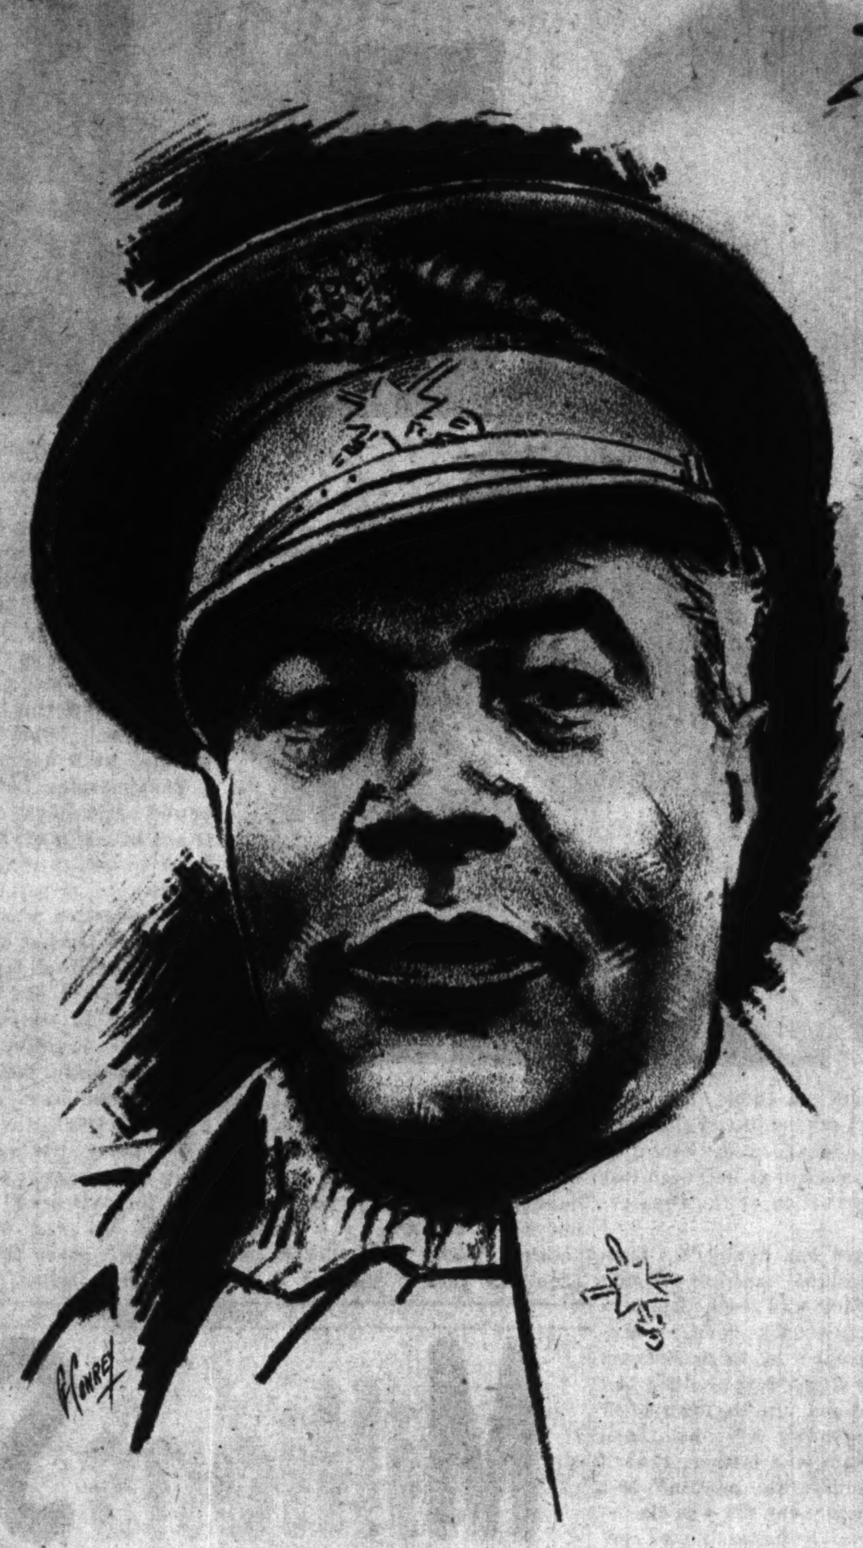
Becoming a naturalized Canadian citizen, he enlisted in the Canadian army in 1919 and, ironically enough, was sent to Siberia as part of the international expedition allied with the White Russians in fighting the Reds. But he deserted and soon bobbed up on the other side in his natural element, fighting with the Red Russians' forces that fashioned the Far Eastern Republic that became a part of the Soviet Union.

It was in the Red army that Kleber proved himself a born leader by welding regiments of green but hardy peasants into first-class fighting men. Then from the dim Siberian steppes his path led to Germany. As a Red agitator secrecy surrounded his activities, but he was reported working in Hamburg in 1927 in an unsuccessful effort to build up a Communist movement there.

ABOUT that time, Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, who had with the aid of Soviet money, munitions and propaganda, led his National People's Party's revolutionary army into a conquest of all China, broke with Moscow and began a ruthless extermination of Communists in as many provinces as he could. Communists set up a separate government at the southeastern province of Kiangsi. Chiang marched against them. There was again fighting to be done in behalf of the Red cause. So Kleber, naturally, turned up there.

He became a general in command of a Red army. Five times Chiang marched against the Red forces and five times was repulsed. Then the lean generalissimo surrounded the Reds with his so-called "ring of steel"—76 divisions, 1,200,000 troops. It appeared that Communist heads would soon fall like apples at picking time. But desperate as the situation was, strategy prevailed. The Communists slipped through the ring of steel and began what they call their "Heroic Trek," of 1934-1935.

Kleber commanded about half the Red forces, 56,000 men, armed only with rifles and having just 12 rounds of ammunition apiece. But taking his men on a retreat to Szechwan in West Central China that lasted eight months, Kleber showed how wiliness could prevail against overwhelmingly superior forces. Traveling in a huge arc for 3500 miles, Kleber always kept his will-o'-the-wisp divisions moving so fast that Chiang could never mass too large a force against them at one time and was able to beat off division after division of Chiang's crack troops whenever they caught up with the Red Army.



General Emil Kleber.

The Communist armies continued their "victorious flight" to their present stronghold in Northwest China, but Kleber left them at Szechwan. Many of the men who comprised his army are now fighting an allegedly Japanese-armed expedition in Northern China and still bear the stamp of Kleber soldiery.

KLEBER dropped out of sight for a while, then turned up again in Madrid, just as he probably will continue turning up at troubled spots throughout the world, if and when this present civil war is ended.

In interviews with newspaper correspondents, he has decribed Madrid as the Verdun of the civil war and predicted that Franco would break his strength against its stout defenses. Like most professional soldiers, he has a grim respect for the enemy, and credited the Moor regulars as good, courageous soldiers, but declared that the younger men Franco is using as replacements are merely cannon fodder. As does many a radical, he believes that some good persuasive propaganda used on the enemy is worth a lot of guns and declares that it is beginning to work on Franco's troops, causing dissatisfaction among them.

This war, he has declared, is the crisis for the rising tide of Fascism in Europe. If Fascism is defeated in Spain, he believes, there will be peace in Europe for some time, because it will rebuff Fascist hopes of expansion and conquest.

MYLES STANDISH.

The New Commander of the United States Navy

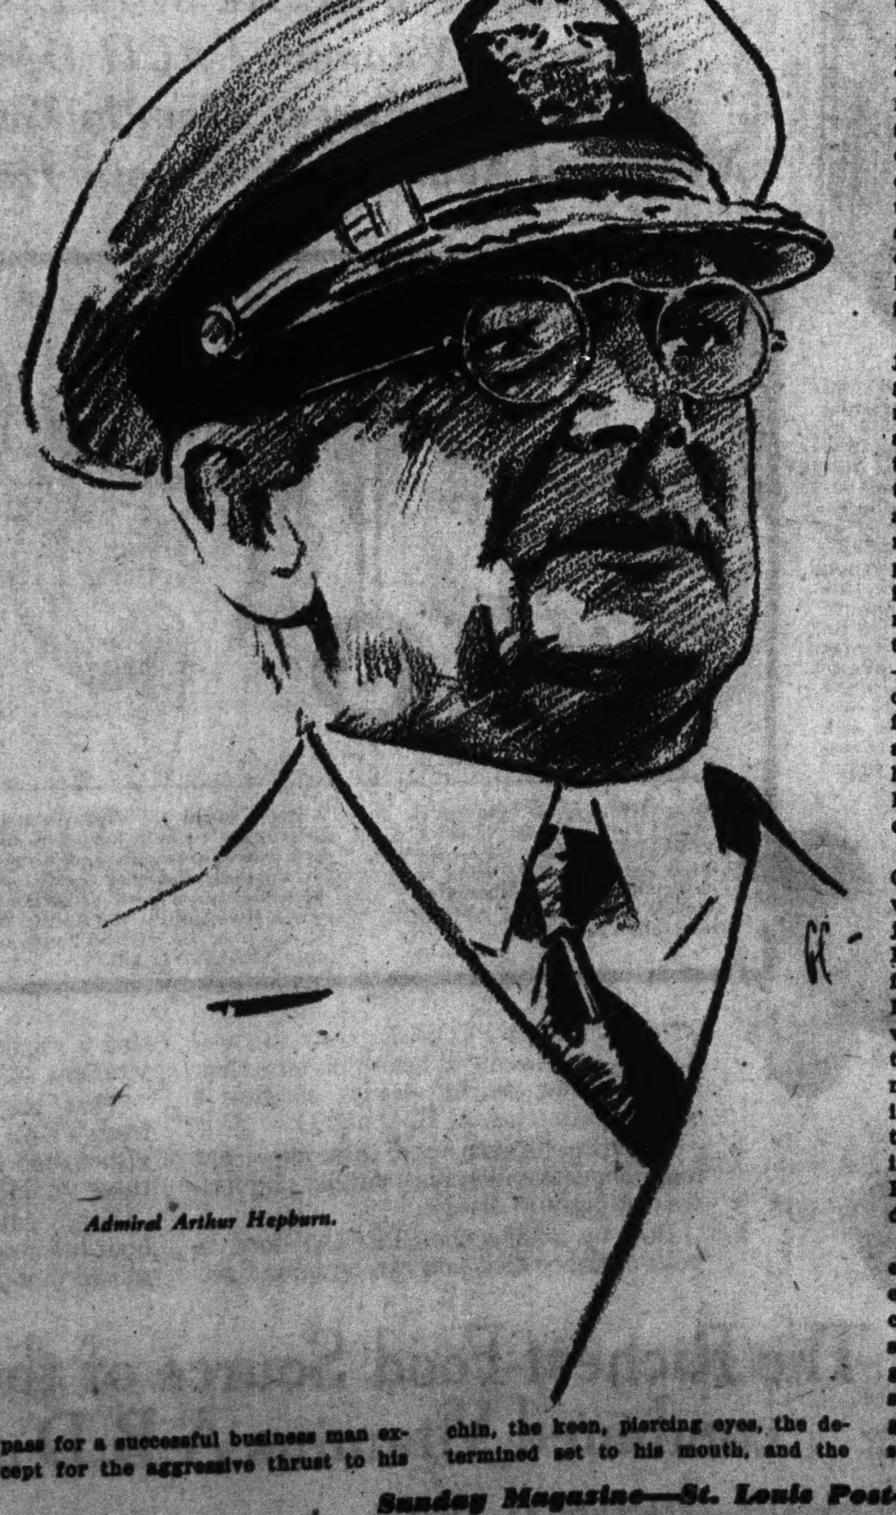
SAN PEDRO, California.

A MAN who is as much at home seated at an international conference table as he is standing on the flag bridge of a battleship is whipping the United States Navy into shape for the annual war games this spring. This veteran of two wars and three world conferences, Admiral Arthur (Jappy) Hepburn, enjoys the distinction in the fleet and in high quarters in Washington of being regarded as a sea dog who could steer his fleet through a second Jutland or a diplomat who could con his own way through the rocks and shoals of a controversy among frock-coated gentlemen, with equal deftness.

The new "CINCUS" (navy term for commander derived from the official title of Commander-in-Chief, United States Fleet) won an unofficial recognition as a strategist in the war games several years ago. In command of a blue division he swept down on the red (or enemy) fleet in a daring maneuver carried out partly at night and partly in fog. Had it been real war, the red fleet would have been badly routed. The admiral of the red fleet happened to be Hepburn's superior—the CINCUS. Junior officers laughed at "Jappy's Joker" for weeks and even a few sedate four-stripers smiled rather broadly. This year the lowest seaman second is expecting to go through "maneuvers what is maneuvers."

The new CINCUS, at 59, is rather young for the four-starred blue flag of an admiral which he hoisted to the main truck of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania last June 24. His face is scarcely wrinkled save for deep creases at the bridge of his nose and the crow's feet that almost every seaman acquires from years of scanning a distant horizon, peering through gun sights and "shooting the sun" through a sextant. His forehead is broader and higher than the average. Erect and square shouldered, he is slightly above average height. His one hundred and sixty or seventy pounds are evenly distributed.

In civilian clothes, Hepburn would pass for a successful business man except for the aggressive thrust to his chin, the keen, piercing eyes, the determined set to his mouth, and the crisp tone of command in his voice.



Admiral Arthur Hepburn.

There are none who question his ability as a commander and a strategist, but some junior officers have hinted that he is rather a martinet. This is largely because he is a stickler for discipline and somewhat stiff in his attitude toward junior officers. However, he is noted for his willingness to consider the views of juniors, though they may not agree with his. Self sufficient, he keeps to himself. On duty, he never jokes or indulges in light conversation when he has a few idle moments.

The admiral enjoys motoring and golfing, but is almost constantly absorbed in matters pertaining to the navy. Books and studies mean more to him than personalities. It is said that he has never made a picturesque remark—only sound ones. There are fewer legends and anecdotes about him than there have been about any of the men who came before him.

Born in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, on October 15, 1877, he entered the Naval Academy at 16 and was graduated just in time for the war with Spain. Hepburn was a midshipman on the famous old Iowa, whose skipper was Robley (Fighting Bob) Evans. There were weary days of blockade duty off the Cuban coast. Finally, at 9:31 a. m. on July 3, 1898, the signal "Enemy in Sight," fluttered from the bridge of the Iowa. Admiral Cervera was leading the Spanish fleet from Santiago Harbor for its vain, but courageous dash to sea.

For a time, the fleet concentrated its entire fire on the Iowa. Then, as other American ships came up, the Vizcaya paired off with the Iowa which smothered the armored cruiser with a good percentage of hits from the 1273 shells it fired during the two-hour engagement. In flames from stem to stern, the Vizcaya wallowed helplessly on a reef. The Spaniards that had survived had their choice between burning to death and jumping overboard to be beaten to death by the waves that dashed against the foundering hulk. The Iowa's boats were lowered and rescue crews saved many of the men they had been trying to kill. Hepburn, for the part he played in the rescues, was awarded a medal for specially meritorious service.

Soon after the war, Hepburn became an ensign and was assigned to the Albatross, an oceanic survey ship.

He spent three years under the guidance of Alexander Agassiz, the naturalist, in hydrographic, magnetic, biological and meterological study throughout the Pacific Ocean.

He had slowly advanced to commander when the United States entered the World War. After supervising conversion of an interned German liner to a transport, Hepburn was on submarine duty along the New England coast. In August, 1918, he was put in charge of the sub chaser and air craft base at Queenstown, Ireland. His work won him the Distinguished Service Medal.

As soon as the World War was over, Hepburn got his first taste of diplomacy, being sent to Germany in connection with execution of naval terms of the armistice. A few months later and he was in Constantinople as chief of staff to Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol. When the Turks swept Smyrna after massacring thousands of Armenians in 1922, the British troops withdrew and Captain Hepburn found it was up to him to care for the Armenian refugees and the foreigners who sought safety. He was commended for the success with which he performed his task.

While serving as Director of Naval Intelligence in 1925 and 1926, Hepburn was assigned as a naval member of the American representation of the Three-Power Conference for Limitation of Naval Armament at Geneva. In 1929 he went to London as naval adviser to the American representation at the naval conference there. When limitations again were discussed, in 1932 and 1933, at Geneva, Hepburn, now a rear admiral, returned as adviser for the American delegation. In 1935 he was promoted to vice-admiral and put in charge of the scouting force.

After returning in 1930 from the London naval parley, Hepburn attended the Williamstown Institute of Politics where he argued in favor of the United States joining the League of Nations.

"IT IS probably timidity that keeps the United States out of the League," he said, adding that there was sufficient sentiment in this country to overcome the "big bass drums" who "have really been timid and have kept the United States out of the League." The old argument against entangling alliances, he contended, had been preserved in American history until it had become an epithet and "Americans are prone to argue by epithet."

Well aware that the United States Navy is only an instrument of national policy, Hepburn opposes any statements from naval and military leaders on national policy. At the same time, he feels most decidedly that the citizenry should be kept acquainted with the fleet and its men.

The admiral is neither a radical believing the plane is making the battleship obsolete nor a conservative having no use at all for aviation.

"I appreciate the great value of naval and military aircraft," Hepburn said recently, "but it is foolish to assume that they can replace ships in the attack and defense of sea borne trade. That, in the final analysis, is the reason navies exist. The fighting navies may do with each other is merely a means to an end."

Unlike many other high ranking naval officers, the admiral believes the dirigible can be of use in the navy and wants to see the navy proceed with its development.

HOW a PSYCHOLOGIST UNCOVERED the COLLEGE FIREBUG

Dr. James Cleveland Stewart, dean of men and instructor in psychology at Ouachita College, Arkansas.

Ruins of the Conservatory at Ouachita College.

And a Popular Senior Went From the Class Room to a State Asylum.

By F. A. BEHYMER

ARKADELPHIA, Arkansas.

THE students of Ouachita College were drowsing away the mid-afternoon on a November Sunday. A cry of "fire" rang across the campus. The 400 students came tumbling from their rooms and saw smoke rising from the roof of the conservatory. The boys rushed into the building and found that the flames were in the rifle range of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps on the third floor. They carried out the equipment and before the city firemen arrived they were fighting the flames as best they could. One of them, John Tom Murphy of Eldorado, 20-year-old senior, who had occupied a room in the conservatory, fought with a sort of frenzy as the fire was reducing the building to a ruin. His leg was lacerated when he kicked in a door, but he paid no heed to his hurt.

Afterward, when incendiary fires were started in the main administration building and the boys' dormitory, some remembered John Tom Murphy's exaltation at the conservatory fire and thought of it as something strange.

On a January day John Tom Murphy sat facing Dr. James Cleveland Stewart, dean of men and teacher of psychology, for a test. He broke under it and confessed that he had started three of the fires, but stoutly denied that he started the one that destroyed the conservatory. So it may have been the conservatory fire, of accidental origin, that awakened in the boy a latent impulse which ruined his career on the eve of a brilliant graduation and sent him, under the cloud of an indictment, to a State asylum.

There was at least nothing in John Tom Murphy's background, aside from the shock of excitement at the conservatory fire, to account for the acts to which he confessed. Member of a prominent family, son of Dr. G. D. Murphy of Eldorado, he had transferred to Ouachita from another college and, nearing the end of three years' study which would entitle him to a degree, he was a high-ranking senior, approved by his professors and liked by his mates.

However the conservatory fire may have started, there was no suspicion of John Tom Murphy.

Then on December 9, another Sunday, there was another cry of fire. Smoke was pouring from the third floor of the administration building. By the time the city firemen arrived the flames had spread so rapidly that the building seemed doomed. The students dragged hose to the third floor and broke into the attic. Dr. J. R. Grant, the president, ordered them from the building, but the students overruled him. Dewey Blackwood of Pottsville, star football player, called from above: "We can see better up here than you can down there, Dr. Grant. Let us alone and we will save this building."

Dr. Grant let them alone and they saved the building, although there was damage to the extent of $40,000, as much as had been lost in the destruction of the conservatory.

The fire was found to have started in the janitor's supply closet, which was used also as a photographic dark room. Students reported to Dean Stewart that John Tom Murphy, who had taken a room out in town after the conservatory fire, had been seen crossing the campus toward the administration building half an hour before the fire was discovered there. Not that it was considered suspicious, but the fires were mysterious and there was a growing feeling that they might both have been incendiary. If so they were probably the acts of somebody in the college community. Under such circumstances suspicions might fall in unexpected places.

The following Thursday night there was a meeting of the ministerial association on the second floor of the administration building. Murphy had been a ministerial student, but had changed to another course. He, however, attended the meeting.

AFTER that he went across to the boys' dormitory, but returned to the administration building. A boy and two girls saw him. Then he went again to the boys' dormitory and entered a first floor room facing the administration building, where Weldon Higgins of Searcy and Thomas Mann of Judsonia were studying, and sat at the window, watching. In about 10 minutes he said to the other students: "Well, boys, main is on fire again." They jumped to the window and saw what he had seen, a glare through the basement windows.

At about the same time James Ramey, sweeping the library, saw smoke and gave the alarm. The fire was extinguished before the firemen arrived. It was found to have started in a banana crate filled with waste paper, which had then been pushed against a wooden partition where books and other supplies were stacked.

Two or three days later Murphy moved back into the boys' dormitory, sharing a room with three other boys. By that time the students had become jittery and some had moved to rooms in town. Students were set to watch Murphy day and night. His roommates, Edwin Holt, Keith Hester and Blakely, were told not to pay any attention to the watchers. The following Monday night Murphy was very restless and kept suggesting that the other boys go to bed. When they did at last retire and lights were out in their room a boy who had been watching from a room across the hall fell asleep.

Harold Crowder of Gurdon, coming into the building at 2 a. m., found rolls of paper burning in the bathroom, with a board so placed as to shoot the flames against a wooden partition. He put out the fire and awakened Dean Stewart, who occupies an apartment in the building, and told him. The dean summoned Taylor, the night watchman. Taylor said that for more than an hour he had been smelling smoke, but could not trace it. Making another search he turned his flashlight into a disused dumb waiter and found embers of a fire that had burned out and near by a kerosene can.

Dan Stewart and the watchman went to Murphy's room. The other three boys had not awakened, but when the flashlight was turned on Murphy he sat up and asked: "Who is there?" The dean and watchman withdrew without answering or disclosing themselves. The room was watched until daylight.

That morning Dean Stewart renewed a request to President Grant he had made before, that he be permitted to subject John Tom Murphy to a psychological test, and permission was given. Dean Stewart, a teacher of 21 years' experience and a former superintendent of schools, had long been interested in tests of super and abnormal psychology, and had made successful tests. One at England, Arkansas, when he was superintendent there, had been particularly striking. A room had been broken into and the proceeds of a football game had been stolen. A boy who was under suspicion was given the test, but did not betray guilt. Another boy, under the test, betrayed his guilt and confessed and restored the money.

In preparation of the test for Murphy, Dean Stewart had spent from 2 a. m. to daylight in preparing a list of several hundred ordinary words, with trip words interspersed.

Murphy was called from a midterm English test to Dean Stewart's office. He protested that he had to finish his English test. "Never mind," said the dean, "I will give you an English test."

HE SEATED Murphy facing him as he sat with his list of words, holding a piece of cardboard so that Murphy could not see his markings. He said to Murphy: "You will now be given a list of words. When a word is spoken you must answer as quickly as you can with the first word you can think of."

The dean started off with easy ones and Murphy answered quickly. "Cat," spoke the dean, and "dog" answered Murphy. "Man," spoke the dean, and "woman" answered Murphy, giving the answers in one second in each instance, as timed by Dean Stewart behind the cardboard.

"House," spoke the dean. Tick, tick, tick, went the seconds. Six seconds before Murphy answered. Then he said "home."

"Car," spoke the dean, and "Ford" answered Murphy with a grin.

"Home," and in two seconds, as the grin faded, Murphy said "Mother."

"Basement," snapped the dean, watching Murphy closely. It took the boy six seconds to answer.

"Jail," said the dean, and Murphy gave a start and it was seven seconds before he answered. He answered to "gasoline" in one second, but he hesitated three seconds over "match," and the same time over "smoke." For "window" he needed four seconds, for "fire" three seconds, "bath," four; "air shaft," 10; "can," seven; "main building," four; "crazy," three; "dormitory," three; "closet," five; "dean," four; "upstairs," four; "attic," three; "room," six.

"Match," repeated Dean Stewart, and this time it took Murphy seven seconds to answer, though the word he gave each time was the same, "strike."

"Revenge," said Dean Stewart, and although he did not speak it as a question, Murphy shook his head slowly and took five seconds to answer.

"Spite," said the dean and again Murphy shook his head and took six seconds to answer.

"That is all," said the dean.

"Mister," said Murphy, "what

Too Little Vitamin G Means Poor Growth

Weak, thin, irritable children are often found to be poorly supplied with Vitamin G—the GROWTH VITAMIN. Every child needs a generous supply of this vitamin regularly to assure proper development of body tissues and lay a foundation for good health. Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in Vitamin G. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes a day.

clear off his feet. Both of them. They found one about half a mile from the airport and they never did find the other.

And there is another little item worth bearing in mind. You've got to pull the ring 'way out, just as far as it will go. Bill Gerhardt, my brother-in-law, forgot about that once. He took a furtive little pick at the rip cord and pulled only the slack and thought the parachute had opened and kept on dropping. I thought sure he was going to land dead, but he kept his head and realized the earth was coming up a little fast and took another yank on the rip cord and came out of it all right.

AND finally you have to brace yourself for the sudden stop you make when the parachute bellies out into the air and cuts you down in no time from 120 miles an hour to 10 miles an hour. If you're not set, you're likely to roll right up in the shroud lines. That happened to Roy Stillman and before he could fight loose of the tangle of knots and silken chains he was dead.

But you remember to do all these things and it works out fine. A short, easy jerk on the shoulders and you are dangling in air, safe as on a porch. For the landing, you keep your mouth closed and breath through your teeth to keep yourself from biting through your tongue when you jar down to earth. And when you land, you dig your heels into the earth to give yourself a purchase so that the 'chute shouldn't haul you bumping and scratching over the earth, over rocks and brush and gravel and into some very hard fence.

Then you pack up and go home and tell your wife she's got to stretch the $50 until next Sunday and your next stunt.

is that test for? Does it show that I am crazy?"

"Not about anything except fires. The purpose is to find out what you know about those fires."

Murphy sprang up. "Do you mean to accuse me of setting those fires?"

"I am not accusing you, John Tom, but you have accused yourself."

"Well, do you think that I did it?"

"At least 140 of the 150 boys in the dormitory think that you did."

"I'll hold up my hand and swear that I know nothing about it."

"Well, the evidence is strongly against you and you'll have a hard time making a jury believe that you didn't know anything about it."

"I'm tired of being accused of this and I'm going to call my daddy and have him come up here and straighten this out."

Administration Building at Ouachita College

DEAN STEWART called in President Grant and Dr. A. M. Witherington, dean of the college, to witness and tabulate the test in Murphy's presence. When it was finished Dean Stewart showed it to him and said: "John Tom, how would that look to a jury?"

"It would look bad, but I didn't do it."

He was reminded of his movements during the fires. He considered that and then asked: "What would happen to me if I admitted setting the last three fires?"

Dr. Witherington said: "It is up to you, John Tom. We have laid our cards on the table. It is now your play. What are you going to do?"

"Well, I set the last three fires. The one in the basement Thursday night. Then last night I went down and got a bottle of coal oil at a filling station and poured it on some stuff in the shaft and set it on fire. It got to burning so fiercely that I got scared and put it out with a wet towel that I had by the side of my bed, because I had a headache. I went to bed, but later I got up and built a fire in the bathroom by piling rolls of paper behind the wall board."

He was questioned about the other fires, but continued to deny that he had set them. He was told that he would have to leave the school immediately, but advised to call his father and say that he was coming home. His father could not be reached, but he talked to his mother and told her he was coming home for the mid-term, but he did not tell her that he was in trouble. He was taken to the train by one of the college officials. Later his father was called by Professor Thomas Jones and told that his son was in a little trouble and was on his way home and was requested to notify the college if the boy failed to arrive at home. Toward evening Dr. Murphy called back and said the boy had reached home.

The town authorities learned of the case of John Tom Murphy and a warrant was issued. He was not brought back, but bond of $5000 was given by his father at Eldorado. Steps were also taken at Eldorado to save the boy from facing prosecution here. An inquiry into his mental condition was instituted before the County Judge of Union County. Two physicians testified and he was ordered committed to the State Asylum at Little Rock. Prosecuting Attorney J. H. Lookadoo, in order that the court here might retain jurisdiction, brought the case to the attention of the grand jury. An indictment charging arson was returned and a bench warrant was issued, but with the understanding that if assurances were given by the superintendent of the hospital that the boy was not mentally responsible, he would be permitted to remain there, to be turned over, however, to the Sheriff of this county in case he is in the future discharged from the institution.

AMONG the students of Ouachita College, when they learned that John Tom Murphy had confessed, there was a wave of strong feeling against him, for he had jeopardized their lives, but it subsided and sorrow took its place, for they had liked John Tom and they were ready to believe that it had been the excitement of the conservatory fire that had unsettled him and stirred impulses he was unable to control.

In Eldorado the father and mother who were looking forward to their boy's graduation have nothing to look forward to now.

TAME DRAGON

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Aha! Bet you never had a pet dragon before! Did you? Well here's one for your that will actually huff and puff and breathe fire. He's not as mean as he looks either—he just can't help snorting with rage when he thinks of those horrid fairy tale dragons. Just follow directions carefully and you'll have a nice gentle dragon for a pet. DIRECTIONS—Mount all parts upon thin cardboard, except the tail, cut out the parts and fold on dotted lines. Punch out the nostrils and the black spot "A." Paste up (stars indicate paste) the dragon's body first—then add the tail as shown in diagram at lower left corner. Now paste the starred section between the wings to white area, left for it, on dragon's back. Paste the horns into position (see diagram), then paste on the legs. Be sure to paste B to B, C to C, D to D and E to E. Curl the dragon's tail and insert notch "F" into notch "G."

Have a grown-up blow smoke into the dragon through hole in bottom. To make the dragon "breathe fire" cover bottom hole with a finger while you squeeze the sides—you can make him huff and puff and blow the smoke out.

THE SUMMONS

THE CHARACTERS

HIPPERTY HOP—An unhappy little frog.
WILLIE WEB-FOOT—Hipperty's duck companion.
COMMODORE SHELL-BACK—One of King Neptune's subjects.

Poor Hipperty Hop. There never was a more disappointed little frog than he. For weeks he had listened to his friend, Willie Web-Foot, tell about the wonderful southland, as the duck lay sick in bed. Then as Willie grew stronger, under the careful nursing of Hipperty, he invited Hipperty to accompany him when he flew South again. And the poor little frog just couldn't say no. So South he went, riding on his friend's strong back. But, alas, when they arrived in the South Willie landed in the ocean and Hipperty got his mouth full of salt water. It was the first time he had ever tasted anything so awful. And we see him telling Willie about it as

THE PLAY BEGINS

HIPPERTY HOP—I'll get sick if I drink this awful water.

WILLIE WEB-FOOT—Don't be so impatient. We'll find some fresh water around her, somewhere.

COMMODORE SHELL-BACK—(listening)—Ah, ha—so they don't like our ocean. Sh-h-h—they speak again.

HIPPERTY HOP—Well, we better find it soon or I'll die of thirst. (He sees the Commodore)—L-L-Look Willie, w-who's t-t-that? (Willie whirls around just as Commodore Shell-Back starts to speak.)

COMMODORE SHELL-BACK—(raising his hand)—Quiet, everyone!!! Hear ye, the words of King Neptune. (He unrolls a piece of paper and starts to read.) You, Willie Web-Foot, and you, Hipperty Hop, dared to cross the Equator without paying homage to my court. And, I do hereby order you two before me to explain. (The Commodore rolls up the paper.) I shall have to prepare you for the journey. Stand still—hunkus—plunkus—you are now seaworthy. Follow me! (Hipperty and Willie follow the Commoder down into the ocean. And soon only three little ripples remain to show where they disappeared.)

Then back to New York and an appearance with Osgood Perkins and Dorothy Gish in "Foreign Affairs." Returning to Hollywood, she signed a contract with Columbia pictures. She began to score heavily. "The desert had us worried—but not the Lincoln-Zephyr!"

ALL ROADS are good roads to this new kind of car. Hills flatten out . . . bumps melt down . . . rough places become smooth as the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR glides over the miles. Its performance under all circumstances of time, distance and weather is new and stimulating.

Consider what the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR offers that other cars in the price class do not. It has a V-12 cylinder engine. Lincoln builds it. Twelve cylinders mean great smoothness, great flexibility. Twelve cylinders, here, mean 14 to 18 miles to the gallon!

The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR has a unique body structure. This is the only car of its kind. Body and frame are one, welded together. You ride surrounded by steel. You ride closer to the road, and thus, are safer.

This is a big car. The wheelbase is 122 inches, the springbase 133 inches. Interiors are wide, roomy. Three sit in front without touching. The car is amazingly easy to steer, alert in a crisis. Brakes are extra powerful. Appointments look the part.

"I have had many fine cars," writes an owner, "but the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR marks a new era in comfortable transportation at low cost." See, today, how true that is . . . in traffic, on the open road! Lincoln Motor Company, builders of Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars.

GEORGE BUNGLE! SUCH LOW LANGUAGE. WHAT..?
THESE NEIGHBORS. HANDING ME THIS VALENTINE.
OH GEORGE, WHY GET SO EXCITED EVERY YEAR OVER SUCH SILLY..?
SILLY? LOOK AT IT. LOOK.
I WON'T PAY
DEADBEAT
You're quick to ask credit,
But very slow pay.
Collectors pursue you
By night and by day.
You owe everybody—
Call honesty "bunk."
And even if handcuffed
Would rob your own trunk.
FINE STUFF, EH? I KNOW WHO SENT IT. I'LL FIND OUT.
UGH! HOW UTTERLY DIPPY. AND FUNNY.
FUNNY? CALLING ME NAMES? INSULTING ME?
IT'S...SO.. TEE HEE HEE!

IT'S SO... OH HA HA HA!
LISTEN...
TEE HEE! IT'S SO... OH YOU GOT TWO OF THEM.
YES...NO, THIS ONE IS ADDRESSED TO YOU.
REALLY? OPEN IT UP. LET ME SEE..?
SNOOPER
You sneak through hallways
And up and down stairs;
Devoting your life
To others' affairs.
You're busily peeking
From the morn until night.
You see all but the fact
That your house is a sight.
SUCH LOW BUSINESS. ME. ME, A SNOOPER. IMAGINE.
AND I'M SUPPOSED TO BE A DEADBEAT.
OH I'D GIVE ANYTHING TO KNOW WHO SENT THIS... I DO. POSITIVELY. IT'S ONE OF THREE WOMEN IN THIS HOUSE.
AND I'M PRACTICALLY POSITIVE I KNOW WHO INSULTED ME, TOO. POSITIVE.
NOW YOU KNOW HOW I FELT WHEN I SAW THAT..
OH WHY JUST TALK? PUT ON YOUR HAT AND COAT.
VALENTINES? YES, WE HAVE SOME VERY VERY PRETTY..
WE WANT COMICS. TOUGH ONES.

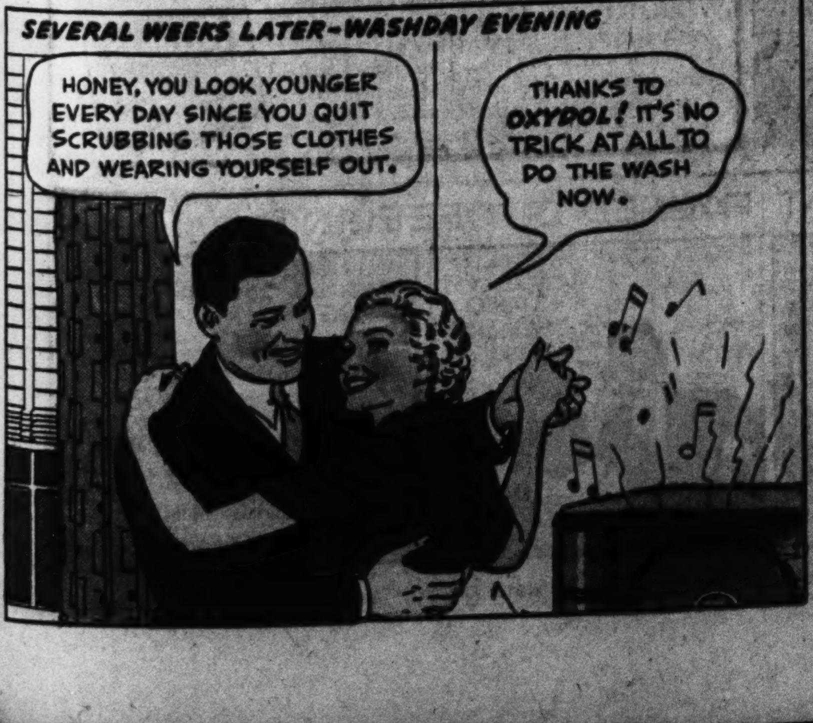
GRETA AND THE GHOST
I'VE COME TO WARN YOU, GRETA.
I WAS A WOMAN LIKE YOURSELF. I USED TO SCRUB CLOTHES TILL I THOUGHT MY BACK WOULD BREAK--AND WHAT THANKS DID I GET!
BELIEVE ME, A WOMAN'S LIFE IS ALL TOO SHORT--YOU'LL WEAR YOURSELF OUT--LOOK LIKE A WRECK--LOSE YOUR CHARM! AND AFTER THAT...
WHY GRETA, YOU LOOK PALE AS A GHOST!
I CAN'T STAND IT--THESE BIG WASHES ARE MAKING A WRECK OF ME.
SILLY! DON'T YOU KNOW THERE'S A WONDERFUL NEW "NO-SCRUB" SOAP CALLED OXYDOL?
10 MINUTES LATER
I CAN'T USE THOSE "NO-SCRUB" GRANULATED SOAPS--I TRIED ONE ONCE AND IT ALMOST RUINED MY HANDS.
BUT OXYDOL'S A NEW KIND THE IVORY SOAP PEOPLE MAKE. IT'S SAFE AS CAN BE--YET IT SOAKS OUT DIRT IN 15 MINUTES.
AND YOU SAY IT GETS CLOTHES 4 TO 5 SHADES WHITER, TOO?
ABSOLUTELY! AND IT WON'T FADE ANY WASHABLE COLOR--OR HURT YOUR HANDS.
MY WIFE SAYS IT'S ALMOST A MIRACLE HOW SUCH A SAFE SOAP CAN SOAK OUT DIRT SO FAST.
LATER
LOOK! THESE PILLOW SLIPS ARE LOVELY WHITE--AND ONLY 15 MINUTES' SOAKING.
I USE OXYDOL IN MY WASHER--AND IT ALMOST CUTS WASHING TIME IN HALF--IT WORKS SO FAST.



SEVERAL WEEKS LATER-WASHDAY EVENING
HONEY, YOU LOOK YOUNGER EVERY DAY SINCE YOU QUIT SCRUBBING THOSE CLOTHES AND WEARING YOURSELF OUT.
THANKS TO OXYDOL! IT'S NO TRICK AT ALL TO DO THE WASH NOW.

IT'S TRUE! AT LAST A "NO-SCRUB" SOAP

That's Safe as Can Be for Colors, Hands!

Developed at the cost of $1,000,000 by the makers of gentle Ivory Soap

● It's here! A new type laundry soap that soaks out dirt in 15 minutes . . . gets white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter . . . yet safe for colors and hands! OXYDOL was developed by the Ivory soap people, at the cost of $1,000,000! It brings you at last, a "no-scrub, no-boil" soap that leaves your hands soft and white, that will not fade any washable color!

Combining speed and safety in a way no single soap has done before, OXYDOL does these 4 amazing things:

(1) Soaks out dirt in 15 minutes . . . no scrubbing, no boiling. Even the "tough" spots come snowy with a gentle rub between the fingers. (2) Gets white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter, proved by scientific Tintometer tests. (3) Cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine. (4) Yet so safe that even sheer cotton prints, washed 100 consecutive times in OXYDOL suds, showed no perceptible sign of fading.

The news of OXYDOL is spreading like wildfire! Women in all parts of the country are discarding former favorites and adopting it. To save time and drudgery on washday . . . to protect their hands from the ravages of harsh soaps!

OXYDOL is more economical, too. Tests show that it will go one-third to one-half again as far as even the latest soap chips on the market. One package often gives twice the suds—does twice the work—lasts twice as long as less modern soaps. Get OXYDOL from your dealer today.

"My Hands Are Softer and Whiter Than Ever"

I started using OXYDOL, and it does everything you promised it would do. I have a number of very dirty pieces of washing, and when I say dirty, I mean dirty. I really could not believe my eyes when I soaked these dirty pieces, and found out the dirt just seemed to lift out of them. It used to be a case of boiling, rubbing, and rubbing to get clothes clean. But now I soak them only 15 minutes in OXYDOL suds, and they wash white as snow with practically no effort at all.

But the remarkable part about OXYDOL, to me, is that in spite of how fast it works, it's so safe. My hands are softer and whiter than ever, and I have been using OXYDOL for weeks. And all of my colored things wash so fresh and bright, it's really amazing.

MOTHERS THRILLED AS DELICIOUS TONIC IN FOOD FORM HELPS BUILD-UP CHILDREN

MODERN, intelligent mothers know that when children are too active they often burn up too much of important food essentials—frequently not leaving enough for sturdy growth and development. They know that unless their youngsters' diets are fortified with extra nourishment they may not fill out as they should—may not have sturdy bodies. So thousands of mothers give their children Cocomalt.

Why not help safeguard your child with the "Vital Reserve" of Iron, Calcium, Phosphorus, Vitamin D, Carbohydrates and Proteins supplied by Cocomalt? Help your child grow sturdy. Cocomalt comes in ½-lb., 1 lb. purity-sealed cans—also in the economical 5 lb. hospital size. Delicious served either hot or cold. At grocery, drug and department stores.

THEN HIS DOCTOR TOLD HIM -
"TO HELP GUARD AGAINST "NERVES" AND FATIGUE YOU SHOULD BUILD UP YOUR VITAL RESERVE. TO DO THAT AN ADEQUATE SUPPLY OF CALCIUM, PHOSPHORUS, IRON, AND CARBOHYDRATES IS NEEDED
COCOMALT WAS RECOMMENDED
- AND GONE IS THAT WORN-OUT TIRED FEELING

YOU NEED VITAL RESERVE TO KEEP GOING

Why do busy, hard-working people often feel nervous, worn-out, "on edge"? The answer frequently is that they burn up the food they eat in double-quick time!

To help avoid this, drink Cocomalt. It supplies a "vital reserve" of six food essentials which help to restore and maintain strength.

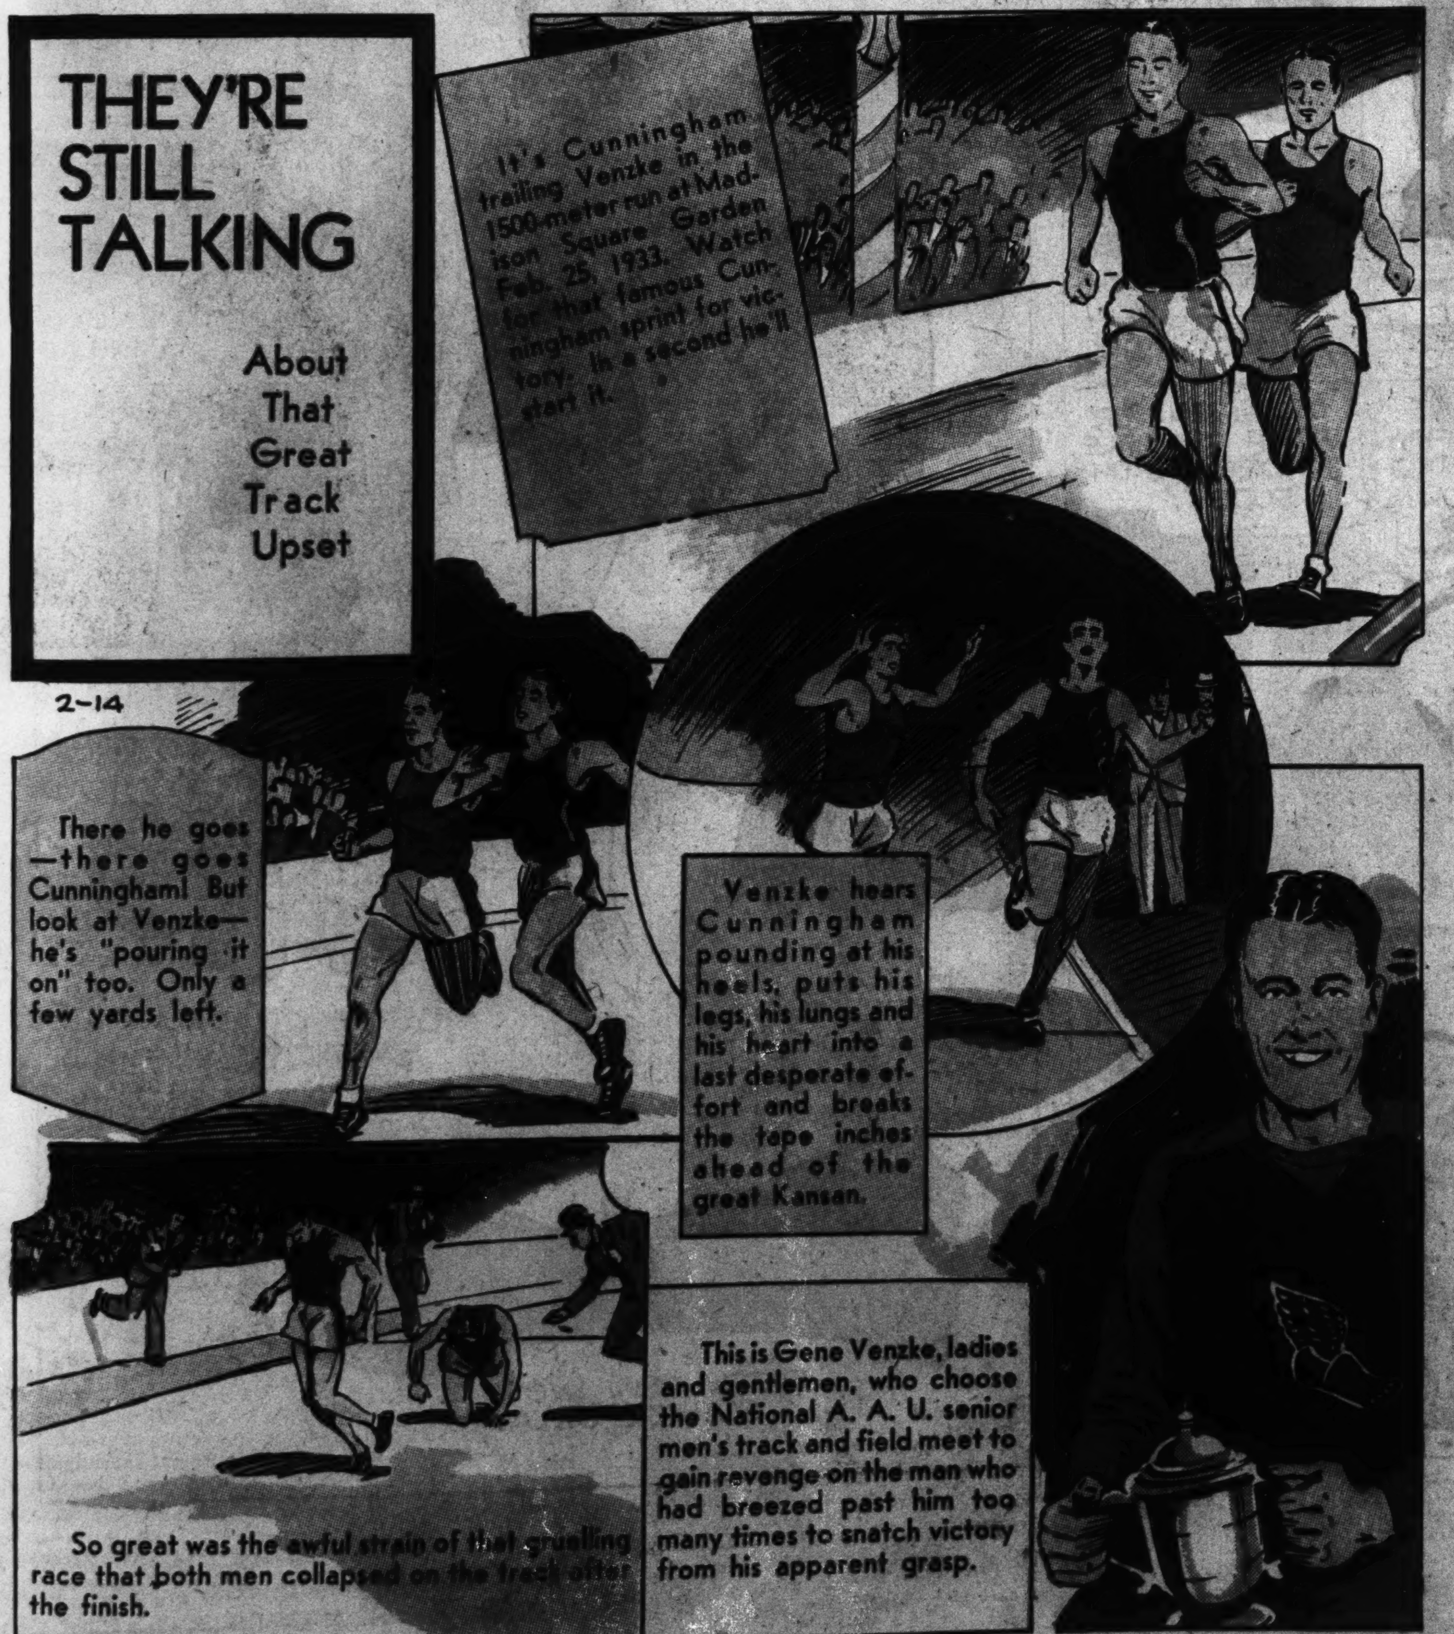
About That Great Track Upset



It's Cunningham trailing Venzke in the 1500-meter run at Madison Square Garden Feb. 25, 1933. Watch for that famous Cunningham sprint for victory. In a second he'll start it.

There he goes—there goes Cunningham! But look at Venzke—he's "pouring it on" too. Only a few yards left.

Venzke hears Cunningham pounding at his heels, puts his legs, his lungs and his heart into a last desperate effort and breaks the tape inches ahead of the great Kansan.

So great was the awful strain of that gruelling race that both men collapsed on the track after the finish.

This is Gene Venzke, ladies and gentlemen, who choose the National A. A. U. senior men's track and field meet to gain revenge on the man who had breezed past him too many times to snatch victory from his apparent grasp.

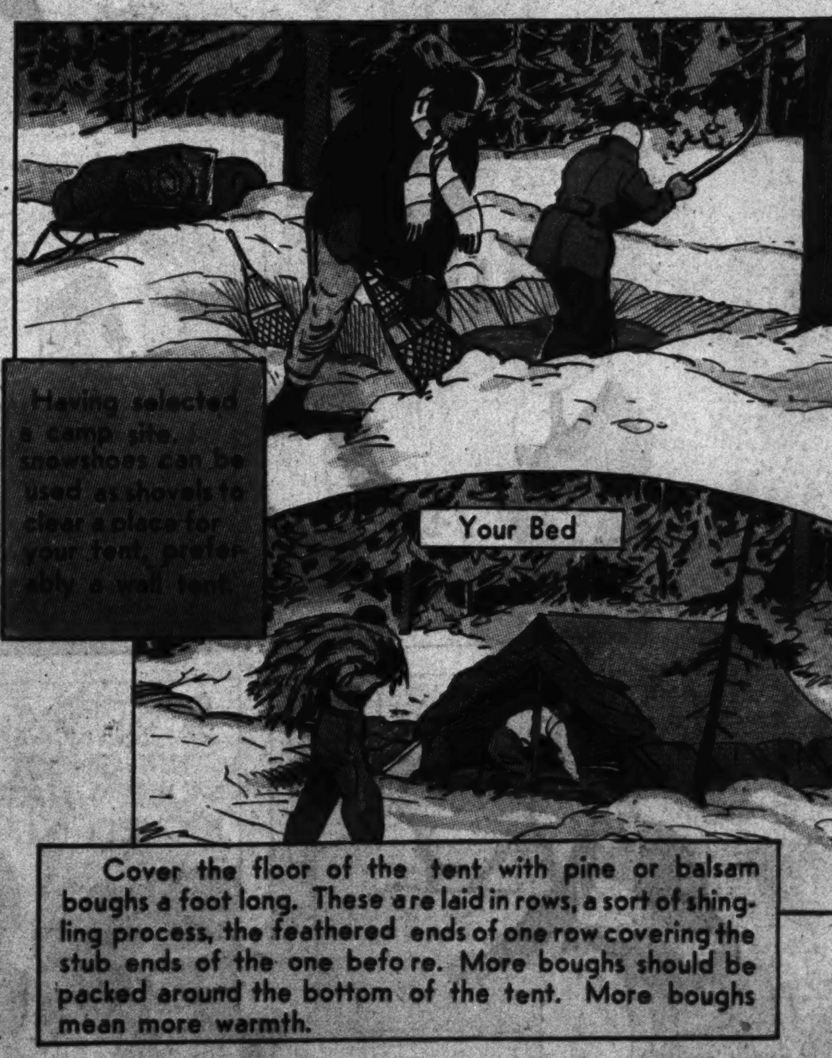
Making Camp



Having selected a camp site, snowshoes can be used as shovels to clear a place for your tent, preferably a wall tent.

Cover the floor of the tent with pine or balsam boughs a foot long. These are laid in rows, a sort of shingling process, the feathered ends of one row covering the stub ends of the one before. More boughs should be packed around the bottom of the tent. More boughs mean more warmth.

BLESS ME, SUZY. THIS NAPKIN'S SO DAZZLIN' WHITE I THOUGHT IT WAS NEW. DAVE'S LUCKY TO GET A GIRL LIKE YOU.
AT SUZY'S — A FEW WEEKS LATER

The TRUE EXPERIENCE of PAUL SHEA OF SPRINGFIELD, N.J.

THE WAY I LOOKED BEFORE
I began to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. I hated going anywhere, my face was so broken out."

PAUL NOW—PIMPLES GONE
—skin smooth and clear again. "Fleischmann's Yeast sure cleared my skin up fine," he says.

A fellow feels pretty low about having to go around when his face is all broken out with mean looking pimples.
I got so I hated to be seen.
That's why I'm mighty glad to tell others about what a swell pimple chaser Fleischmann's Yeast is. Every boy that wants to get rid of pimples ought to eat it.
Paul Shea

CLEARS UP ADOLESCENT PIMPLES

AFTER the start of adolescence—from about 13 to 25, or longer—important glands develop. This disturbs the entire system. The skin gets oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin and pimples appear.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast helps to clear up a pimply skin by clearing these skin irritants out of the blood. Then—pimples go! Eat 3 cakes a day—a cake about ½ hour before each meal—plain, or in a little water.

ROSES ARE RED

YOU HAVE BAD BREATH
SO PHOOEY FOR YOU!
P.S. See your dentist!
OH, MOTHER! WHY DO I GET VALENTINES LIKE THIS?
DON'T CRY, DEAR ...IT'S JUST SOME SILLY JOKE...
I DON'T KNOW. IT MAY BE . . . OH, MOTHER, NOBODY SEEMS TO LIKE ME ANYMORE!
WELL, WHY NOT VISIT DR. JENKINS, ANN, AND SHOW HIM THAT VALENTINE?
ANN, MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH. YOU SEE, LITTLE PIECES OF FOOD GET STUCK BETWEEN YOUR TEETH AND DECAY THERE WHEN YOUR TEETH AREN'T CLEANED PROPERLY. I ADVISE COLGATE DENTAL CREAM. ITS SPECIAL PENETRATING FOAM REMOVES THESE ODOR-BREEDING DEPOSITS.
MY! I'M GLAD I WENT TO THE DENTIST. COLGATE'S IS WONDERFUL. MY MOUTH NEVER FELT SO FRESH AND CLEAN BEFORE!
LATER - THANKS TO COLGATE'S MAY I CUT IN?
AW, GEE, ANN-- YOU'RE TOO POPULAR. A FELLOW CAN'T EVEN DANCE TWO STEPS WITH YOU THESE DAYS!
AND NO TOOTHPASTE EVER MADE MY TEETH AS BRIGHT AND CLEAN AS COLGATE'S!
AND REMEMBER- MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH!

76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath!

Read how Colgate Dental Cream protects you

TESTS among 2,152 men and women (of all ages and from all walks of life) prove that 76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath! Tests also prove that most bad breath comes from improperly cleaned teeth!

Ordinary cleansing methods, which merely polish the exposed surfaces of your teeth, fail to remove the decaying food deposits in hidden crevices between your teeth. And these deposits, tests prove, are the source of most bad breath, dull, dingy teeth, and much tooth decay.

But Colgate Dental Cream has a special penetrating foam which gets into every tiny crevice —emulsifying and washing away those food and acid deposits that cause bad breath.

At the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently yet thoroughly cleans and brightens enamel—makes your teeth sparkle—gives new brilliance to your smile.

So brush your teeth, gums, tongue with Colgate Dental Cream at least twice daily and have cleaner, brighter teeth—sweeter, purer breath!
